Eleven parks across the UK are set to receive a combined £23m in funding from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) and Big Lottery Fund (BLF) as part of a nationwide restoration project. One notable project that has received funding is Fleetwood’s Memorial Park, which has secured a £2.4m investment to carry out a comprehensive restoration of the Grade II listed park.

Xercise4Less to open budget club at Tesco store

Independent budget gym chain Xercise4Less has secured a deal with supermarket giant Tesco to open a club at the Tesco Extra store in Stockton-on-Tees.

The 31,910sq ft (2,964sq m) club will have more than 300 exercise stations supplied by Matrix and is the first of a string of Xercise4Less clubs planned for Tesco stores.

Equipment at the Stockton club will be ‘zoned’ for different activities such as cardio, weights, a combat zone, a large ladies only gym with a wide selection of female friendly weights, and a dedicated personal training zone.

Monthly memberships will be offered from £9.99 and members will have 40 free classes to choose from each week, ranging from Boxercise and TRX to Circuits, Pilates and Zumba. An indoor cycling studio will incorporate the virtual cycling system MyRide, which allows participants to experience cycling tracks from around the world.

Xercise4Less managing director Jon Wright said: “We’re excited to be partnering with Tesco on this new format, as this helps us further extend our reach, and get closer to people who really need our services.

“By making fitness accessible to more people we hope to have a positive impact on the region as a whole and really add value to the Tesco shopping experience.

“We realise that members use our facilities for lots of different reasons.

“For us it’s all about offering members flexibility, and taking away as many barriers as possible to help people find time and fit exercise into their everyday lives.”

The Tesco deal is part of the company’s ambitious expansion plans. Earlier this year Xercise4Less announced a target of opening another 100 clubs in the next three years.

£27m Stonehenge project underway

A £27m project, part financed by the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF), has started with the closure of the road running alongside Stonehenge.

A section of the A344, which is directly next to the stones, will now be dug up and grassed over. Once the landscaping work is completed in June 2014, visitors will be able to approach and view the monument from Avenue, which was the intended approach by Stonehenge’s prehistoric builders according to experts.

The new Stonehenge visitor centre, located 1.5m (2.4km) away from Stonehenge, is set to open in December. The remaining section of road between Airman’s Corner and Byway 12 will become the route of a new shuttle service to and from the Stones. The HLF has contributed £10m towards the project with the remainder of funding coming from commercial income as well as private donations.

The hosting of major sporting events is becoming a global growth market, but UK national governing bodies of sport are thinking twice about bidding due to the financial risks attached to the process.

A report by the Sport and Recreation Alliance (SRA) shows that 67 per cent of the UK’s NGBs see the risk of investing into the - often costly - bidding process as the main obstacle to launching a bid. Bidding for major events has become increasingly competitive, as hosting an event is often seen as providing three benefits; a financial boost for organisers, increasing a sport’s profile and improving facility infrastructure.

For the report, SRA anonymously asked the chairs and chief execs of the biggest sport governing bodies in the UK about their experiences of bidding for major events.

Half of all respondents also said that the government - both at central and local level - was not doing enough to support bids. Andy Reed, SRA chair, said: “Our research has shown that the financial risk of holding major events is holding some governing bodies back.” Details: http://lei.sr?a=k7gqy

Experts have recommended that PE should be give the same status as maths, English, science, and Welsh in schools to help tackle the obesity problem in Wales. Current core subjects in Welsh schools don’t include PE, which is categorised as a foundation subject.

Out of all children and young people in Wales, more than one-third are either overweight or obese, costing the Welsh NHS more than £700m a year.

A group chaired by Paralympic gold medalist, Baroness Tanni Grey-Thompson says if that step was taken, it would be the first country in the world to make the move. The elevation of PE to a core part of the curriculum would mean more time devoted to the subject in addition to teachers being required to be competent to deliver the subject on completion of their training. Specialist teachers would need to work with schools to ensure high-quality provision of PE and in addition standards in physical education would be rigorously reviewed by both educational consortia and by schools inspectorate Estyn. The recent announcement that funding for VisitEngland would not be cut as a result of the Government’s spending review and that VisitBritain’s budget would only be reduced by 5 per cent is extremely good news for the tourism industry (although that has to be tempered somewhat by the 30 per cent reduction in funding that both organisations experienced as a result of the last spending review in 2010.

Considering that the average non-protected Government Department suffered funding cuts of 10-15 per cent, the 7 per cent reduction in funding to DCMS represents a significant victory for the department in being able to demonstrate to HM Treasury that funding the arts, creative industries and tourism is important in the generation of growth and employment for the UK.

The outcome demonstrates that the Treasury is beginning to understand the economic significance of these sectors to the UK economy and that DCMS is not simply the “Ministry of Fun”.

The decision to not cut the tourism budget also highlights that DCMS ministers recognise tourism as a core responsibility within their portfolio. This, again, is a significant victory for businesses and trade associations in raising government’s awareness of tourism and the benefits that it provides. While these may seem rather small victories, it must be remembered that it wasn’t too long ago that the government and HM Treasury were considering abolishing the National Tourism Boards altogether and the tourism minister of the time asked the question, “What’s the point of a Tourism Board when I can find out all the information I need simply by using the internet?”

Thankfully the level of debate has progressed significantly since then. However, there is a final step to be made – for the government to now look at tourism in a holistic manner and address key barriers to growth in order for the returns on VisitEngland and VisitBritain’s funding to be maximised.

So just the little matters of VAT, Air Passenger Duty, visas, deregulation and increasing aviation capacity to sort out. Easy.

VisitEngland and National Parks England have announced a three-year partnership designed to boost rural tourism and stimulate sustainable economic growth in the British countryside.

Tourism is on of the major contributors to rural economies and the English National Parks alone contribute between £4.1bn and £6.3bn to the economy.

VisitEngland and National Parks England will work together to promote national parks in an attempt to bring more visitors, encourage greater collaboration between national park authorities, share intelligence and collaborate on research programmes.

“Our national parks are among the most treasured places in the country,” said environment minister Richard Benyon. “Visitors will experience some of England’s best landscapes and local businesses will benefit, helping to boost the rural economy.”

Penelope Cobham, VisitEngland chair, added: “This agreement outlines a number of important ways we can work together.”

The leisure sector has seen huge growth over the last 20 years. In that time, many of our competitors have come and gone. But this July, GLL, the first of the new breed of leisure trusts in the UK, is 20 years old.

Unlike many private companies, GLL is a staff led charitable social enterprise, dedicated to making leisure centres and libraries better for everyone. We’re an ethical business that trades with a social purpose and our staff invest time, energy and effort (along with any financial surplus generated), into helping make life better for our customers through the services we offer.

GLL is as excited about the future today, as we were back in 1993. We recently moved beyond leisure centres and also run libraries, adventure playgrounds, arts, day spas and parks services. But that’s not all. We’ll be operating two flagship Olympic venues; the Copper Box Arena and London Aquatic Centre on the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park after the successful London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. So, for all our customers, partners and supporters, there are even more exciting times ahead.

To everyone that’s played a part in our journey to date, thank you. We look forward to the next 20 years...

You might think that none of your customers are disabled so there is no real need for you to tailor your service to meet their needs. But you would be overlooking the fact that, according to the 2011 UK census, one in six people has an ‘activity limiting’ health problem or disability. In fact, many of your existing customers are likely to be in this group but you may not realise it. Impairments such as arthritis, poor eyesight, back problems and autism are invisible and most people will not mention them when using your facilities.

Importantly, just like elsewhere in the world, our domestic customer base is getting older and with age comes the increasing chance of impairments or disabilities. By 2025 more than a third of the UK population will be over 55.

There is a common misperception that to become fully accessible requires investing huge amounts of money in widening doors and building ramps, but less than 10% of disabled people are wheelchair users. If we think of accessibility in its broadest sense, some small changes can lead to your business being more welcoming to a wider range of people.

In fact one of the most important keys to making your business accessible is staff education and training. Research shows that many of us are afraid of causing offence or not knowing what to do when interacting with a disabled person. But these fears are nearly always unfounded in reality.

With this in mind the Institute of Hospitality has produced three short training films that provide staff with essential but often overlooked knowledge and will give them the confidence to deliver a truly high standard of service to disabled guests.

Hosted by former hotel general manager and permanent wheelchair user Arnold Fewell FIH, the videos are perfect for staff and management training.

These films have now been endorsed by VisitEngland and are available to watch on VisitEngland’s Business YouTube channel: www.youtube.com/VisitEnglandBiz

Tate Modern has announced a major gift of £10m from the Eyal Ofer Family Foundation to support the completion of the new development at Tate Modern. The donation has raised 85 per cent of the funds that are needed for the £215m 10-storey extension, which will increase space by 60 per cent. It is due to open by 2016.

Eyal Ofer is an international shipping magnate whose business interests include a vast global real estate portfolio. His family has a long tradition of philanthropy in the UK and elsewhere.

Ofer’s father, Sammy Ofer K.B.E., contributed to major cultural projects in London such as the Sammy Ofer Wing of the National Maritime Museum (opened in 2011) and the restoration of the Cutty Sark in Greenwich (opened in 2012). Through this donation Eyal Ofer aims “to provide continuity to his family’s legacy of charitable giving and to broaden public access to contemporary art in the future.”

When the completed project opens, it will provide more space for art from around the world and enable Tate Modern to explore new areas of contemporary visual culture involving photography, film, video and performance. Tate Modern will name the exhibition galleries on Level 3 East the Eyal Ofer Galleries.

Ofer said: “Tate Modern is one of the world’s great public art institutions. It is my privilege to be supporting this project as it expands the gallery’s exhibition space and enables an iconic institution to enhance the experience and accessibility of contemporary art.”

Darlington Council is set to put the town’s former art centre up for sale after efforts to save the property failed.

The Arts Centre in Vane Terrace closed in July last year as part of the Council’s Medium Term Financial Plan budget decisions and following lengthy consultation with the arts community and public. Previous plans for the centre that included developing a hotel and offices fell through due to lack of financial funding.

The council has pledged to consult on how to re-invest proceeds from the sale in local arts projects. It will work with the arts community though Creative Darlington to ensure successful delivery of this.

The Council’s Cabinet have now recommended that the site be marketed for sale, with suitability for a range of uses subject to planning permission, to secure a future for the former Arts Centre.

Nick Wallis, Darlington Council’s Cabinet Member leading on the arts, said: “We all share their disappointment that, in current market conditions, this has not been realisable. The Council feels it now needs to move to resolve the future of the Vane Terrace building.”
English Heritage is set to receive a financial boost after a government investment of £80m to help establish a charity to care for the National Heritage Collection on a self-financing basis.

English Heritage will receive the one-off lump sum to support its plan to transfer management of the collection to a charity, licensed by English Heritage's governing body. Sites such as Stone Henge, Dover Castle and Kenwood are included in the 420 sites that make up the National Heritage Collection (NHC), which will remain in public ownership. The new charity will have more freedom to generate greater commercial and charitable income to safeguard the collection.

The new charity is aiming to be set up by 2015 and will be completely self-financing, no longer needing tax-payer support. “This is an excellent outcome to an extremely challenging spending review,” said a statement by English Heritage. “This year we have been celebrating 100 years of state protection for heritage and this sets the scene for the next century.”

HMS warship may become new attraction

A decommissioned warship could be making its way back to Edinburgh as a tourist attraction, following a petition by a former crew member of the vessel to save it from the scrapheap.

Paul Gibb, who served on board the HMS Edinburgh as a marine engineering mechanic from 1991 to 1994, launched the Save HMS Edinburgh petition which seems to have had an impact after Scottish Parliament Member Margo MacDonald organised a meeting to discuss the idea of moving the warship to the Scottish capital, stating that such a move would be a great boost to the city’s economy.

The destroyer was decommissioned last month after 30 years of service replaced by the new Type 45 destroyer. The HMS Edinburgh, which underwent a £17.5m refit in 2010, was decommissioned two weeks ago after serving in the Falklands, Far East and the Baltic.

Adventure Island planning Southend’s largest rides

Southend’s Adventure Island could be about to get two new rides, much larger than anything else in the park.

A 196ft Starflyer carousel and a 147ft tall Ferris wheel are the two proposed rides for the theme park. If approved, the two rides would almost treble the size of the pleasure park’s existing tall rides with the current highest ride - Skydrop coming in at 68ft tall. A planning application has been submitted by Phillip Miller’s Stockvale Group alongside SK Architects of Leigh. Details: http://lei.stra=X7C3X

A decommissioned warship could be making its way back to Edinburgh as a tourist attraction, following a petition by a former crew member of the vessel to save it from the scrapheap.

Paul Gibb, who served on board the HMS Edinburgh as a marine engineering mechanic from 1991 to 1994, launched the Save HMS Edinburgh petition which seems to have had an impact after Scottish Parliament Member Margo MacDonald organised a meeting to discuss the idea of moving the warship to the Scottish capital, stating that such a move would be a great boost to the city’s economy.

The destroyer was decommissioned last month after 30 years of service replaced by the new Type 45 destroyer. The HMS Edinburgh, which underwent a £17.5m refit in 2010, was decommissioned two weeks ago after serving in the Falklands, Far East and the Baltic.

The British Museum has recorded its best spring ever, thanks in part due to the success of the temporary exhibition on the ancient Roman sites of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

Life and Death in Pompeii and Herculaneum, will run until the end of September and has doubled its projected numbers, bringing in 287,000 visitors. It is predicted to be the third most popular exhibition in the 260 years the museum has been open. With a reported 1.7m people visiting since 1 April.

Mayor approves Earls Court demolition plans

The proposed £8m redevelopment of Earls Court in London has been given the go-ahead by Mayor of London Boris Johnson.

The Earls Court Exhibition Centre is to be demolished as part of new plans to create a 77-acre redevelopment site in Earls Court and West Kensington.

The ambitious proposals, drawn up by Sir Terry Farrell for Capital & Counties Properties, include leisure facilities, hotel and retail space, a new primary school, library, an integrated health centre and five-acre public park. The 10.5m sq ft (929,000sq m) plan will span the two boroughs of Kensington & Chelsea and Hammersmith & Fulham and is expected to provide 7,500 new homes.

Boris Johnson said: “I’m in no doubt that the development will provide a massive boost not just to this part of the capital, but to London’s wider community as well.”

Stadium funding for Northampton FC

Northampton Town football club have announced plans for the redevelopment of Sixfields Stadium, increasing ground capacity to around 10,000.

Not only will the redevelopment increase ground capacity, but in addition, a hotel, corporate boxes, a conference centre and improved facilities are set to be constructed as part of the redevelopment.

The deal, which has been agreed with Northampton Borough Council, will see a new East Stand constructed and the existing West stand being comprehensively upgraded to provide it with a ‘new look’.

David Mackintosh, Northampton Borough Council leader said: “We have agreed a redevelopment partnership with Northampton Town Football Club that involves a housing scheme and small scale, local retail development on land, upon which the football club have a 150-year lease.”

Planning applications for the stadium will be submitted later this autumn in hope for the stadium to be ready in time for the start of the 2014/15 season. Cobblers chair, David Cardoz, said that the plans were looking to “make the club self sufficient in the long term”.

Northampton Borough Council are loaning the football club £12m to allow the redevelopment to go ahead as soon as possible.

- It is understood that Coventry City Football Club (CCFC) is close to agreeing a ground-sharing deal with Northampton FC.
- CCFC has been looking at options for a new stadium after being involved in a rent dispute with Arena Coventry Ltd (ACL) - the owner of its home ground Ricoh Arena.

Last season, Coventry attracted an average attendance of 10,948 at the Ricoh Arena, their home for the past eight years, while Sixfields currently has a capacity of 7,653.

The development of Sixfields into a 10,000-capacity venue could mean that CCFC would make Sixfields its home for the next few years until it secures a site for a new stadium.

New Ellesmere Port centre given the go-ahead

The first images of a £15m leisure centre in Ellesmere Port, Cheshire have been revealed after plans were given the go ahead.

The project, which will be located at Ellesmere Port was given unanimous backing by members of the Cheshire West and Chester (CWaC) Council, along with a similar project, which is set to be built in Northwich. The building is not without query however. Labour group leader at CWaC, Justin Madders, questioned whether the authority was getting value for money after reports that Crewe is getting a 50m pool and lifestyle centre for just £10m.

Funding secured for National Museum of Flight

The Heritage Lottery Fund has announced its support for the next phase of a Development Plan to transform the National Museum of Flight, located at East Fortune in East Lothian, Scotland.

The £3.6m project will see National Museums Scotland restore two nationally significant Second World War hangars and create new exhibitions within them.

The hangars are part of the East Fortune Airfield Scheduled Monument.

Built in 1940-41, they were originally designed to last approximately ten years. The project will conserve the original building fabric of the hangars and to restore them to their original condition.

The aircraft on display in the hangars will benefit from the buildings being heated for the first time. Once restored, these two hangars will focus on military aircraft and leisure and smaller civil aircraft.

A German-built rocket-powered ME 163 Komet; a Hawker Siddeley Harrier; and a Mark XVI Spitfire, are some of the military aircraft that will be on show. The National Museum of Flight houses the majority of the national aviation collections that are in the care of National Museums Scotland.

Workforce development initiative launches

SkillsActive and the Sports and Play Construction Association (SAPCA) have teamed up to launch a brand new workforce development skills initiative. The scheme will look to outline the skills and training needed within the sports and play sector and to provide a ‘road map’ for their delivery.

The initiative will be divided into two phases. The first phase will look to identify the size, scope and demographics of the sports and play sector as a whole - as well as measure and analyse the sector’s specialist workforce and its specific training needs.

Data collection will be undertaken using a combination of an online survey, focus groups and one-to-one meetings with SAPCA members and other industry professionals.

Following the data collection, a second phase will then be launched, during which SkillsActive will analyse the information and create a workforce map.

The scheme will chart the size of the sports construction industry workforce is also essential for the future success of British sport post London 2012.

YMCAfit launches instructor bursary

Training company YMCAfit has launched a £50,000 bursary in order to subsidise the cost of its current specialist populations’ training courses.

By offering course subsidies worth up to 25 per cent, the charity is aiming to increase the number of fitness professionals who can safely teach groups such as pregnant women and new mothers, older adults and people with a range of disabilities.

Many of the groups are at present unable to take part in exercise because facilities or instructors are unable to cater for their specific needs - something demonstrated by research conducted by YMCAfit and Aspire.

Aspire conducted research that shows two and a half times fewer disabled people take part in sporting activities compared to non-disabled people.

Denise Page, head of YMCAfit, said: “We passionately believe that everyone should be able to take part in some form of exercise, regardless of age, physical condition or ability. “It is important that we encourage fitness instructors to cater for the needs of groups that are often excluded from regular exercise such as older people, pregnant women and people with disabilities. This is the key driver for the launch of the specialist course bursary.”

IAN TAYLOR
is chief executive of SkillsActive

Recent coverage in mainstream media regarding the establishment of a professional membership body for lobbyists in parliament has, and some would argue correctly, sparked debate concerning professionalisation of the workforce – most significantly about their value and role within various industries.

Since joining SkillsActive last summer, I’ve come to see how effective professional registers can be right across the active leisure, learning and wellbeing sectors, and most importantly, how they can be of real value to every industry stakeholder.

Professionalisation registers are overarching groups that ensure competency levels are adhered to and kept relevant. They not only serve the public, but are also of immense value to any credible employer who does their utmost to ensure they’re employing the best people with the right qualifications. Establishing a professional register is one thing, but ensuring it is credible and successful is no mean feat.

11 years ago, the Register of Exercise Professionals (REPs) was launched. Operated by SkillsActive, the Register was the first of its kind in this industry and we’ve seen its progress over the years, with the majority of the industry now registered.

This hasn’t happened by chance. Registers must not only serve the public and employers, but also those who are members. We, as the operators, need to ensure that members appreciate the significance of their registration, and consequently feel its benefit.

We’ve ensured we engage with our members across a range of platforms, offering them benefits and opportunities that extend above and beyond the initial professional recognition and the ongoing Continuing Professional Development that registration brings. Ensuring members receive added value beyond professional recognition and credibility is at the nucleus of retaining, and growing membership.

On the back of 11 years of REPs, we have extended this model right across our sector and are optimistic that we can successfully create a series of Registers that are relevant, desirable and of tangible benefit.

Sheffield arena set for major refurb

The Motorpoint Arena in Sheffield has closed for the first time since it opened in 1991 to undergo a multi-million pound refurbishment.

For nearly two decades Motorpoint Arena (formerly the Sheffield Arena and the Hallam FM Arena) has been the only major concert and sporting venue in the Yorkshire region.

Things have changed however as the city of Leeds are now constructing an arena of comparable size at a cost of £60m, which will be in direct competition with the Sheffield venue. The £3.5m project will see the construction of a new roof and the replacement of all 12,500 seats in addition to having new toilets, lighting and refurbished catering outlets installed.

In the past year, more than 700,000 people attended events at the Motorpoint Arena and with improvements currently underway, officials are hoping that the figures will rise without losing customers to the new First Direct Leeds Arena.

Work is scheduled to be completed in September; the same month in which the First Direct Arena will officially open.

Plans revealed for £6m Youth Zone

The first images and design plans of the new Wolverhampton Youth Zone facility for young people aged between eight and 19 have been unveiled. Wolverhampton City Council, the Morgan Foundation and the charity OnSide are working on plans to develop the purpose built centre.

Situated on land between School Street, Worcester Street and Little Brickklin Street, the centre will offer a range of activities including sport, fitness, dance, arts, music, media and self improvement.

Plans drawn up by HB Architects show a two-storey building featuring a four court sports hall with facilities for indoor tennis, badminton, football, netball and basketball and a separate climbing wall.

There will also be a fitness suite with the latest gym equipment and two outdoor multi-use games areas.

The £6m centre will also have an outdoor recreation area, kitchen and café area selling healthy food and drink, multi purpose areas for dance, music, arts and crafts, gaming and DJ-ing, martial arts and boxing facilities. There will be a Chill Out zone for relaxing, eating, drinking and entertainment and recreation area with pool table, small games and table football. Meanwhile, quiet rooms will be used to offer mentoring support, counselling, advice and enterprise activities. The design work is continuing and it is hoped that construction could begin next year, with the centre opening for the first time in 2015.

The centre will cater for sport, fitness and dance

OnSide said: “This is a massive development in scale and what it will mean to young people.” Details: http://lei.sr7a=x0U5$
The secret of designing changing rooms that work for all who use them

Hands on approach works with family owners

“Our family-owned group of health clubs and spas in the South East is quality-oriented, with our management team operating each site as if it were their own - providing unparalleled service to members.

“We learnt of Craftsman Lockers early on in our investment cycle and every one of our facilities has been blessed with the design know-how and quality of installation that Craftsman have built a reputation for. Their commitment to, and philosophy on, customer service clearly matches our own.”

Jason Reynolds: Owner, Reynolds Group

Key to meeting the needs of female changing:

- A design that provides maximum privacy;
- Incorporates private changing cubicles;
- Well thought out vanity and grooming areas;
- Good circulation space;
- Lockers to meet expectations.

A locker for every lifestyle

“When we decided to open the Fitness Flex value-for-money fitness club in the heart of Doncaster, we called in Craftsman to help design the changing rooms, having previously worked with John Gibbs and his team on our leisure centre changing rooms.

“They not only provided a superb range of individual lockers both inside the changing rooms and next to the gym floor for those who arrived pre-changed but also a range of unisex lockers, delivering a complete solution for the wet areas including toilets and shower cubicles.

“The team's work ethic was excellent, putting in the hours needed to meet an extremely tight construction timescale that allowed us to keep our pledge to members to open on the day we promised. We now look forward to years of trouble-free performance from Craftsman’s products.”

Steve Roberts: Commercial Manager, Barnsley Premier Leisure
The key to keeping your members happy

Make the right choices in changing provision

Operators expect changing rooms to last between 12 and 20 years, up to three times longer than gym equipment.

Design in the right combination of lockers from the start and changing rooms deliver exceptional value for money.

Get it wrong and you and your members have to live with the consequences for years to come.

Your changing rooms provide two key opportunities; to retain existing and attract new members. That’s why more and more leisure operators are calling in Craftsman to help design their locker rooms incorporating a host of innovative ideas to make the changing experience more enjoyable for everyone.

Designs and quality that stand the test of time

“Providing quality clubs that are constructed within 10-12 weeks, we depend on reliable suppliers to help us open on schedule. We know we can depend on the Craftsman team to create designs that work for members and maximise available space at exceptional value for money.

As a team we have worked with John Gibbs for over 15 years and know that Craftsman lockers stand the test of time which means that we will not need to reinvest in our lockers for many years to come.”

Tony Cowen: Group Operating Officer, Pure Jatomi Fitness
