A progress report on the government’s Sporting Future strategy has been overshadowed by the omission of more than £300m in cuts to a healthy pupil programme.

While sports minister Tracey Crouch told Parliament there had been “good progress on a number of fronts” since the strategy was introduced, her latest report failed to detail changes to the Healthy Pupil Capital Programme.

The Sport and Recreation Alliance released a statement highlighting the issue. “The Childhood Obesity Strategy is an example of where, despite some progress, the physical activity recommendations are yet to come to fruition 18 months on from the publication of the strategy, and although the report highlights an additional £100m into the Healthy Pupil Capital Programme, it fails to reference that this is over £300m less than was originally announced,” it said.

“If we are to address the huge challenge of obesity it’s clear that government needs to further prioritise continued investment into physical activity and sport.”

The report highlights Sport England’s £530m investment in projects and the formation of the Sports Business Council. Crouch said: “There’s still more work to do. This year I will particularly focus on mental health in sport and encouraging the sector to continue to step up on safeguarding participants.”

Sister Act: Australia’s Johnson triplets-plus-one bring dance fitness brand TAPfit to UK

Four Australian sisters who represented their country at the World Dance Championships have announced plans to launch their dance-fitness brand in the UK.

Created by triplets Annie, Rachel and Fiona, and younger sister Katherine Johnson, TAPfit will hold its first instructor training days in England and Scotland next month.

“We’ve been watching the UK fitness market since our launch in Australia and are impressed with the dynamic landscape here,” said Katherine, a company director. “That said, we feel the time is right for a new dance-fitness brand and TAPfit is the natural progression from other programmes because you ‘become the beat’.”

Launched in Brisbane, Australia, three years ago, the programme’s unique selling point is its patented technology – specially engineered tap-dancing attachments, known as ‘Feet Beat’, which slip over running shoes to add rhythm to the full-body workout.

TAPfit already holds more than 300 classes every week across Europe, with more than 100 qualified coaches, but the sisters believe the UK is “set to become an extremely significant market for the brand” in 2018.

They have spent the last three years developing the programme alongside exercise, diet and physiological professionals. Instructor training days will take place in Glasgow and London in February and March.

Plans to tackle child health inequalities caused by school summer holidays have been welcomed by Adrian Packer, CEO of CORE Education Trust.

The Department for Education has announced a government programme to tackle ‘holiday hunger’ from 2019, while non-profit health organisation ukactive is launching a pilot with up to 50 schools this summer to reduce levels of physical inactivity among children during the holidays, as well as addressing learning loss, personal development and mental health in young people.

Packer, who is also a ukactive board member, said: “This is an important commitment from government which recognises the impact and challenges of summer holidays, especially for families from low-income backgrounds. “We look forward to working shoulder to shoulder with government and child health professionals this summer to support their plans for 2019 onwards to give young people a brighter future.

“This cannot be achieved by working in silos: we need a whole-community approach.”
David Beckham chooses Miami to launch MLS team

The former England captain had exercised an option in his contract with former side LA Galaxy to buy an expansion franchise in 2014. The team, which has yet to be named, will play at a new 25,000-seater stadium in the city’s Overton neighbourhood.

Fighting back the tears, Beckham told fans and media at a press conference in Florida: “I promised my son who’s here tonight that I wouldn’t get emotional but it’s going to be tough because this is something that has been a dream for many, many years.

“Bringing an MLS club to Miami has been a hell of a journey. I promise you the team that we bring into this league will be the best team.

“When I was awarded the team there was only one city for me and it was here.

“I was drawn to this city for the same reason that millions of people are: the diversity, the culture, the weather, the beaches, the people.

“It was very difficult at times when we said, ‘this dream isn’t going to happen’, but I don’t give up – nothing in my career has been easy.”

Beckham was referring to four years of disputes over the stadium site in southern Florida, with residents having opposed multiple locations.
A boutique health club exploring how lighting and design impact the effectiveness of your workout has opened in Beirut, Lebanon.

Health club brand U Energy commissioned local practice Rabih Geha Architects to design the 1,200sq m underground project as “a place to provide respite from the hectic nature of daily life” in the city.

Studio founder Rabih Geha said: “The result here is an edgy and dynamic, motivational setting conducive to a healthy, energetic and comfortable workout. “The gym is raw and industrial in style, allowing members to focus only on enhancing their wellbeing without the busy distractions of Beirut.

“If you can create an appealing space, people will go and enjoy it. Today, gyms have to cater not only to the body and mind but also engage our eyes and keep us coming back.

Chris Grant urges sports bodies to do more to identify and celebrate new role models from minority backgrounds

Sports stars from minority backgrounds hold the key to sporting success in the UK, according to Sported CEO Chris Grant.

Speaking at the Fit for the Future Convention in Loughborough, Grant spoke candidly about issues raised in January following the appointment of Phil Neville as England manager and also the death of the footballer Cyrille Regis.

He urged sports bodies and partners to do more to identify and promote trailblazers from black, Asian and ethnic minorities, as well as female players and coaches.

“Any encouragement to keep people returning is something to be celebrated”

“I’ve been looking for role models who are ‘non-traditional’ in terms of the parts of the country they come from”

“Any encouragement to keep people returning is something to be celebrated”

“I’ve been looking for role models who are ‘non-traditional’ in terms of the parts of the country they come from”

“This isn’t about Phil Neville, it’s about where are the role models?” asked Grant, who said he had been inspired by Regis, the third black footballer to play for England. “I’ve been in the process of looking for role models who are ‘non-traditional’ in terms of the parts of the country where they come from. “If you look at what’s happened in the NFL since the Rooney Rule was introduced in 2002, black coaches who’ve been appointed have outperformed the norm considerably. “If you look at the 12 European, Olympic and World Championship competitions in women’s football since 2000, 11 of those have been won by teams coached by women. “Organisations which have diversity outperform those which don’t, across industries.”
British architect Amanda Levete has won the 2018 AJ/AR Jane Drew Prize, which celebrates individuals who have raised the profile of women in architecture through their work.

Levete – who won the 1999 RIBA Stirling Prize for the Lord’s Media Centre, alongside her then-husband and business partner Jan Kaplický – is the founder of AL_A, a studio who have received acclaim for public projects such as Lisbon’s Museum of Art, Architecture and Technology; the V&A Museum’s Exhibition Road expansion; and the Central Embassy tower in Bangkok.

The prize is presented by the Women in Architecture Awards in association with the Architects Journal and the Architectural Review. Its mission is “to look to inspire change in the architectural profession by celebrating great design by women architects from around the world and promoting role models for young women in practice”.

Paul Finch, editorial director of the AJ and AR, said: “Amanda Levete is an architect whose practice has blossomed internationally, and whose independent voice has generated welcome debate and reform.”

BOUTIQUE

YourZone45 to ramp up expansion plans

Boutique fitness franchise YourZone45 is planning to open eight studios this year, starting with a flagship gym in Greenwich, London, in March.

Launched in 2004, YourZone45 launched its franchise operation in 2015 and has four studios in Bingley, Braintree, Colchester and Colliers Wood.

In addition to the Greenwich club, studios will also open in Woking and Southampton, while five other sites are yet to be confirmed.

“T’ll be confident that in the next 12 months we’ll achieve the targeted growth and have a number of established studios around the UK,” said YourZone45 founder Chris Elms.

Each franchise, which costs £70,000 to set up, is 2,000 to 3,000sq ft (186 to 279sq m) and holds between 45 and 60 classes per week.

The 45-minute boot-camp-style workouts focus on heart-rate technology training and are delivered by a fitness coach.

Members’ heart rate percentages are displayed on screens and the goal is to achieve 84 to 100 per cent of their maximum heart rate for at least 12 to 20 minutes so they continue to burn calories for up to 36 hours after working out.

RESEARCH

Disease timebomb to hit over-65s by 2035 – study

The number of older people diagnosed with four or more diseases will double within the next 20 years due to rising levels of obesity and a lack of physical activity.

Researchers at Newcastle University found there will be large growth in the number of people with multiple diseases, known as ‘multi-morbidity’.

By 2035, life expectancy is predicted to increase by 3.6 years for men and 2.9 years for women, however, researchers predict that two-thirds of that time will be spent living with four or more diseases.

Professor Carol Jagger said: “Much of the increase in diseases is a result of the growth in population aged over 85 years. More worryingly, adults aged 65 to 74 are more likely to have two or three diseases due to higher prevalence of obesity and physical inactivity.”

Bannatyne Group brings Speedflex to Scotland

The Bannatyne Group has introduced Speedflex to the fitness market in Scotland as it continues to roll-out studios across its portfolio.

The two studios follow those at Bannatyne’s in Darlington, Mansfield and Coulby Newham, with a further seven expected over the coming months.

“We strive to be innovative and deliver the latest industry concepts to our members,” said CEO Justin Musgrove.

“With the introduction of Speedflex we continue to add to the provisions rolled out across our clubs. “Speedflex enhances our ability to utilise the latest industry platforms, enabling us to deliver an enhanced member experience.”

Plans confirmed for £14.5m Bulmershe Leisure Centre

Plans have been revealed for a £14.5m leisure centre set to open in Woodley, near Reading, in 2020.

Wokingham Borough Council confirmed plans to build the new Bulmershe Leisure Centre, replacing an ageing centre built in the 1970s which has been deemed not fit for purpose, despite undergoing a £400,000 redevelopment in 2014.

Facilities will include a 25m, six-lane swimming pool, a teaching pool with movable floor, a 75-station health club, two group exercise studios and a sports hall.

A planning application is due to be submitted at the end of March and the council hopes final approval will be secured by the end of August, with construction work set to take about 18 months to complete.

A council spokesperson said: “The new leisure centre will benefit the local community, including young people, families and the elderly population.”

Mobile chat apps pose data risk to leisure centres – survey

Data security at health clubs and leisure centres could be at risk because staff are using unofficial channels such as Facebook and WhatsApp to communicate work-related issues, according to a new survey.

Interviews conducted by Our People with fitness sector workers, including duty managers, club bosses, head office staff, assistants and receptionists, found that more than two-thirds (69 per cent) of employees are using social media sites or chat apps to communicate with their team on work matters.

Boutique leaders to look at future trends

Fitness brands, startups and investors are set to debate the next phase of growth for the boutique sector, as Sweat returns for a second year next month.

Hosted by not-for-profit health organisation ukactive, Sweat 2018 will explore what it takes for boutique operators to stand out in an increasingly crowded market and how established operators can begin to upscale and expand.

“As this market matures, we want to support the sector in its next phase of growth by giving burgeoning operators the tools to reach their full potential in a globalised and highly competitive market, while ensuring the boutique boom represents a permanent shift in the market,” said Steven Ward, chief executive of ukactive.

Speakers will include Welltodo founder Lauren Armes and Equinox’s former director of group fitness, Emma Barry, with panelists from F45, Boomcycle and new venture Run Junkie.

Barry will open the morning session with a keynote analysing global trends, from the effects of globalisation and increased competition to exploring how to emulate worldwide success stories.

Sweat takes place at Studio Spaces, Wapping, London, on Thursday, 8 March.

Lanesborough and Bodyism create dual membership offer

Luxury private health club The Lanesborough Club & Spa has signed a partnership deal with ‘über-boutique’ gym Bodyism to create a dual membership offer.

New members joining either club will be given the option to acquire full membership at both clubs.

The deal is an extension of an existing partnership, which has seen Bodyism founder and trainer James Duigan lead fitness sessions at The Lanesborough, Knightsbridge.

Other facilities include a gym fitted with Keiser indoor cycles, K2 rowing machines, and a studio used for pilates, yoga and HIIT TRX.

Duigan said: “The dual membership will allow us to take care of our members from both sides of Hyde Park, helping them become the healthiest and happiest version of themselves.”

RUGBY

Rugby’s finest star in Virgin Active hub

England Rugby has teamed up with Virgin Active to create a training programme aimed at improving physical strength and mental wellbeing.

Devised by the Rugby Football Union’s (RFU) head of sport science and medicine, Mark Bennett, the ‘Fit for Rugby’ programme brings together the RFU’s expertise on exercises for rugby and Virgin Active’s knowledge of a holistic approach to fitness.

The initiative, which caters to all abilities, includes an online training hub featuring England Rugby’s men’s and women’s players.

Through the hub, Maro Itoje shows participants how to increase strength and explosive power and Rachael Burford offers advice on balance and conditioning.

“This training programme focuses on sequences of exercises to effectively and safely train you for the rugby, but it’s suitable for general fitness enthusiasts as well.”

Virgin Active head of product development James Trevorrow said: “This programme offers an opportunity to learn from England’s elite – the very best at achieving optimum physical and mental wellbeing.”

Half of community sports groups fear closure – survey

Community sports leaders continue to face a shortage of funding and support, according to findings from a new survey.

Research by sports charity Sported and TSB bank found that a quarter of people have seen their local group close down, with more than half facing the fear of closure if they cannot find professional support or funding. Almost three quarters (71 per cent) of club members said the leaders of their group are volunteers and 61 per cent are concerned about the lack of volunteers.

TSB announced a new partnership with the charity, under which local TSB branches will provide support in operational areas such as budgeting, marketing, social media and PR.

“Local sports groups are the hub of community life and the people who support them all share the same values,” said Paul Pester, CEO of TSB.

AQUATICS

Birmingham 2022 planning starts with aquatics centre

Designs for a world-class aquatics centre have kicked off the race to get Birmingham ready for the Commonwealth Games in 2022.

Existing sports facilities played a crucial role in Birmingham’s successful bid to host the competition, with Commonwealth Games Federation president Louise Martin saying the “vast majority of the Games venues are in place”.

However, a top aquatics centre is still missing and Smethwick, Sandwell, has been confirmed as the location for a proposed £60m facility.

Wellbeing classes offer guests ‘sea view’

Fish could be the secret ingredient for a better yoga, pilates or body balance class – if a new programme from Nuffield Health and the National Marine Aquarium proves a success.

Aquarium visitors will be able to experience monthly wellbeing events in front of aquariums and fish tanks to help improve their physical and mental health.

The group classes kicked off with a body balance class in front of the aquarium’s Eddystone Reef tank, led by personal trainers from Nuffield Health.

“People lead increasingly busy and stressful lives so public aquariums can help provide valuable calming and relaxing experiences,” said Josh McCarty, head of marketing at the aquarium.

“Combining meditative exercise with the aquarium environment for the Nuffield Health sessions is a great combination and we hope those taking part in the session will feel the restorative benefits.”

Research in 2015 by the National Marine Aquarium, in partnership with Plymouth University and the University of Exeter, found that people who spend time watching aquariums and fish tanks see improvements in their physical and mental wellbeing.

Roberts plans boutique gym at Langley

Entrepreneur Matt Roberts has announced plans to open his latest boutique gym alongside a new spa at luxury hotel The Langley, in Iver, Buckinghamshire.

Opening in the summer, the gym will offer hotel residents, day guests and members bespoke one-to-one training and nutrition consultations, as well as group classes.

High-intensity fitness retreats will make use of the estate’s grounds and the surrounding Langley Park, offering personal training followed by a sports massage and dinner with Roberts.

Walking, jogging and cycling trails will run through the estate, while yoga classes will take place in the boathouse on the edge of the lake.

The hotel will offer memberships designed for individuals, couples and families, as well as guests from overseas.

The venue also boasts a new spa which spans 1,600sq m (17,222sq ft) and will feature five treatment rooms and two thermal areas, one of which is designated female-only, including a vitality pool, sauna, steam room, hammam and heated relaxation loungers.

A VIP suite will be equipped with a private relaxation area, vitality pool, juniper sauna, amethyst steam room and hammam.

SUSTAINABILITY

Unesco to develop sustainability tool

Unesco has committed to improving tourism management at World Heritage sites by announcing the development of a new tool for sustainability issues.

An expert panel met at Unesco’s Paris headquarters from 15 to 16 January to discuss the creation of the new tourism and visitor management tool—a self-assessment process designed to help tourism stakeholders better manage World Heritage sites.

According to Unesco, the tool will allow them to rapidly and efficiently assess how well tourism is managed, using a set of sustainability indicators created by the panel.

By helping site managers establish a management baseline, the tool will support proactive management of tourism, with the aim of promoting tourism strategies, planning and management frameworks that protect heritage values, engage a broad set of stakeholders and empower local communities in and around World Heritage sites.

The tool is being developed with the support of Norway’s government.

A statement from Unesco said: “Our objective for these resources is to enable the growth and success of an entire community of World Heritage Properties.”

NEW LAUNCH

New Wellness Tourism Association launches

A new not-for-profit business has been created to be the voice of the wellness travel industry, and to create more networking, education and marketing opportunities.

Headed up by chair Andrew Gibson, Accor Hotels’ vice president of wellbeing, the Wellness Tourism Association (WTA) hopes to create a network for destination marketing organisations, hotels and resorts, tour operators and travel agencies with an interest in the growing wellness tourism industry.

“As an association, it’s crucial we work together to help define our industry, as well as to educate the public so they can recognise legitimate and credible wellness suppliers and operators,” said Gibson.

The WTA plans to collaborate with the Global Wellness Summit’s Wellness Tourism Initiative.

Andrew Gibson will chair the WTA

Rowing commits to heritage protection

The World Rowing Federation (FISA) has become the first global sports body to make a commitment to World Heritage, teaming with the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) to protect endangered sites.

Developed as part of FISA’s Clean Water partnership with WWF and the WWF’s global campaign to strengthen the protection of natural World Heritage sites, the partnership puts into action a policy on natural and mixed World Heritage sites, which can be affected negatively when large sporting events are held there.

“Unesco World Heritage sites are some of our planet’s most special places,” said Marco Lambertini, director general of WWF International.

“Unfortunately, many are under threat, including from sports events and sports-related infrastructure. In pledging to respect them, FISA is showing real leadership.

“Our favourite sports must not risk these irreplaceable areas and their outstanding universal value to people and nature.”

The new policy will assess the potential effect of events on such sites and their buffer zones.

“The World Rowing Federation will work with the WWF

Appleton named president of Museums Association

The Museums Association has named Maggie Appleton as its new president, with the RAF Museum CEO set to take up the role in April.

Appleton has more than 25 years of experience in the museums sector. She started her career working at the Royal Armouries, before spending 12 years working in Luton – six as director of museums for Luton Borough Council and latterly as the chief executive of Luton Culture. From there she was named CEO of the RAF Museum, a role she has held since January 2015. In 2012, she was given an MBE for services to museums and heritage and was named vice president of the association in February 2015.

“We face unprecedented challenges – it’s more important than ever the MA works with partners to lead with clarity, bravery and positivity,” she said.

Appleton also chaired Women Leaders in Museums
Safari park brings Early Man to life with Aardman team

West Midland Safari Park has announced a series of events to celebrate the release of the latest film from British studio Aardman.

With Early Man in cinemas across the UK, the attraction, in Bewdley, Worcestershire, has unveiled a special trail themed around the stop-motion animated adventure, a secret cave with exhibits from the film set and a schedule of model-making workshops.

Directed by Nick Park – who also worked with Aardman on Chicken Run and the Shaun the Sheep and Wallace & Gromit films – Early Man tells the story of prehistoric caveman Dug and his wild boar friend Hognob.

“We love to share our skills with others and we'll be running workshops at the safari park to give fans of the chance to see how we create our characters,” said David Sproxton, co-founder and executive chair of Aardman.

SimpsonHaugh’s restored concert hall opens in Antwerp

British architecture studio SimpsonHaugh has completed a renovation of the Queen Elisabeth Hall in Antwerp, Belgium.

The concert venue had its soft launch over a year ago – and has since picked up a nomination for Cultural Building of the Year – but has only just officially opened.

Serpentine Pavilion enters world stage in Beijing expansion

A major international agreement has been struck between Chinese retail giant WF Central and the Serpentine Galleries, which organises the long-running annual pavilion showcase in London’s Kensington Gardens.

The inaugural pavilion has been designed by Chinese firm JIAKUN Architects, and it is set to open in May on the lawns of The Green at WF Central – a 150,000sq m (1.6 million sq ft) hospitality hub in Wangfujing, Dongcheng District.

“Our design incorporates the forces of elasticity through a series of cables stretched between steel plates,” explained studio founder Liu Jiakun.

“What we ultimately want to present is a spatial installation that goes beyond mere function.”

A Holistic Approach to Gym Design

Designing the perfect gym involves a lot more than just installing great equipment. That's why working with a partner with a holistic approach like Pulse Fitness can help ensure no detail is overlooked.

The first thing to assess is the space. Consider things like the room shape, the availability of natural light, the overall ambiance you are trying to create and technical aspects like the location of the power supply.

Next, you can start working on all other aspects of the design; elements like lighting and flooring, coupled with things like wall décor, motivational text and signage can all help turn a generic space into a unique fitness environment.

A great example is the design at the Jesmond Sport Centre in Aberdeen has images of the Edinburgh marathon around the facility, but to make them feel more connected with the centre, we used their brand colour as a colour wash over the images and added the Sport Aberdeen logo.

Including a motto or bespoke tagline in the design can also help to set your gym apart, especially if it is part of a larger facility like a school, club or business. As an extension of the Northampton High School’s motto, the words, “be happy, be active, be here,” are featured on the gym walls.

Finally, colour can play a huge role in gym design. To help diversify the membership base of SGP Westfield, in partnership with the FA, we proposed some simple design changes to widen their appeal to a female demographic. We expanded the colour palette, included illustrative drawings and incorporated a wide range of fitness images, all while maintaining the existing established football brand. Complemented by modern, urban lighting, PT training boards and eye-catching signage, the result was a vibrant, modern aesthetic, equally appealing to both men and women. When done well, your gym design will no doubt attract and retain members for years to come.
The Pulse Group awarded contract with GX Fitness

The Pulse Group has recently been awarded a contract with Doncaster based club, GX Fitness, which in addition to a typical fitness suite includes an innovative group fitness studio themed around the US penitentiary system. Pulse has played an instrumental role in creating the GX Fitness brand and marketing the facility to the public as well as supplying a whole range of fitness equipment.

The gym will include a wide range of Pulse Fitness’s award-winning cardio, strength, functional and free weights equipment as well as an exciting group fitness offering.

The unique GX Fitness concept will include four different studios. Pulse has been integral in developing both the programming and the design aesthetic for each.

- The PEN: A High Intensity Training Area themed around the US penitentiary system.
- The RIDE: Pulse Fitness will be supplying and installing brand new indoor group cycle bikes for the indoor cycling area which will offer classes based upon intensity as well as virtual classes.
- The STUDIO: This space will offer more mainstream classes such as yoga, pilates and aerobics as well as virtual classes.
- The TRACK: Pulse Fitness has installed an AstroTurf sprint track facilitating agility training, bungee work, pushing/pulling of the sledge and floor exercises.

As part of the contract Pulse Solutions, will be providing a wide range of marketing support. Services include brand creation, marketing strategy, a full pre-sales campaign, social media campaign, website creation, inspirational wall art and signage. The team has also installed a brand-new access barrier system and its proven membership management software Exerp.

Sean Newton, Directorate of Place at Isle Of Wight Council says “We have always been thoroughly impressed by Pulse’s vast product portfolio, level of service and maintenance support; over the partnership we have seen a membership growth of 52% taking membership over 7,000. So, when the Medina Leisure Centre reached membership capacity following the initial upgrades, I had no hesitation to turn to the expertise of Pulse again”
Ben Frampton started working in the leisure industry in 2009, while at university. He now works as assistant park operations manager at Paultons Park.

What drew you to the leisure industry?

“This industry isn’t something I specifically wanted to get into until I started in it. At the time I was at college and needed some pocket money, so I started working as a ride operator at Paultons Park (Paultons), but as time went on and I progressed within the company, I developed a genuine interest in the industry. The leisure industry is something that constantly changes, with new and exciting developments, and I’m always looking forward to seeing what’s coming next.”

Tell us about your career

“I went to university to become a drama teacher, however, this changed when I began to progress at Paultons. While at university I was promoted to senior ride operator, which gave me a new-found passion for the industry. I spent the winter season in the French Alps, working as a holiday rep for a tour operator in a ski resort. I supported the resort manager with the day-to-day operation and guest experience. I returned to Paultons the following season and with my additional experience in tourism, I was successfully promoted to park operations team leader. This involved overseeing the safe and efficient operation of an assigned area of the park and allowed me to develop my experience managing large numbers of both guests and staff, and gain a greater insight to the visitor attraction sector. At the end of my seasonal employment I returned to the Alps as a resort manager, where I gained invaluable experience that led to the permanent role of assistant park operations manager at Paultons.”

What is your favourite part of your job?

“It’s very diverse, I get to work on new projects, like shows, events and experiences, and I spend a lot of time out in the park, supporting the operation and helping to ensure the delivery of the best guest experience. Our guests are at the forefront of everything we do and it is vital that our team are always set up with the right tools to deliver the best possible service and in turn allow them to develop professionally as individuals. While I’ve been at Paultons, we have been awarded the UK’s No.1 Theme Park twice by Trip Advisor – a huge accolade that recognises all our hard work.”
The future of wellness

Gottlieb Duttweiler Institute releases research report:
Wellness 2030 – The New Techniques of Happiness

Zurich-based think tank Gottlieb Duttweiler Institute (GDI) has released a new report, Wellness 2030 – The New Techniques of Happiness, which takes an in-depth look at today’s happiness providers.

The report was presented at a press conference held in New York by its research partner, the Global Wellness Institute (GWI).

“We were thrilled to partner with GDI on their Wellness 2030 report,” said Susie Ellis, chair and CEO of the GWI. “This research is crucial for analysing how the global ‘Silicon Valley’ will shake up the wellness space and create entirely new players and concepts that look a whole lot different to what we mean traditionally by ‘wellness’.

“Wellness 2030 investigates how new technologies and techniques of self-optimisation will transform the wellness market over the next 12 years.

“For instance, if humans have constantly tried to discover the key to happiness, digitalisation has expanded the technical range of these tools and offers up individual metrics for happiness.

“We’re on a quest to decode happiness: from the surge in Silicon Valley biohackers to the rise of ‘data selfies’ that will capture and project information about our inner emotional lives.”

This research is crucial for analysing how the global ‘Silicon Valley’ will shake up the wellness space.
The five technology trends that GDI presented that will shape the future wellness market are:

1. Humans and technology converge
   Digitalisation will enable lifestyles with dramatically more options and will influence our habits, needs and desires. We’re redefining ourselves: what does it mean to be human? We’re seeing the rise of a new symbiosis between humans and technology.

2. Biohacking: the shortcut to wellbeing
   Biohackers are a subculture driven by a pioneering spirit. They’re open to crossing disciplinary lines to make things possible; they want to liberate themselves from the limitations of nature, age and disease. Their credo: everyone is capable of developing their own self-healing and self-optimisation powers. Biohacking is already impacting the wellness industry.

3. Data selfies
   Smartphones have made the self-portrait a dominant form of communication. In the future, metrics on our inner lives will be added to these images of our outward appearances.
   Wearable tech has been collecting data on everything from our heart rates to the calories we burn – and soon far more data on our emotions and happiness will be captured. This will offer radically new and transparent insights into our total wellbeing and will have huge implications for the health and wellness industries.

4. Wellness is social
   In the 21st century, connecting with other people has taken on a new dimension: complex collaborations are now a part of our everyday lives. In the future, algorithms could take on the work of choosing the right partner or the perfect mindfulness coach. What’s more, artificial intelligence inside a new generation of smart assistants will increase the quality of the outcome.

5. Biofeedback replaces surveys and “likes”
   The technology for measuring emotions has made great strides. Apps are already attempting to track behavioural patterns and emotions. Which apps does this person use most frequently? How long does she sleep? This panoply of smartphone data will offer up very precise indications of a user’s mental and physical health.
A new deal aimed at improving coaching and safety standards in Oxygen Freejumping’s trampoline parks has been agreed with British Gymnastics and the operator.

The landmark deal is the first between a commercial trampoline chain and the National Governing Body for Gymnastics and Trampolining.

However, it will now work with Oxygen Freejumping to create a new lesson on safety basics, as well as providing recognised training for frontline staff.

“The popularity of gymnastics and trampolining continues to grow and we’re experiencing unprecedented demand from people wanting to take part,” said Dave Marshall, participation director at British Gymnastics. “This partnership will enable more children and young people to take their enjoyment of Oxygen’s trampoline park to the next level.”

British Gymnastics partners Oxygen Freejumping to improve trampolining safety and coaching

David Stalker is CEO of Oxygen Freejumping

CEO of Oxygen Freejumping David Stalker said: “Ultimately, we want to become one of the largest providers of accredited trampoline gymnastics in the UK – we’re closing in on that target and this is a huge step in the right direction.”

Under the deal, the operator will become an Official Delivery Partner of British Gymnastics, through the ‘Oxygen School of Trampolining’ which teaches gymnastics to thousands of children a month. An Oxygen Freejumping Introductory Award will be created for customers looking to take their first step into coached gymnastics or trampolining, focusing on the safety basics.

It will provide a link between ‘freejumping’ and Oxygen’s School of Trampolining, which teaches beginner, intermediate and advanced trampolining using the British Gymnastics Trampoline Proficiency Awards.
Small steps, longer lives

Dutch researchers prove the benefits of modest levels of physical activity in making the heart stronger

Elderly people must take part in low-intensity physical activity and avoid being sedentary to help reduce the risk of heart attacks and stroke, according to new findings from an 18-year study by Dutch researchers. Experts from Holland observed 24,502 patients from the UK and concluded that older adults who were moderately inactive had a 14 per cent reduced risk of cardiovascular events compared to those who were completely inactive.

Health service guidelines suggest that healthy adults should do at least 150 minutes a week of moderate intensity aerobic exercise or 75 minutes a week of vigorous exercise to reduce their risk of cardiovascular disease.

A broader array of public health programmes are needed to help elderly people engage in physical activity of any level.

adults but we wanted to know whether regular physical activity yields comparable cardiovascular health benefits in elderly people,” said Dr Sangeeta Lachman, lead author of the study and a cardiologist at the Academic Medical Centre in Amsterdam.

The study, published in the European Journal of Preventive Cardiology, looked at adults aged 39 to 79 years old, with participants recruited between 1993 and 1997 from general practices in Norfolk.

Patients were followed up until March 2015, through the monitoring of physical activity levels and the time to cardiovascular events.

Physical activity was categorised as active, moderately active, moderately inactive and inactive.

During follow-up studies over the course of 18 years, the researchers recorded a total of 5,240 cardiovascular disease events among participants.

Dr Lachman and her team’s analysis found any level of physical activity among the over-65s was better for their health than none at all.

“Our findings suggest even modest levels of physical activity are beneficial to heart health,” she said.

Modest levels of physical activity were defined as including activities such as walking, gardening and housework.

“Given our ageing population and the impact of cardiovascular disease on society, a broader array of public health programmes are needed to help elderly people engage in any physical activity of any level and avoid being completely sedentary,” Dr Lachman added.

Regional Course Tutors and Assessors

Location: Nationwide, United Kingdom
Closing date: 16th February 2018

We’re looking to appoint exercise and fitness tutors/assessors to join our dynamic and busy Training and Development Department.

We’ve experienced rapid growth over the past year, so we need to expand our teaching team to meet the demands of our business opportunities. You’ll be responsible for delivering practical courses and assessing learners against Awarding Organisation standards.

Course delivery is usually a combination of lecturing and practical teaching with 12-15 adult learners attending each course. We’re looking for a commitment of at least 2 courses/assessments per month which are delivered on weekends (Friday to Sunday).

These positions are offered on a zero hours contract basis with a comprehensive internal training programme. You’ll provide exceptional customer service and represent the Company in a professional manner at all times.

Essential requirements:
- Relevant industry qualifications (such as Level 3 Pilates, PT or Exercise Referral)
- A minimum of 2 years’ current instructing experience in the fitness industry
- A teaching qualification (such as PTTLS/AET or equivalent)
- An assessing qualification (A1 or equivalent) or be prepared to achieve this within 6 months of employment
- CIMSPA Practitioner level or Level 3 REPs status

Desirable requirements:
Working towards an internal quality assurance qualification would be desirable but not essential.

About our Company:
We’re an ISO 9001:2015 standard company and winners of UKactive’s Training Provider of the Year Award 2016 and 2017.

We’re a member of the Chartered Institute for the Management of Sport and Physical Activity (CIMSPA) and key influencers within the health and fitness industry.

Our constant focus is towards delivering the highest standards of training within the health and fitness industry and #raisingthebar.

Senior Health and Fitness Supervisor

Essex, United Kingdom  £24,183 - £27,198 per annum

Essex Sport provides a full range of sporting and physical activity facilities, classes and activities for students and staff at the University of Essex, as well as to the wider local community.

Recent investments in facilities include the new £12M Essex Sport Arena, a new covered 4-court tennis facility, a recent expansion of the Essex Sport Gym with a new functional training zone, and the addition of virtual classes to our fitness studios.

Duties of the Role

We are seeking an experienced fitness professional for an exciting opportunity as Health and Fitness Senior Supervisor.

The Essex Sport Gym offers 180 fitness stations, and features a number of distinct training zones designed to cater for a wide range of customers.

These include a new functional training zone, as well as four Olympic lifting platforms and a functional training rig, as well as four fitness studios, where we run a weekly programme of over 60 fitness and wellness classes, including our new virtual class programme.

Responsibilities will include assisting with the efficient and safe running of the sports centre and its facilities, implementing programmes of equipment replacement and equipment replacement and ensuring daily checks are carried out to ensure that the Essex Sport Gym and Activity Studios are safe to use.

You will also be required to lead staff in providing high levels of customer service along with positive interaction with members of the gym and assisting with converting enquiries into membership sales.

Skills and Qualifications required

The successful candidate will hold a relevant qualification in Sport / Recreation / Physical Education / Fitness and Health and personal training (minimum Level 2).

You will also have previous supervisory experience, excellent knowledge of the latest specification of gym equipment and a good understanding of health and safety procedures within a gym setting.

Having a proven track record of leading on sales and customer service within a commercial gym setting is essential, along with willingness to work a flexible shift pattern including evenings and weekends.

Due to the nature of the work, this appointment is subject to a criminal record check, known as a Disclosure.

At the University of Essex internationalism is central to who we are and what we do.

We are committed to being a cosmopolitan, internationally-oriented university that is welcoming to staff and students from all countries and a university where you can find the world in one place.
