Hotel deals between InterContinental Hotels Group and Expedia and booking.com broke competition law, according to the Office of Fair Trading (OFT).

The OFT has issued a Statement of Objections, which alleges that agreements had restricted the ability to discount the price of room-only accommodation. A formal probe was launched in 2010, with the activities designed to “increase barriers to entry and expansion” for other agents looking to gain market share.

London's legacy ‘already visible’

The London 2012 Games have had an immediate impact on the UK’s sports sector – from grassroot levels right up to elite sport.

Evidence suggests that sports clubs, swimming pools and leisure centres – as well as national governing bodies – have seen an increase in people asking for advice on how to get involved in organised sport.

Swimming, cycling and rowing clubs have all experienced increased interest due to Team GB securing medals, while less prominent sports – including archery – have also benefited from Olympic media coverage (To read more on the impact of cyclist Bradley Wiggins' heroics on British Cycling, turn to page 3.)

To support clubs and centres in capitalising on the increased interest, Sport England has launched its digital legacy service, ‘spogo’ (www.spogo.co.uk), in partnership with the Fitness Industry Association (FIA). The customer-facing service aims to make searching and finding physical activities as simple as other consumer-friendly online services.

Spogo is designed to make it easy for consumers to find the closest facility in which they can take part in a sport they have an interest in. The booking engine can be linked to a facility’s own membership management system, which will establish a seamless transaction process to drive new members.

Meanwhile, British Olympic Association chair, Lord Moynihan, has called for a comprehensive overhaul of the way sport is taught at UK school. Speaking at an Olympic press conference on 2 August, Lord Moynihan said that it is “wholly unacceptable” that half of Team GB’s gold medallists in the Olympics have been privately educated, calling it “one of the worst statistics in British sport”.

He said: “It’s wholly unacceptable that more than 50 per cent of our gold medallists in London come from the private sector. “It tells you that 40 per cent of all the medals came from seven per cent of the population (according to official figures, 7 per cent of people in the UK are privately educated).

“There is so much talent out there in the 93 per cent that should be identified and developed. That has got to be a priority for future sports policy. I have spoken about it many times and I will continue to speak about it until there is not breath left in me.”

Council defers Afan Lido decision

Neath Port Talbot Council (NPTC) has deferred a decision on the multi-million pound Afan Lido development, which will provide a new leisure complex for residents in Aberavon.

The former Afan Lido was destroyed by fire in late 2009 and under the current plans is to be replaced with an expansive complex designed by Holder Mathias Architects.

A report put before NPTC cabinet members on 25 July had called for the new facility to be built at the Hollywood Park site, rather than its former location on Aberavon Seafront.

Plans have also been altered to provide an eight-lane, 25m swimming pool – two more lanes than originally put forward – following calls from local campaigners.

Facilities will also include a teaching pool; a fitness suite with a free weights area; and a four-court sports hall, although proposed enterprise units are no longer set to form part of the new development.

However, a NPTC spokesperson said: “The cabinet has deferred a decision on proposals for the new Afan Lido to a Task and Finish Group of the relevant scrutiny committee.”

BASIS announces new GSA partnership

BASIS (the British Association for Sustainable Sport) has announced the launch of a strategic partnership with the Green Sport Alliance (GSA).

It follows a roundtable session led by the two at the Beyond Sport Summit – held in London on 23–25 July – bringing together 50 international sports practitioners.

Nearly 150 professional and collegiate sports facilities from more than 18 leagues will come together in a bid to reduce ecological impact and improve the performance of venues.

More details will be released in due course, with the respective boards to reconvene at the GSA Summit in Seattle, US, in September.

BASIS officially launched in October 2011 in order to help “educate, share best practice and integrate sustainability issues” across the UK-wide sports sector.

- The association has also announced that its 2012 conference will take place at Cheltenham Racecourse on 20 September.

British Cycling believes that the recent success of Bradley Wiggins – both in the Tour de France and the Olympic men’s time trial – is going to have a “big, galvanising effect” on the sport in the UK.

Last month (July), Wiggins became the first Briton to win the iconic French road race and followed it up with a gold medal in the Olympic Games to become Team GB’s most decorated athlete with seven medals now to his name.

One of the immediate results of Wiggins’ success in La Tour was London mayor Boris Johnson’s announcement that the city would bid for the UCI Track Cycling World Championships – to be held at the capital’s Olympic velodrome.

Meanwhile, Visa’s London 2012 Games Spend Tracker has reported a 5.1 per cent year-on-year increase in spending on bicycle shops, sales and services – “a traditionally flat sector” – in the aftermath of Wiggins’ Tour success.

• In addition to Wiggins’ success, fellow cyclist Sir Chris Hoy has equalled rower Sir Steve Redgrave’s record of five gold medals with victory in the team sprint event. Read more: http://lei.sr?a=C5O1q

Bristol Rovers Football Club (BRFC) has been given the green light to proceed with its new stadium on land next to the University of the West of England’s Frenchay campus.

The Arturus Architects-designed project was approved by South Gloucestershire Council at a Development Control (West) Committee meeting held on 19 July.

At the centre of the scheme is a 21,700-seat stadium to provide a new home for the club. Gleeds, Pegasus Planning Consultants and TPA were also involved.

BRFC chair Nick Higgs said: “For decades, the club has been searching for a suitable site to build a stadium. Numerous sites have been considered, but none have ultimately been proven to be viable.”

Swansea University’s Fairwood playing fields are to be transformed into a modern training facility under a new agreement with Swansea City Football Club (SCFC).

The Premier League club will lease the site from the university, with the site to be used as a venue for competitive games and training by the university’s own teams.

Facilities will include eight full-size pitches – two of which will be all-weather; a dedicated training pitch for SCFC’s squad; and medical/physiotherapy rooms. Details: http://lei.sr?a=h3k1F

Legal challenges ‘delay’ Oxford pool development

Oxford City Council (OCC) has announced the development of a new £9.2m swimming pool has been “significantly delayed” as a result of continuing legal challenges.

The competition-standard pool will be built at Blackbird Leys Leisure Centre and will provide a new replacement for “older and expensive” pools currently open at Temple Cowley and Blackbird Leys.

Willmott Dixon has already been chosen to build the FaulknerBrowns Architects-designed facility, which has been granted planning permission and is fully funded. Read more: http://lei.sr?a=I4n5E

Freedom Leisure completes Brighton energy schemes

Freedom Leisure has completed more than £134,000 of energy efficiency improvements at three facilities it operates in partnership with Brighton and Hove City Council.

The project started in April 2011 and has included the installation of modernised swimming pool systems, heating controls and eco-friendly lighting.

Prince Regent Swimming Complex, King Alfred Leisure Centre and Moulscoomb Community Leisure Centre benefited, with 1.6m KW of electricity set to be saved. Details: http://lei.sr?a=x4A3K

Council agrees £45,000 study into Eastleigh leisure centre

Eastleigh Borough Council (EBC) will carry out a £45,000 feasibility study into options for future improvements to the Hampshire town’s Fleming Park Leisure Centre.

In a recent meeting, EBC cabinet members acknowledged the role of the complex in promoting active lifestyles and approved – in principle – investment in its facilities.

A report put forward options for improvements including a refurbishment of the existing site at a cost of between £7m and £12m. Read more: http://lei.sr?a=o2y2w
FIA slams ‘diet first’ approach

David Stalker, CEO of Fitness Industry Association (FIA) has described claims that exercise plays no part in preventing obesity as “dangerous”.

Responding to a new report – Hunter-Gatherer Energetics and Human Obesity, which claims obesity is more due to over-eating rather sedentary lifestyles – Stalker warned of “over-simplifying the issue”.

“The relationship between exercise, diet and other lifestyle factors which have led to rising levels of obesity is a complex one,” said Stalker.

“I think it is overly simplistic and potentially dangerous to conclude from this research that exercise has no role to play.”

The new research involved academics from Tanzania, the UK and the US.

DC Leisure to deliver Sandwell complex

DC Leisure has been confirmed as Sandwell Council’s preferred bidder to design and build a new £11m leisure centre and swimming pool complex in West Bromwich.

The facility is currently scheduled to open in early 2014 and will be delivered by DC Leisure in conjunction with Pellikaan Construction.

Work is due to begin next year, subject to approval.

A 100-station fitness suite and dance studios will form part of the complex, along with a 25m pool, learner pool and a four-court sports hall.

The proposed complex will be located on the corner of Moor Street and Barton Street, with a planning application due to be submitted later this year. Work will start in early 2013.

Sandwell Council’s Steve Eling said: “DC Leisure is a major player in the industry with all the skills, knowledge and expertise to give Sandwell a state of the art pool complex.”

PM promises healthcare legacy

London 2012’s Olympic and Paralympic anti-doping facilities in Harlow, Essex, are to be transformed into a major new world-class resource for studying the impact of genetics and environmental factors on human metabolism.

The proposals have been welcomed by Prime Minister David Cameron, who said the new Phenome Centre – one of the first of its kind in the world – will ensure the UK becomes a world leader in healthcare and life sciences following the 2012 Games.

Cameron said: “This will take advantage of the extraordinary opportunities that lie in combining genetic data with the results of medical tests on tissues and blood.

It will allow us to understand the characteristics of disease and how these link into genes and our environment.”

Enfield leisure centre revamp completed

Fusion Lifestyle has unveiled the new-look Albany Leisure Centre in Enfield, London, after completing work on an eight-month redevelopment programme costing £2m.

The facility contains a large gym with more than 70 stations of Life Fitness equipment and a free weights area; two new exercise studios; an indoor group cycling studio. A 25m swimming pool with a separate learner pool and new changing areas are also among the facilities, as well as new café and an improved entrance and reception area.

Albany Leisure Centre is one of more than 60 facilities across London and the south east run by Fusion Lifestyle, with the project part of a wider investment in Enfield provision.

Stoke Mandeville plans £50,000 fitness investment

Buckinghamshire’s Stoke Mandeville Stadium – the national centre for disability sport and home of the Paralympic movement – is to invest £50,000 in expanding its fitness offer.

The installation of new equipment will take place on 17 August and will see the facility offer an additional 22 pieces of plate loaded equipment. The gym will reopen on 18 August.

Star Trac is supplying the equipment, while Matrix will provide Livestrong-branded bicycles and crank cycles.

Leisure safety advice in the spotlight

The Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents (RoSPA) will run a free clinic at LIW 2012. RoSPA’s approach to leisure safety is that it should be “as safe as necessary, not as safe as possible”.

On 18 September there will be a presentation titled As Safe as Necessary, outlining RoSPA’s approach to leisure, using case studies to demonstrate how to strike the right balance when dealing with demands. David Walker, RoSPA’s leisure safety manager will highlight key aspects.

On 19 September, Allison Spears, HM inspector of health and safety at the HSE, will present a seminar titled Health and Safety in Swimming Pools on why the guidance is being updated and what it should achieve for the sector.

SportsArtFitness UK - The Green System

Flying the flag for a green approach in fitness facilities, SportsArt Fitness will be showcasing their New Green System which turns human energy into usable power.

The SportsArt ‘Green System’ uses a “pod” of fitness products attached to an inverter that harnesses human-generated power from exercisers and feeds this back into the power grid as usable energy. This is claimed to be the first “plug and play” solution of its kind for health club owners.

Introducing Balanceability at LIW 2012

The UK’s only accredited ‘learn to cycle’ programme for children aged 2½-6 will be introduced to the leisure industry at LIW 2012. It’s being rapidly rolled out following support from Olympic cyclist Chris Boardman MBE and contract wins with Bourne Leisure and Pendle Leisure Trust.

The programme is a structured self-taught course available to schools, leisure centres and independent trainers. It combines unique ergonomic balance bikes with a schedule of activity that builds confidence, spatial awareness and skills.

Team GB favourites to headline new live stage

LIW Live has been launched as a platform for exhibitors to display the best of their services on a live stage right in the middle of the show floor.

Some of the UK’s leading Olympic faces will make an appearance, taking part in q&a sessions on LIW Live. Already lined up for this programme are 2012 medal hope Greg Searle and badminton ace Gail Emms, both attending with Precor, and the fantastic three time World Champion Beth Tweddle MBE, founder of exhibiting company Total Gymnastics who will be showcasing their new programme, Gym Stars. Also taking part will be the cast of The Apprentice 2012, attending with contestant Stephen Brady and his new fitness company mysuccesscoach.com.

The Biggest Loser winner Kevin McLernon will accompany Concept2 with plans to outline ways in which fitness providers can attract completely disengaged participants to their facilities. Swimwear brand Zoggs will also strut their stuff on the catwalk showcasing their newest ranges.

Outdoor demo area/zip wire

Interactive family attractions specialist Innovative Leisure are set to supply the central feature of the Play & Attractions section at LIW 2012. Among the products being shown by the Leicester based company will be a fully operational SkyTrail High Ropes course, in addition to a Climbing Wall and, for the first time at the show, a Mobile Zip Line leading to the outdoor section of the show where Innovative Leisure will once again be operating an example of its Water Wars water balloon game.

POTENTIAL SAVINGS OF UP TO 40%!
Teamwork needed for GB tourism

KURT JANSON
is policy director of Tourism Alliance

With the London 2012 Olympics now upon us, there is significant interest in our ability to host visitors from around the world and stage a memorable major international event.

Early subjects for scrutiny have been the immigration queues at Heathrow and the less than impressive performance of G4S in providing security. The concern being that any poor performance will be picked up by the estimated 20,000 international journalists attending the Games, thus adversely impacting upon the expected £2bn tourism legacy by dissuading people to visit the UK in future. This prospect is particularly worrying when the government has spent £27m on the "Britain is Great" campaign.

While all is being done to maximise the benefits to the UK of hosting the Games within some government departments, there is a lack of joined-up thinking across Whitehall. For example, if you are one of the burgeoning middle-class watching the Games in China (there are more than 1 million millionaires in China now and there will be 2.5 million by 2020) and think to yourself, "that looks like a country I'd like to visit", you face a number of problems.

First, the UK visa process continues to think all Chinese are economic refugees and treats you are such – something rather galling considering the relative economic performance of the two countries.

Then you have to pay more for a visa for the UK than you would pay for one to visit all the other countries in Europe combined. You then go to your travel agent and he tells you that the UK government has decided to charge your family £324 for top of the £296 you’ve just paid for visas.

At this stage, the agent also explains that the reason that the package you are getting is doing compared with other Games, and what good news there is for potential visitors. "It is important to emphasise how well London is doing compared with other Games, and what good news there is for potential visitors." Read more: http://lei.sr?a=H7Eaj

European funding boost for Burren tourism initiative

The European Commission has approved funding towards a €2.2m (£1.7m) project to further integrate tourism and the natural heritage of the Burren on Ireland’s west coast.

Clare County Council is leading the programme, which is one of more than 200 to receive support through LIFE+ – the European Union’s environment funding programme.

The Burren project will help ensure local tourism development complements the conservation of biodiversity among others. Read more: http://lei.sr?a=f7z2H

UK sector ‘ready’ for London 2012 Games

The UK industry is “ready” to ensure London 2012 is the “best ever” Games for both domestic and overseas visitors, according to Tourism Alliance chair Michael Hirst.

Hirst made the comments ahead of the first Olympic event at Cardiff’s Millennium Stadium on 25 July – the women’s football match between Team GB and New Zealand.

It is thought the sector could benefit by around £2bn as a result of the Olympic and Paralympic Games, with overseas visitor numbers already showing a 5 per cent rise.

London 2012 also gives the UK an important opportunity to market itself as a destination to tourists from emerging markets such as China, Brazil, Russia and India.

London 2012 is a key opportunity to market itself to emerging markets

TOURISM

London’s ‘performance’ praised

London’s Olympic tourism performance has been labelled “outstanding” by the European Tour Operators Association (ETOA).

The organisation underlined six areas in which the capital is outperforming some of the Games’ previous host cities and delivering benefits for potential visitors.

According to ETOA, more than 60,000 foreign tourists are expected to stay in London hotels per night during the Games – up from 27,000 in Beijing and around 25,000 in Sydney.

London 2012 organisers are welcoming more members of the Olympic Family than previous Games, with half of the expected foreign visitors expected to come from this group. Meanwhile, accommodation remains available across London – offering rates at or below last year’s prices – and ETOA believes the city has space for yet more visitors.

ETOA executive director Tom Jenkins said: "It is important to emphasise how well London is doing compared with other Games, and what good news there is for potential visitors.” Read more: http://lei.sr?a=H7Eaj

London 2012 is a key opportunity to market itself to emerging markets
Lifehouse Spa and Hotel in Thorpe-le-Soken, Essex, UK has announced it has entered into a new partnership with international spa products and design company, ESPA.

It is one of the first major products to be undertaken at the spa and hotel following its rescue from administration earlier this year and represents a six-figure investment.

ESPA teamed up with Lifehouse as part of its year-long bid to secure partnerships with cultural institutions and experiential brands - which includes London’s Serpentine Gallery.

Spa facilities – including 35 treatment rooms and a thermal area – remain unchanged, but it has been re-equipped to reflect ESPA’s input and a retail area is also available.

Thorpe Hall Leisure, a company owned by Donald Emslie and Peter Murphy, purchased the Lifehouse Spa and Hotel out of the administration of Tangram Leisure earlier this year. Emslie and Murphy have assumed overall responsibility for the spa and hotel, while Brian Hunter is operations director. Stephen Carter has been named non-executive director. Wahanda launches new online platform

Health and beauty marketplace Wahanda has introduced Wahanda Connect – an online booking system connecting businesses with customers.

The platform provides an end-to-end marketing solution which enables spa, salon, wellbeing, fitness and beauty professionals to get listed and sell to the end customer via Wahanda’s network.

Firms who sign up to the service will receive access to an appointment system, providing a suite of tools which include the ability to sell on a number of platforms - such as Wahanda, and the supplier’s own website or Facebook page.

A free scheduling tool and booking microsite, appointment confirmations and SMS reminders are also included in the service.

The price point has been set at £30 per month and the booking data supplied by Wahanda Connect can be updated by operators to avoid double-booking and administrative errors.

HLF support for four UK museums

The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) has invested £15.9m in four major UK museum development projects – one in Dorset and three in London.

A £4.65m funding award – the largest of the four – has been handed to the Design Museum towards its move to the Commonwealth Institute building in Kensington.

John Pawson has redesigned the Grade II*-listed property, which will see the museum move into a cultural quarter that already includes sites such as the V&A.

The V&A itself has also secured a HLF grant, with investment worth £4.3m going towards a restoration of the Europe 1600-1800 galleries back to their original Victorian design. Elsewhere, Imperial War Museum London secured £4.5m towards its new First World War Galleries.

Shannon Heritage to run Malahide Castle

Shannon Heritage has been appointed to operate Malahide Castle and Gardens in County Dublin, Ireland – its first move outside the Shannon area.

It follows a deal between the operator and Malahide Castle and Gardens – formed by Fingal County Council to oversee a €10.5m (£8.2m) investment in the attraction.

Shannon Heritage is set to operate the redeveloped castle – including a new museum and interpretation area – and a visitor centre in the old courtyard. The new and upgraded facilities will open in September.

John Ruddie, chief executive of Shannon Heritage, said: “The council is doing a superb job in the redevelopment of the castle and we look forward to building on this work.”

It is Wyndham's first UK hotel outside London under its flagship brand

£60m golf resort for Scotland

Wyndham Hotel Group is to operate a new hotel as part of a planned £60m golf resort development near Dundee under an agreement with MAP Property and Leisure Developments (Mappld).

The 187-bedroom hotel – Wyndham Grand The Angus – will be the first in Scotland to open under the group’s flagship Wyndham Hotels and Resorts brand.

Designed by Archial and due to open in 2015, the hotel will also incorporate 10 two-bedroom lodges and will complement an 18-hole championship golf course which has been designed by 2011 Open champion Darren Clarke.

Hotel facilities will include a luxury spa with eight treatment rooms, a 20m infinity pool and a whirlpool, while a fully-equipped fitness suite and two dance studios are also planned.

Mappld has now invested fully in the project, which will also boast a golf club, an academy and private residences. Plans are being finalised with a view to starting work next year.

The development will be located adjacent to the Forbes of Kingennie Country Resort.

iven the headlines which now appear on an almost daily basis, one might think that honesty in business, especially for those involved in financial services, is a quaint notion which harks back to a bygone era.

Too often one hears the callow reflection that if the ‘rules’ allow for an activity or certain course of action to be followed, then it must be acceptable. The truth, of course, is that rules and regulations are rarely ‘water-tight’, and the rapid advances of technology often far outpace the framework of any legislation leaving an inventive mind plenty of scope to ‘interpret’ the guidelines. As one hospitality manager said recently (in relation to the continuing tales of less than ethical behaviour on the part of certain bankers), ‘it is not what they could do, it is what they should do that really counts’.

The key challenge in this current climate is for leaders to demonstrate that honesty is the best policy. Sadly, we have witnessed a woeful lack of observance of this principle, both in business and in politics. This has led to a lack of confidence in the ability of many businesses to conduct their affairs for the greater good, not only of their shareholders, but also of society. In politics, various scandals – personal and collective – unveiled by those who govern us, have also led to an up swell of apathy and cynicism among the population vis-à-vis the political elite.

At a time when the country requires decisive and honest leaders to move us out of recession, the country appears to remarkably benefit of any real talent. In a recent issue of Management Today, former Lloyds TSB CEO Sir Peter Ellwood said: “Arrogance, built on a lack of self-knowledge, is a disease that has brought down many once fine companies”. For him, the overriding leadership quality is that of integrity.

This means not only engaging with people in an appropriate and honest manner, but also making sure that decision-making is about doing what is known to be right, even if the consequences might be adverse. Put simply, Sir Peter stresses that, “nothing is more important than integrity”. We ignore this piece of advice at our peril.

2012 RIBA Stirling Prize shortlist revealed

London’s "seemingly simple, yet highly innovative" Olympic Stadium has been named as one of six buildings across the UK shortlisted for the 2012 RIBA Stirling Prize.

The stadium – currently the centrepiece of the Olympic and Paralympic Games – was designed by Populous and was completed in March 2011.

It forms part of a shortlist that also includes Belfast’s Lyric Theatre and Hepworth Wakefield in West Yorkshire and has already picked up a RIBA Award this year.

Dublin, Ireland-based O’Donnell + Tuomey were the firm responsible for the “crafted and careful reincarnation” of the theatre on a suburban site in the heart of the Northern Ireland capital.

Meanwhile, David Chipperfield Architects oversaw the design of the “stunningly original” contemporary art attraction in Wakefield. Details: http://lei.sr?a=x8N8P

Olympic Park proposals submitted

Plans for the new South Plaza within the post-Games Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park have been submitted by the London Legacy Development Corporation (LLDC).

The landscaped public realm at the heart of the South Park has been designed to establish a major new entertainment and activity hub for Londoners and visitors.

James Corner Field Operations – the firm behind New York’s High Line, US – have drawn up designs for the South Plaza, which will feature a 12m (39ft)-wide tree-lined promenade.

The site is framed by the Aquatics Centre, the Olympic Stadium and the ArcelorMittal Orbit viewing tower attraction, with plans also including a series of outdoor “rooms”.

A park hub next to the ArcelorMittal Orbit will feature a café, a box office and a rooftop pavilion overlooking the park. It is hoped the South Park will open in spring 2014.

RJ McLeod awarded Helix public realm contract

RJ McLeod has been awarded the public realm construction contract worth £8.5m as part of the £41m Helix regeneration project between Falkirk and Grangemouth in Scotland.

The public realm elements include the revitalisation of 100 acres (40 hectares) of vacant land into an innovative ‘people park’ and the creation of a canal hub with visitor facilities.

Andy Scott’s Kelpies – two 30m (98ft)-high stainless steel-plated horses’ heads – are to form part of the canal hub.

Management and Operation of Cambridge City Council’s Leisure Facilities

Cambridge City Council is seeking Expressions of Interest (EOI) from suitable leisure management contractors, including existing non-profit distributing organisations and private sector operators, to enter into a contract to manage, develop and operate the Council’s sports and leisure centres in line with the Council’s strategic objectives for leisure. The Council is seeking innovative solutions to deliver key objectives, to improve access to sport and leisure across the Council’s demographic, to reduce utility consumption and carbon emissions, along with an improved revenue position and other potential investment opportunities.

The facilities that are to be included in the scope of this procurement are:
- Abbey Leisure Complex
- Cambridge Parkside Pools
- Kings Hedges Learner Pool
- Cherry Hinton Village Centre
- Jesus Green Outdoor Lido
- 6 Paddling Pools

The Contract will be for a term of 7 years, and will include provision for a further potential extension of another three years. The proposed date for the decision to award the contract is May 2013, with the service to commence in October 2013.

In order to be included on the Council’s select list to be invited to tender, potential bidders must complete a Pre-Qualification Questionnaire and demonstrate a proven successful track record including delivering innovative partnerships in a variety of areas within a leisure environment. The successful contractor will then be selected through a formal tender process.

Interested organisations can request a pre-qualification questionnaire from: Kevin Franklin, Associate Director, Strategic Leisure, The Whitehouse, Greenalls Avenue, Warrington, Cheshire, WA4 6HL.
Telephone: 01398 361510 Email: kfranklin1@btinternet.com

The closing date for the return of completed questionnaires is 7th September 2012. It is anticipated that invitations to tender will be issued at the beginning of November 2012.

Options Appraisal Tender Opportunity

Eastleigh Borough Council is inviting suitably qualified consultants to tender for an options appraisal for our prestigious leisure facility at Fleming Park, Eastleigh whilst also considering future uses of the remaining Fleming Park campus.

The consulting brief and contact details can be found at www.eastleigh.gov.uk/FPARKtender

Closing date: Tuesday 4th September 2012.
Visitor Attraction Opportunity
Durham City Centre

Durham County Council is seeking initial Expressions of Interest from companies that would be interested in developing or operating a new family-based visitor attraction at a prime site in Durham City centre.

This is a unique opportunity for a visitor attraction developer or operator to gain a presence in the historic city of Durham. Building on Durham’s international status as a leading heritage tourism destination, the Council is keen to enhance the city’s visitor ‘offer’ further with a new visitor attraction to help us take Durham into the Premier League of UK Destinations. The Council is looking for an attraction that will provide visitors with an exciting and entertaining ‘experience’, particularly for families and younger people. The visitor economy currently contributes more than £191m to the local economy and brings 4.1m visitors to Durham each year.

In particular, the Council wishes to understand if there is any interest in a highly visible building it owns in the city centre. If a sufficiently compelling and viable proposition comes forward - via this ‘market testing’ exercise - the Council can make this building available to a third party for ‘fitting out’ and operating as a new visitor attraction. The site is attractive as it is adjacent to Durham’s main shopping area, and is within a short walk of both the Cathedral and the Castle.

If you have a visitor attraction brand / proposition – which you think would be ideal for Durham – the Council would like to hear from you, including ideas on how the proposition would be funded, developed, and operated.

Should you be interested, please respond - via email - to: rob.bailey@fivelinesconsulting.co.uk

Please provide background details on your company and any initial thoughts on the type of attraction you could potentially bring to Durham.

Further information will be provided to those companies that express an initial interest. There will also be an opportunity to discuss the project further with representatives of the Council.

Please submit an Expression of Interest by 12 noon on Friday 21 September 2012.
Approval for Tourism and Culture Studio

A specialist school offering training for young people looking for a career in hospitality and tourism is to open in Liverpool after the proposals received the green light.

The Department for Education officially approved plans for the Tourism and Culture Studio School, which will be sponsored by Liverpool Community College (LCC).

Due to open in September 2013, the venue will provide project-based learning in partnership with traditional qualifications and work experience in the sectors.

It is expected the school will cater for 300 students aged between 14- and 19-years-old, with mainstream qualifications including GCSE English, Maths and Science.

Students will be able to learn entrepreneurial and life skills through the CREATE framework – including training and work experience.

Premier Training opens new venues

Premier Training International (PTI) has announced that it is to launch three new venues in Birmingham, with courses to begin on 3 September.

The new Birmingham Central site will be based at Stirchley Fitness First, with Birmingham North located on Shady Lane, Great Barr. They will join Birmingham South in Solihull.

All three will offer a range of courses designed for fitness professionals – including the Diploma in Fitness Instructing and Personal Training.

PTI area development manager Paula Priest said: “Birmingham is a huge area, and has many aspiring fitness professionals looking to take fitness qualifications and courses without having to travel across the city to do so.”

• The training provider has also announced plans to open a new venue at David Lloyd Knowsley, which will replace its previous Liverpool location at the David Lloyd Speke.

PTI area development manager Kayley Tobias said: “The demand for health and fitness courses in Liverpool has grown consistently in the last decade.”

Head of Service - Commercial Development / Sport and Leisure

SALARY: Up to £43,000 per annum + Essential Car User Provision

We are looking to recruit a Head of Service – to lead on the further commercial development of the Wigan Leisure and Culture Trust’s (WLCT) sport and leisure business.

This individual will bring their astute business knowledge and strong commercial focus of the leisure industry to this uniquely challenging role. We are committed to improving and growing our facilities and services across the areas we operate: in the North West of England, North Yorkshire and the West Midlands.

In this newly created post, you’ll take us even further, by developing sound strategies to drive future success both within the current areas of our operation but also through the strategic development and growth of our business and client base.

Responsible to the Executive Director (Business Development), we are looking for someone who can demonstrate significant leadership experience within a similar operational/consulting organisation from within the Sport and Leisure sector.

You must be able to formulate, develop and implement relevant development and investment strategies along with the evaluation of opportunities for successful expansion of the business. This will include identifying opportunities for the submission of successful ITT bids.

With responsibility for a development team, you must be a skilled leader who can enthuse and inspire. You will also be a switched-on commercial thinker, able to immediately influence the commercial performance and development of our organisation.

It is essential that you are either educated to degree level or have an NVQ 4 and/or hold a professional qualification relevant to the area of service or equivalent by demonstrable competence

Benefits include, pension scheme, discounted membership and career development opportunities

This is a rewarding and exciting role with an employer that aspires to be an employer of choice.

‘Social ping pong club’ to launch

Bounce, a social club mixing a late-night setting with table tennis, is to open in central London later this year.

The £2.5m venue – designed by Russell Sage – has been built on site where the game of table tennis was originally invented by John Jaques III.

The 12,500sq ft (1,161sq m) space will feature a raised restaurant seating up to 130, and overlooking the playing area with 17 table tennis tables.

A 40ft (12m) bar around the playing area also forms part of the club, which is the brainchild of entrepreneur and table tennis player Dov Penzik and the co-founder of All Star Lanes, Adam Breeden.

The duo teamed up with Joe Jaques - grandson of John Jaques III, to bring the concept to life. Joe, who continues to run the family firm, is a partner in the venture supplying the club with its oak table tennis tables.

The new concept will combine table tennis with an hospitality element.

Novus Leisure acquired in management buy out

Private equity firms LGV Capital and Hutton Collins Partners have backed the management buy out of Novus Leisure – operator of the Balls Brothers and Tiger Tiger brands.

The pair have invested in Novus Leisure in a deal worth £100m, which will see existing non-executive chair John Kelly and CEO Steve Richards remain with the company.

LGV and Hutton Collins will support an expansion of Novus’ London portfolio, as well as entering cities such as Bristol and Leeds.

MPs call for gambling laws overhaul

The Commons Culture, Media and Sport Committee has called for the reduction in centralised gambling regulation, with more power to be handed to local authorities.

It follows an examination of the Gambling Act 2005, which the committee’s report has said “resulted in numerous inconsistencies and is not sufficiently evidence based”.

High street betting shops and casinos are currently allowed to house up to four B2 gambling machines – offering stakes up to £100 and prizes worth up to £500.

However, the report revealed casinos should be allowed to house 20 B2-type machines and said limiting the number in betting shops has led to “clusters” in some high streets.

Committee chair John Whittingdale said: “The reluctantly permissive tone of legislation over the last 50 years now looks outdated.

“Our general approach in this report has therefore been to support liberalisation of rules and delegation of decisions to those closest to the communities that will be affected.”
