Ashmolean Museum relaunches after £61m revamp

By Pete Hayman

The Ashmolean Museum of Art and Archaeology in Oxford has reopened, following a major £61m redevelopment.

A 10,000sq m (107,639sq ft) building – designed by Rick Mather Architects – has been built in order to double the museum’s existing display space and will comprise 39 new galleries, including four temporary exhibition spaces.

Exhibition design company Metaphor has worked alongside curators on the development of the Crossing Cultures strategy, which will see the lower ground floor galleries explore links between objects that are common to different cultures, such as money, reading and writing.

The upper floors have been organised in chronological order to allow visitors to chart the development of ancient and modern civilisations, including orientation galleries to introduce key themes.

Facilities at the new museum building will also boast an education centre, conservation studios and Oxford’s first rooftop restaurant, The Ashmolean Dining Room.

The Western Art galleries in the original Charles Cockerell-designed Ashmolean building have also reopened after being closed for 10 months for refurbishment.

BAM Construction was the lead contractor on the project, which also involved project manager Mace; audio-visual specialists Machine Shop, New Angle and Sysco; lighting designers Kevan Shaw; and interpretation consultants Tim Gardom Associates. Display case producers Meyvaert also helped with the scheme.

Wembley posts £31m losses

Wembley Stadium’s owners have posted pre-tax losses of £31m for the year ending 31 December 2008 after it incurred interest payments totalling £26.2m and £10.8m in bank fees.

Wembley National Stadium Limited now plans for the venue to break even within the next five years after seeing a £13.1m decrease in total losses to £23m in 2008 compared with the previous year.
Childhood obesity figures "levelling off"

New study suggests a decline in the number of overweight young people in the UK

By Pete Hayman

Research by the National Heart Forum (NHF) has suggested that an increase in obesity levels among UK children may be starting to "level off".

The study compared previous forecasts based on data from the Health Survey for England with updated forecasts based on data collected between 2000 and 2007.

The rate of increase in obesity levels may now have entered decline, with forecasts for 2020 predicting a fall in the number of overweight boys aged between two and 11 years old to 17 per cent, while the number of obese boys in the same age group is expected to fall to 13 per cent.

The proportion of overweight girls is set to be cut in half to 17 per cent, while the number of obese girls could decrease to 10 per cent.

The criteria that determines whether a child is either overweight or obese is dependent on age and gender. It is governed by the UK90 scale, which compares previously collected data with recent statistics. The International Obesity Task Force scale – based on six countries including the UK – is also used.

Professor Klim McPherson of Oxford University, who is also NHF chair, said: "These trends present a more positive picture that obesity may be levelling off in children."

Further success for £140m swimming initiative

By Pete Hayman

New quarterly figures released by the government have shown an increase in the number of young people and senior citizens taking advantage of the £140m free swimming initiative.

A total of 5.9 million free swims were taken across the UK between July and September, compared with 4.4 million during the first quarter, with more than 250 local authorities signed up to the scheme.

During the three-month period, young people aged 16 years old and under made 4 million visits to pools, while 1.9 million people senior citizens took advantage of the free swimming initiative.

Culture secretary Ben Bradshaw said: "More than 10 million free swims so far is testament to how this scheme is tapping into a desire among people to get active.

"More councils are offering more people the chance to swim for free – and each and every local authority that is part of the scheme deserves credit for backing it, often with their own money as well, and seeing the benefits that free swimming can provide every day for local communities."

Funded by five government departments, the scheme is being delivered in partnership with local authorities, the Local Government Association, Sport England and the Amateur Swimming Association.
New ski complex planned for Sunderland

Indoor facility could form part of major plans to redevelop the Stadium Village site

By Pete Hayman

A new indoor ski centre could be built at Sunderland’s Stadium Village as part of multi-million pound development proposals that have been discussed by the local authority.

A blueprint for the Stadium Village site – the area that surrounds the city’s Stadium of Light venue – were considered by Sunderland City Council’s (SCC) cabinet on 4 November.

The development could also boast an ice rink, additional leisure facilities, specialist sports retail outlets, bars and restaurants as part of attempts to revitalise the area between Hay Street and the Metro line.

SCC and regeneration agency Sunderland arc are behind the proposed scheme, which will complement the existing Stadium of Light and £20m Sunderland Aquatics Centre, as well as forming part of the wider revamp of the area.

SCC leader Paul Watson said: "A facility like an indoor ski slope with snow would enhance the great sporting venues already on offer and play a huge part in boosting the city’s role as a visitor destination."

David Walker, Sunderland arc chief executive, added: "We have already received strong interest from leisure developers across the country who are excited by the potential Stadium Village brings."

BT set to reopen Tower's revolving restaurant?

By Pete Hayman

A revolving restaurant located on the 34th floor of the iconic BT Tower in London could be set to reopen to the public for the first time in nearly 30 years.

According to the Sunday Times, a number of high-profile chefs have been lined up by BT to oversee the rooftop restaurant, which will be revamped ahead of its scheduled opening in late 2011.

The original restaurant was opened in 1966 but was closed to the public in 1980 - partially due to security fears. However, it is still used by BT for corporate and company events.

A spokesperson for BT declined to comment on the plans, saying a decision had yet to be made about whether the restaurant would reopen.

Meanwhile, a 360-degree LED information display has been unveiled at the top of the tower – between its 36th and 37th floors – in order to mark 1,000 days until the start of the London Olympics.

BT chair Sir Michael Rake said: "As one of the most iconic and well-known landmarks in London, it’s only fitting that the BT Tower is used to generate pride and excitement amongst Londoners today – 1,000 days to the start of the London 2012 Olympic Games."
IHRSA predicts profitable autumn

The health club sector should anticipate a profitable autumn, according to the latest Monthly Trends Survey from the International, Health, Racquet and Sportsclub Association (IHRSA). Funding secured for Hartsdown centre

Hartsdown Leisure Centre in Margate, Kent, is to undergo a £1.6m refurbishment. Thanet Leisureforce plans to build a new gym to double the number of stations currently on offer, as well as two exercise studios for classes, a soft play facility and a café. The existing reception and changing areas for the sports hall will also be revamped.

Balance training good for the elderly

Simple balance exercises can make a difference in preventing older gym members from having slip and fall accidents. Instability and loss of balance is a common ailment among older adults. According to a report by the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons, falls in the senior population cost the US government alone more than US$20bn (£12.1bn) per year.

Writing in the October issue of the IDEA Fitness Journal, Dr. Evan Osar claims that while low-impact exercises such as yoga and swimming can benefit many clients, resistance and body weight training should also be included to increase muscle strength and help create a sense of well-being.

£15m upgrade for Carlisle site

Conference facilities, an expanded main hall and a sports injuries and rehabilitation clinic for the university’s School of Sport are also planned.

£30m revamp scheme for LA Fitness

UK health club operator unveils proposals for complete overhaul of 83 properties

By Tom Walker

Private equity-owned gym chain LA Fitness has earmarked £30m for a comprehensive refurbishment programme of its 83-strong portfolio of health clubs in the UK.

The investment and new strategy is being driven by the company’s chief executive officer, Martin Long, who said he wants to reposition the entire LA Fitness brand.

Long said: “Gyms were originally built to rent out space containing gym equipment – members signed a 12 month contract in January and often didn’t come back.

“That suited operators then, but membership is stuck at 12 per cent penetration – and has been for the last few years. If the industry is to break through that it must up its game.”

To tackle retention issues, Long has introduced a new customer relationship management programme which aims to ensure that staff develop and maintain a relationship with gym-goers throughout the course of their contract.

Each new or lapsed member is treated to a tailored ‘Kickstart’ programme to identify fitness targets and a personalised training routine to help them achieve their goals.

There’s a 30-minute review every 12 weeks, while new IT systems spotlight those who have not been to the club for 30 days or more.

Long added that he was determined to put a halt to what he calls the “devaluation that is hitting the entire UK fitness industry”.

“There are so many deals and discounts on offer that customers are not currently prepared to pay more,” he said.

New Year opening for Louth complex

Meridian Leisure Centre set to boast new 25m swimming pool and a fitness suite

By Helen Patenall

Meridian Leisure Centre in Louth, Lincolnshire, is scheduled to open in the New Year.

East Lindsey District Council (ELDC) will formally take ownership of the £12m facility in early December, following its completion by Lincolnshire-based company UCS Civils.

The town’s existing swimming pool will close on 29 November for the team of lifeguards and fitness advisors to transfer and become familiar with the new facility.

Centre manager Iain Dunton said: “It is important the team know the centre inside out because we want to give our customers a safe and first class experience from the moment they first visit us.”

ELDC’s portfolio holder for leisure Adam Grist added: “We are working hard to help our community improve their health and this leisure centre will support this effort.”

New research reveals obsession with body image

By Tim Nash

A new survey has revealed that 90 per cent of adults believe we care too much about how we look and not enough about how healthy we are.

Commissioned by Central YMCA, the Healthy Attitudes to Healthy Bodies survey also showed that almost a quarter of adults feel depressed about their body shape at some point.

It found that 88 per cent think children are under more pressure about their physical appearance than they were 20 years ago and half of adults believe image issues should be addressed in primary school.

Central YMCA is using the survey to launch a campaign to raise awareness about the extent of society’s obsession with body image ideals and its associated negative impact upon the wellbeing of children, young people and adults.

Rosi Prescott, Central YMCA’s CEO, said: “This survey illustrates a deep public unease about the growing focus on body image ideals.”

Sporta partners Change4Life campaign

The Sports and Recreation Trust Association (sporta) has been accepted as a national partner for the Department of Health’s Change4Life campaign.

The agreement will see the group, which represents more than 100 cultural and leisure trusts across the UK, creating a standalone campaign for its members that is set to run next autumn.

Spearheading the campaign, sporta’s representative for London and the South East, Phil Rumbelow said: “About 80 per cent signed up to support a sporta campaign on the spot, which equates to more than 100 centres.”

Revenues increase for Cineworld Group

Cineworld Group has reported total revenues up by 6.5 percent on the previous year for the 43 weeks to 22 October. Box office revenue was up by 10.9 percent and retail by 5 percent, although other income – mainly screen advertising revenue – saw a fall of 26.9 percent. The figures come against a backdrop of what the company calls ‘exceptional Q3 trading last year’ due to the success of the blockbuster Mamma Mia. Cineworld also confirmed that it will shortly be opening a 10 screen cinema in Aberdeen and a five screen cinema in Witney, Oxfordshire, increasing its estate to 77 cinemas and 790 screens. The two new theatres will be the first in the company to have digital projectors in every auditorium. For the final quarter, Cineworld’s film line-up includes 2012, Sherlock Holmes and Avatar, which it believes will help the company to deliver continued growth for the full year.

Snow dome complex proposed for Blackpool

A multi-million pound snow dome is being planned for the land formerly allocated for a supercasino in Blackpool. The plans, which would also include shops, bars and a hotel, have been put forward by Greenbank Partnerships. Blackpool Council is currently looking into the proposal and has given Greenbank permission to conduct a feasibility study. The council’s leader, Peter Callow, told the Blackpool Gazette: “This will put Blackpool in the big league. We’re talking about something that can change the face of the resort.” The Central Station site was earmarked as a possible supercasino location, before the government scrapped the idea altogether.

Rank Group opens two new G Casinos

Coventry and Dundee casinos expand company’s portfolio to nine UK properties

By Pete Hayman & Tom Walker

The Rank Group has opened two new G Casinos, taking the total number of properties in the portfolio to nine.

The Ricoh Arena casino in Coventry has benefited from a £1m reconfiguration since it was acquired by Grosvenor Casinos in a £650,000 deal from Isle of Capri in April 2009. Opened on 29 October, the 44,000sq ft (4,088sq m) casino will form part of Rank’s plans to expand the G Casino brand to 20 sites by the end of 2012, with a further G Casino scheduled to open in Sheffield before the end of the year.

The G Casino at the Ricoh Arena boasts a restaurant operated by West Midlands-based Mahir’s Experience; a sports lounge; a bar and one of the largest poker rooms in the UK; as well as 20 gaming tables and 20 gaming machines.

The launch of the Coventry site follows just a week after the opening of the G Casino in Dundee, Scotland.

The £5m, 30,000sq ft (2,800sq m) club boasts a restaurant, a bar, a sports lounge and a poker room as well as a wide range of traditional casino games and gaming machines.

Phil Urban, managing director of Rank’s casinos business, said: “At the heart of G Casino’s success over the last three years has been a very simple ambition to give our customers a great night out and we look forward to achieving that in Dundee.” The first G Casino opened in Manchester in 2006. Since then six more G Casinos have been added in Aberdeen, Blackpool, Bolton Luton, Thanet and London’s Piccadilly Circus.

The venue has three screens with a combined total of 263 seats, a fully licensed café-bar and a merchandise area. HMV hopes to be able to roll-out the hmvcurzon concept to more locations across the country.

Jongleurs chain to be rebranded?

The license for the Jongleurs comedy club chain will revert to its founder as of 2 January.

Intertain, the new company that saved 60 Regent Inns sites from administration – including 10 Jongleurs clubs – is able to use the Jongleurs name until control reverts to Maria Kempinska, who founded the brand in 1983, next year.

A statement from Intertain said: “On 20 October 2009, Intertain Limited acquired 10 live entertainment venues as part of a package of 60 trading assets, from the joint administrators of Regent Inns.”

“Intertain has now entered into a brand licensing agreement with Jongleurs Comedy Limited to continue to run these 10 venues as Jongleurs Comedy Clubs until 2 January 2010,” the statement added.

After then, it isn’t known whether Intertain will rebrand the clubs or come to a new arrangement with Kempinska.

The Rugby Football Union (RFU) has reported a 66 per cent increase in operating profit to £18.9m for the 12 months ending 30 June 2009, when compared with the previous year. According to the RFU, an increase in the number of international fixtures staged at Twickenham Stadium helped to boost its results for the year, as well as a reduction in depreciation following a review of the venue’s new South Stand facilities.

Work on Trump’s resort gets underway

Work has begun on Donald Trump’s £1bn Scottish golf resort. The Aberdeenshire course, designed by Gareth Hoskins Architects, is yet to receive full planning permission for the entire development, but early work – such as stabilisation of the sand dunes and the laying of marram grass turves – is to begin already. The 500-acre course – which Trump claims will be the “greatest golf course in history” – will boast two 18-hole golf courses designed by golf architect Martin Hawtree, which will be separated by a clubhouse open to guests and visitors, a caddyshack, a short-game practice area and a driving range.

European travel sector recovering

Sector could experience tentative growth during second half of 2010

By Tom Walker

Travel demand across the continent is stabilising and 2010 could see some tentative growth, according to a new report by the European Travel Commission.

According to the European Tourism 2009 – Trends & Prospects report, the rate of decline – which fell significantly in the first half of the year – slowed in the last two to three months and demand for air transport and accommodation seems to returning to levels comparable to 12 months ago. However, this refers to volume as opposed to value, as the recession has driven down prices.

International arrivals are expected to stabilise over the last four months of the year and perhaps show some growth.

Leisure travel continues to outperform business travel, in line with trends seen in the first six months of the year. However, the International Federation of Tour Operators said that despite many tour operators selling out this summer, travel sales have continued to drop sharply in favour of self-tailored or independent travel, particularly in the UK.

BAA announces sale of Gatwick Airport

Airport operator BAA, which owns seven UK airports, has announced it has secured a deal to sell Gatwick Airport for £1.51bn after it agreed terms with New York-based investment firm Global Infrastructure Partners (GIP).

The proceeds from the sale, of which £55m will be dependent on future traffic performance, will be mainly used by the Spanish-owned company to pay part of its existing £9.6bn debt. GIP, which also owns a 75 per cent stake in London City Airport, is expected to complete the acquisition of Gatwick Airport in December, subject to European Union merger regulation clearance.

Gatwick Airport was originally put on the market in September 2008.

Sector secures music licence victory

Hospitality operators set to receive refunds after years of excess charges

By Pete Hayman

The British Beer and Pub Association (BBPA) and the British Hospitality Association (BHA) have been successful in a long-running legal dispute over playing music in public areas. Pubs, restaurants and hotels could now receive a share of up to £20m in refunds after the Copyright Tribunal ruled that fees set by Phonographic Performance Limited (PPL) were too high.

The tribunal has ruled that PPL – which collects royalties on behalf of performing artists – will only be allowed to increase tariffs by 10 per cent in a move that could save the industry around £5m a year. PPL has announced that it intends to appeal the ruling in the High Court, although if the challenge fails, the company faces the prospect of paying at least £50 interest-free in refunds to businesses who have paid excess charges since the tariffs were altered in 2005.

BBPA chief executive Brigid Simmonds said: “This is a major victory for the industry – not to mention the fully justified prospect of refunds. “It’s been a long struggle, but worth it. We’ll be doing everything we can to ensure any appeal case is heard quickly so that the matter of repayments can be settled.”

Hotels in the capital recovering

Profitability per room in London increased during September

By Tom Walker

Hoteliers in the capital managed to improve profitability and increase total revenue per available room (TrevPAR), during September, according to the latest HotStats survey by TRI Hospitality Consulting.

Gross operating profit per available room (GOP PAR) among London hotels increased by 43 per cent compared to August 2009. Average room rates during the month increased by around 13 per cent compared to August, a month that is driven by discounted leisure related demand. According to TRI, average room rates are now 4.8 per cent below the same period last year.

Jonathan Langston, managing director, TRI, said: “Strong volume in the capital is a sign of increased UK and Eurozone consumer confidence.”
Looking through the British Hospitality Association’s (BHA) latest publication – British Hospitality: Trends and Developments 2009 – it becomes clear that the hospitality industry is still moving forward, despite a recession widely regarded as the worst in living memory.

Hotel insolvencies so far (the coming winter period will be a testing time) have been few, as the publication reveals. Only 178 hotels in 2008 (but possibly more than that in 2009) is hardly a significant number in a sector with over 46,000 establishments. And though restaurant insolvencies, at 778 in 2008, are higher than in 2007, this is a sector that is notorious for failed businesses even in the best of times.

What is also encouraging is that almost every establishment that has gone into insolvency has re-opened under new ownership. Furthermore, despite the recession, the hotel industry is continuing to expand with more than 11,000 rooms opening in 2009 and a further 40,000 planned for the period 2010-2015.

Since the present boom started in 2003, over 85,000 new rooms have been added to UK hotel stock, just over half (55 per cent) in the budget sector – the biggest hotel construction period in the industry's history.

Of course, the recession has had an impact and the recession is discouraging some investment. More than 30 hotel developments have been put on hold or abandoned because developers have either been forced into administration or have faced planning problems. Funding has been another issue. Some of these projects already had hotel companies lined up to operate the development.

So the hospitality industry is not yet out of the woods. But the new BHA Trends... publication does show that the industry has survived better than most expected. There is a long way to go until we can return to 2007 levels of confidence and profitability, but we are heading along the right path. Investment still needs to be encouraged and standards must be enhanced, not just maintained. Value for money must be self-evident.

The next 12 months will no doubt be difficult, but the hospitality sector has shown its ability to survive in the bad times as well as the good.

Homes plan for Jersey tourist attraction

According to the Jersey Evening Post, the Lewis family said a fall in tourism had led to the need to seek an alternative use for the 5.5-acre (2.2-hectare) site, which boasts a karting complex and two adventure golf courses. Managing director Chris Lewis told the newspaper: “We are continuing to operate as a visitor attraction for the foreseeable future. A decline in tourism has forced us to look at alternatives.”

'Disney' makeover for Alnwick Castle

Former Disneyland Paris chief named new chief executive of Harry Potter castle

By Martin Nash

Christian Perdrier, the former vice president of Disneyland Paris, has been named as the new chief executive at Alnwick Castle in Northumberland.

His appointment is part of a move by the castle’s owners, the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland, to increase both visitor numbers and revenue at what is one of the UK’s largest inhabited castles.

Perdrier said: “Alnwick has huge potential, with benefits for both the Northumberland community and the North East as a whole. The castle and garden attract tourists from around the world and we will ensure our new approach benefits as many businesses in the region as possible.”

It is hoped that Perdrier, who formed part of the Dubailand team in the Middle East – a complex of theme parks and hotels in Dubai – will help to transform the castle's fortunes.

In addition to the castle – renowned as the location for Hogwarts School in the Harry Potter films – the estate also includes Alnwick Gardens, a separate enterprise containing the world’s largest tree house. The two venues attract around 800,000 visitors a year.

The Duchess said that the appointment of Perdrier as chief executive “can do for visitors to Alnwick what Walt Disney has done for children and families all over the world.

"While we don’t expect to convert the castle into the Magic Kingdom, I greatly admire the Disney effect and look forward to seeing how we can attract visitors in the future.”

Longleat unveils new attraction

By Tom Walker

A new £1.3m interactive exhibit – Animal Adventure – has been unveiled at Longleat Safari Park near Warminster, Wiltshire.

Featuring a number of themed, planted areas, Animal Adventure is aimed at children and has been designed to give visitors the chance to get closer to a number of animals.

The featured areas include a Butterfly Garden, Rabbit World, Guinea Pig Village and a new themed ferret enclosure.

Darren Beasley, head of the Animal Adventure attraction, said: “Animal Adventure will allow us to take interaction with animals one step further as we actively involve our visitors in keeper-led tasks.

The new attraction is aimed at families and their children.

"The build has been complicated and we unreservedly apologise that the attraction is opening later than intended. "We felt, however, that it was imperative to get the build absolutely right not just for the welfare of the animals involved but also for the visitors."

Paultons Park hit by planning blow

Paultons Park has been refused permission by the New Forest National Park Authority to keep two rides it opened without receiving planning consent.

As previously reported in Leisure Opportunities, the Hampshire theme park was forced to retroactively apply for permission for its existing Edge and Cobra rides, which it opened without the proper planning permission.

The rides are located on an area of land that has been used for less than 10 years as an amusement park and therefore require separate applications to the four other rides – located on an approved area of land – which were constructed at around the same time.

Cultural Olympiad schemes unveiled

Twelve projects will share total grant funding of £5.4m made available by ACE

By Pete Hayman

Arts Council England (ACE) and Olympic organisers have announced the 12 regional cultural schemes that have been commissioned for a major project as part of the London 2012 Cultural Olympiad.

More than 2,000 entries were received as part of the ‘Artists taking the lead’ initiative, which saw independent panels of artists and producers select the 12 regional commissions that will now receive a share of a total grant of £5.4m.

Developed throughout 2010 and 2011, each project aims to celebrate the UK’s cultural heritage and highlight contemporary issues in the lead up to the London 2012 Olympics. Nine projects will represent each English region, while three others have been selected to represent Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Among the commissions is a scheme by artists Alfie Dennen and Paula Le Dieu to provide LED panels on the roofs of bus stops in London to provide an opportunity for commuters to interact with one another.

Meanwhile, an eco-friendly watermill will be floated on the River Tyne in the North East region by the Owl Project.

Council considers Taunton pool plans

A new swimming pool could be built in Taunton, Somerset, under plans to improve the town's swimming provision being considered by Taunton Deane Borough Council (TDBC).

According to a report put before the Community Scrutiny Committee on 13 October, the two existing swimming pools – Station Road and St James Street – are "coming to the end of their useful lives". A feasibility study, carried out by Strategic Leisure, put before the council in 2005 found that a new pool would cost around £10m, although TDBC will update the findings to take the scheme forward. The six-lane 33m swimming pool at Station Road first opened in 1974, while the St James Street Pool dates back to 1935.

Gloucester receives £11m boost

Plans for the regeneration of Gloucester city centre have been handed a boost after receiving £11.2m from the South West Regional Development Agency (SWRDA).

The Economic Linkages project to improve public areas and streets between the city centre and a £400m Gloucester Quays retail development is in line to receive £7m.

It is hoped that the funding package, of which the remaining £4.2m will go towards the completion of the Gloucester Docks scheme, will help the city to fulfil its economic potential.

Argyll hotels net HIE funding

Plans for a major £7.4m refurbishment of two hotels in Argyll, West Scotland – the Ugadale Hotel in Machrihanish and the Royal Hotel in Campbeltown – have been handed a £1.2m boost by Highlands and Islands Enterprise.

US-based Southworth Development is behind the scheme through its Kintyre Development Company subsidiary, which also owns the new Machrihanish Dunes Golf Club - an 18-hole links course opened in July.

Marcus van der Gaag, Haven's sports and leisure director, said: "We are very proud of our association with the STA. National Trust unveils branded foods

New product range will be made available at supermarkets and includes pale ale

By Pete Hayman

A new range of branded food and drink – including potatoes, beer and meat products – is to be rolled out across the country by the National Trust (NT).

The phased launch of the trust's eponymous products is now underway, with items having been inspired by both the organisation's own produce and from traditional recipes.

Potatoes grown on 420 acres (170 hectares) of NT-owned land at Trehill Farm in Pen-brokeshire, Wales, will be sold at supermarkets from early October, while three varieties of bread will be offered by the trust's tearooms and restaurants across the UK.

NT tearooms and restaurants, as well as independent licensees, will also sell Viceroy India Pale Ale, which is brewed by the Westerham Brewery in Kent and uses hops from the trust's last remaining hop garden at Scotney Castle.

Rob Macklin, NT head of agriculture, said: "We are running several campaigns that promote the idea of sustainable food, but this is the first time that we have been able to put our ideas into practice by creating a range of high quality, but affordably priced, foods and drinks."

Vending machine rethink urged

Leisure centres are undermining efforts to increase health levels among young people by stocking junk food in vending machines, according to the British Heart Foundation (BHF).

A BHF report, called Fit Choice, has blamed a lack of regulation for allowing a range of leisure facilities – including ice rinks, bowling alleys and park cafés – to offer unhealthy products in an environment where children go to get fit.

Prepared on behalf of the BHF by the Food Commission, the study found that vending machines at each of the 35 venues surveyed in the London area stocked products high in fats, salts and sugars.

The BHF said that leisure facilities were undermining efforts to increase the number of children becoming fitter and more active by offering the type of products that are no longer advertised on children's television or sold in school vending machines.

Barclays has secured an £82.25m agreement that will see the bank extend its sponsorship of the Premier League for an additional three years from 2010-11.

The deal, which will run through to the end of the 2012-13 season, will enable the bank to own global title sponsorship rights for the competition, as well as UK and international television accreditation and advertising rights.

Richard Scudamore, Premier League CEO, said: "Barclays' commitment is critical to helping us put on a top quality football competition that is watched and enjoyed by fans across the world."
After months of waiting, I am delighted to say we have finally been officially relicensed as the Sector Skills Council (SSC) for Active Leisure and Learning. Following a rigorous relicensing process by the government, we were not only successful in having our five year license renewed, but also judged as a good SSC with a number of outstanding areas, namely employer engagement, leadership, project management and delivery. And I am thrilled with this assessment, as our sector employers are our bread and butter and if we're not delivering on their behalf then we're doing something wrong.

Over the last five years our focus has been on increasing the demand for skills, along with raising the quality of skills provision, creating a fit for purpose system of training, and lobbying funding agencies and policy makers to invest in this employer-led framework. This can be demonstrated in a variety of ways, for example the development and delivery of apprenticeships. These programmes have developed and rapidly grown in a sector with no tradition for such structured work-based programmes and more than 4,000 apprentices have been certificated in the past 12 months.

The development of a broad range of S/NVQs that have become established across the industry – there has been a 30 per cent increase in people completing their qualification, and we have issued around 22,000 certificates already this year. We should also not forget our National Skills Academy, which since its creation, has led to a one-stop shop for the industry to access quality assured training and support in four out of nine English regions.

Our renewed license is based on a new five year plan of delivery. We need to ensure all qualifications in the sector are on the new Qualifications and Credit framework – in which case they have to be the qualifications employers want their future workforce to have. We need to ensure our National Skills Academy continues to expand across the whole of the country and look at ways it could work within the home nations.

The fact that we have been relicensed is a testament to the commitment and passion of my staff who are working tirelessly on behalf of the sector. So for me, right now, it’s important to recognise how far we’ve come and say with pride that we’re going in the right direction. But it’s also just as important to recognise the journey has only just started and we’ve a long way to go. However, working together, I know that we’ll get there.

Scholarship scheme for Scotland

Sixth round of initiative secures £100,000 of funding

By Tom Walker

The Hospitality Industry Trust (HIT) Scotland has launched a £100,000 scholarship scheme to help leisure, hospitality, travel and tourism businesses in Scotland inspire their employees during the recession.

Applications are now being received for an emerging talent scholarship scheme, which aims to identify 200 ambitious and talented individuals to attend training courses.

HIT estimates that the programme, now in its sixth year, could potentially return more than £1m through new skills, promoting best practice, improving staff retention across the industry and raising aspirations to encourage professional development.

Previous recipients have attended the Disney Institute in Florida, Ecole du Hotelier in Lausanne, Switzerland, and Cornell University’s School of Hotel Administration in New York state. Aspiring chefs have been placed in Michelin starred kitchens and sommeliers with top wine experts. HR, marketing and events staff are also covered through the scheme.

Entries close on the 11th December 2009 and the scholarships will be announced in February 2010.

Fit for Sport reports 2009

Fit for Sport, the healthy lifestyle activities provider, has reported a 14.5 per cent increase in children’s activity levels of those taking part in its nationwide Fitter Schools UK Challenge.

More than 14,500 school children are currently receiving healthy lifestyle education each week through Fit for Sport, which has also seen 7 million UK families engage in2 the Fitter Families initiative during 2009.

Working in partnership with local authorities and primary care trusts, the free, nationwide Fitter Families scheme aims to provide families with the opportunity to improve health and fitness as part of the organisation’s pledge to “keep the future fit.”

Gateshead Football Club unveil new stadium plans

Blue Square Premier outfit reveals ambitious proposals for 9,000-capacity venue to boost region's 2018 bid

By Pete Hayman

Gateshead Football Club (GFC) has unveiled plans to develop a new 9,000-capacity stadium on a derelict site formerly occupied by North Durham Cricket and Rugby Club.

The proposals, announced a week after the club confirmed it intends to become a full-time professional club in 2010, form part of wider efforts to boost GFC's bid to gain promotion to the Football League.

Plans for the stadium include a 2,000-seat main stand, a medical room, dressing rooms, a reception, club offices and media facilities as well as executive boxes and space for matchday hospitality.

The venue, which will boast a 105m x 68m (344ft x 223ft) FIFA standard pitch, will form part of Newcastle/Gateshead's bid to be included as a host city for the 2018 World Cup.

GFC chair Graham Wood said: "We have achieved an awful lot over the last few years and the construction of a new stadium in a central location is pivotal to our aspirations."

The venue will boast a 2,000-seat main stand and dressing rooms

University of Leeds set for £12.2m leisure complex

By Pete Hayman

A new £12.2m swimming pool and fitness complex — one of the largest to be built at a UK university — is set to open at the University of Leeds, West Yorkshire, in summer 2010.

Construction company Willmott Dixon is building the new facility, which has been designed by the London-based architects behind the 2012 Olympic Aquatic Centre, S&P.

Plans boast an eight-lane pool

Facilities will include a 25m, eight-lane swimming pool with a partially moveable floor, capable of hosting water-based sports such as water polo, sub aqua and canoe polo.

The centre will boast a 200-station, 900sq m (9,688sq ft) fitness suite equipped by Technogym, a health suite with a sauna and a steamroom and changing rooms.

Conference and meeting delegates visiting the university will have the chance to take advantage of the facilities when complete, as well as students, staff and the local community.
