£1bn legacy strategy announced

Culture secretary Jeremy Hunt and Sport England have announced details of a new five-year youth and community strategy that aims to create a participation legacy from the 2012 Games.

Every secondary school across England is to host a community sports club and £10m is earmarked for opening up school facilities to public use. Meanwhile, county sports partnerships are poised to be given additional resources in order to help establish effective links between schools and sports in the community and support national governing bodies.

An additional £100m is available for new facilities in "popular" sports

Cage Cricket plots UK roll-out

A consortium led by former England cricketer Sir Ian Botham has appointed Capita Symonds to help drive forward the development and UK roll-out of the new Cage Cricket concept.

Launched in June, Cage Cricket is a new “urban form of cricket” and has been devised by Lawrence Prittipaul – a former Hampshire cricketer – and Trevor McArdle following four years of trial and development.

The concept aims to provide young people with an opportunity to play cricket in urban areas where local playing space and opportunities to join a cricket club are not provided.

Cage Cricket is played on a basketball-sized court and involves six players, with each player taking up one of six zones per over. The game tests batting, bowling and fielding skills.

The concept has already been successfully piloted in a number of schools and communities across the UK, with the aim now to expand its reach throughout the country.

Sir Ian said: “If someone can go from beach cricket to playing for the West Indies, then why can’t we have a vehicle that does the same in our urban areas?”

‘World-class’ VeloPark plans submitted

A series of loops to the west of the Velodrome and a large single loop to the east will feature as part of the road cycle circuit, which is to replace the old Eastway Cycle Circuit. Meanwhile, the mountain bike trails will form a loop from the north-east corner. The Games-time BMX facilities will also be regraded as part of the proposals.

A team comprising Hopkins Architects; Hargreaves Associates; LDA Design; Allies and Morrison; Atkins; and AECOM have drawn up the VeloPark vision. The development will take place to the north of the Olympic Park.

TriFitness will open outside of normal operating hours on a Saturday afternoon as part of the initiative, with the girls to have access to the facilities between 2pm and 4pm.

An induction to all cardiovascular and resistance equipment and an activity programme that will be designed to meet individual needs forms part of the initiative.

Scots ‘not adopting’ healthier lifestyles

Many people across Scotland understand how to adopt a healthier lifestyle but do not make the necessary changes to their behaviour, according to a new report from NHS Health Scotland.

Knowledge, Attitudes and Motivations to Health highlights an ongoing gap between how people perceive their own lifestyle and how healthy they actually are. The report uses the findings from a section of the 2012 Scottish Health Survey and includes health topics such as alcohol consumption, physical activity and diet.

More than half (52 per cent) of those questioned felt they were physically active enough to remain healthy, although only 39 per cent actually met current recommendations.

Meanwhile, 41 per cent described themselves as a “very light or occasional drinker” and 21 per cent as a “light but regular drinker” despite exceeding the recommended limits.

Grade II listed status for Bletchley Park’s Block C

Bletchley Park’s Block C, in which the Enigma Code was cracked during World War II, has received Grade II listed status from heritage minister John Penrose.

The building is at the heart of plans to turn the site into a heritage centre, and housed the first high-speed data processing machines used to crack German codes.

Last month, it was revealed Google had donated £550,000 towards the first phase of the £15m project and helping to provide match funding needed to draw down a £4.6m Heritage Lottery Fund grant.

Stoke museum bids to protect collections

Stoke-on-Trent’s Wedgwood Museum is to start work “in earnest” to raise funds needed to protect its collections relating to the historic 250-year-old pottery group.

It follows a High Court judgement in late December 2011 that ruled the museum’s collections were not held in trust and could be sold off in order to pay off a multi-million pound pension fund deficit.

The museum’s collections currently include more than 100,000 documents and manuscripts relating to Josiah Wedgwood and his renowned pottery company.

£9m BMAG project moves forward

A £9m development to create new galleries exploring the history of Birmingham at Birmingham Museum and Art Gallery (BMAG) has moved forward, with the internal fit-out now set to begin.

Thomas Vale Construction has handed over the new Birmingham History Galleries to staff following work to restore and refurbish part of the Grade II*-listed museum building. West Yorkshire-based Redman Design is behind the proposals.

Due to open in September, the project has involved the creation of more than 1,000sq m (10,764sq ft) of space, including four “distinctive” galleries exploring the city’s history from medieval times to 1945.

A fifth Your Birmingham gallery will examine the character and identity of the city and its people, which will be shaped by contributions from local residents. The Heritage Lottery Fund awarded a £4.9m grant in 2009.

Birmingham City Council cabinet member for leisure, sport and culture Martin Mullaney said: “This exciting project, which will tell the story of Birmingham’s great global history, is now moving into the final stage.”

Arts Council England (ACE); CyMAL: Museums, Archives and Libraries Wales; Museums Galleries Scotland; and the Northern Ireland Museums Council have drawn up the new-look scheme.

Accreditation, which is the recognised quality standard for UK museums and galleries, aims to outline good practice and the revised scheme places a greater emphasis on visitors’ needs.

ACE chief executive Alan Davey said: “Our ambition is for more people to experience and be inspired by museums and galleries.”

The programme has now reopened to applications, with four organisations including Shakespeare’s Birthplace Trust already achieving full Accreditation after testing the new-look process. Details: http://lei.sr?a=V7x7D

‘Crucial’ year for tour operators

Some UK travel companies and tour operators will have to “radically” alter business models to adapt to new market conditions and survive in 2012, according to KPMG.

The advisory firm said 24 operators went into administration last year and expects more to follow over the next year, with the high-volume model in “terminal decline”.

KPMG highlighted the growth of low-cost carriers; online booking; and ongoing economic uncertainty could make 2012 one of the “most challenging” for the sector.

Fuel cost and Air Passenger Duty increases will also have an impact on tour operators over the coming 12 months, with KPMG outlining five steps that businesses should consider.

The firm recommends investment in online and mobile technology; the offering of “dynamic products” to meet changing customer needs; and focussing on cost reduction.

Elsewhere, KPMG said tour operators and travel companies should look at ensuring a range of “strong brands in high margin spaces”, while maintaining a healthy balance sheet.

Ireland’s national body to promote Dublin’s tourism

Fáilte Ireland, the national tourism development authority for Ireland, is now responsible for Dublin’s tourism promotion as part of a government shake-up of arms-length bodies.

Dublin Tourism is to be merged with its parent organisation as part of a rationalisation being undertaken by minister for transport, tourism and sport Leo Varadkar.

Varadkar said: “Dublin Tourism has performed a valuable role in promoting the capital, but inevitably there has been considerable overlap with the work of Fáilte Ireland.”

Isle of Wight in line for £3m tourism boost

A new private sector-led organisation is to be created with the help of £3m of public funding to promote the Isle of Wight as a visitor destination under plans announced by the council.

Isle of Wight Council (IWC) is planning to consult with the island’s tourism sector on the proposals, which will lead to the establishment of the new destination management organisation.

According to the local authority, the proposals will comply with government tourism policy that includes the creation of partnership-based tourism organisations led by the industry.

IWC cabinet member for the economy and the environment George Brown said: “In these most difficult of financial times it is an important commitment of the council to consider allocating a significant sum to tourism for the next nine years.”
2012 – a year of opportunity in Wales

W e start 2012 in Wales with a new UK consumer marketing campaign, which will show people how they can have a ‘proper holiday’ during 2012. The TV adverts feature real people who have been disappointed with previous trips abroad, where the usual ‘fly and flop’ holiday left them with no memories or experiences.

This Visit Wales marketing campaign goes beyond the conventional approach of telling people what’s good about Wales – it actually shows real people having a fantasti c holiday in Wales and should ensure that Wales really does stand out from our competitors in the UK and internationally.

As London is gearing up to deliver the 2012 Olympic Games later this year, Wales is also playing a big part in the delivery of the Games. Cardiff is one of a number of host cities for London 2012. Wales – of course – has produced great athletes, not least because we have enviable training facilities created by nature. One of those assets is our coastline. This year, Wales becomes the first country in the world to open a dedicated path along its entire coast. It has already been named by Lonely Planet as the greatest coastline. This year, Wales becomes the first country in the world to open a dedicated path along its entire coast. It has already been named by Lonely Planet as the greatest coastline.

Our priority for 2012 is to make sure that the winter period is specifically targeted at the Tourism industry – ‘Building for 2012’. The winter period is traditionally a time when tourism businesses can upgrade their facilities with a minimum of disruption. The ‘Building for 2012’ project is a call to SME tourism businesses across Wales to invest in quality, in readiness for spring 2012.

The latest facility includes the provision of financial support for new developments, such as the group’s latest scheme – a 92-bedroom property at Ham Yard, London. More than 20 residential apartments and retail units also form part of the project, which will see the hotel become Firmdale’s seventh in the capital.

Barclays has also agreed to refinance Firmdale’s existing facilities over a three- to five-year term, which will help provide security of liquidity for the duration of the period.

Firmdale director Malcolm Soden said: “Our banking relationship is critically important to not only our existing business but also to our growth aspirations.

“Having already provided development finance for five of our hotels over the years, Barclays have once more stepped up to the plate and enabled our new Ham Yard development to progress.”

Travelodge announces 2012 hotel opening plans

Travelodge, the UK-based budget hotel operator, has announced that it is to launch 41 new properties across the country during 2012 in a move expected to create 1,000 jobs.

The 41 new hotels represent an investment of £246m and will expand the group’s portfolio to 537 properties. The openings include the 500th Travelodge in Stratford, east London.

Last month, Travelodge announced that it had added nearly 150 more locations to its list of target sites across the UK, including a number of “tourism and event hotspots”.

Majority of UK consumers ‘use vouchers’

New research from Deloitte and BDRC Continental has revealed that more than half of UK consumers (59 per cent) have used a special offer voucher when dining out.

According to the latest Taste of the Nation poll of 3,000 consumers, 18- to 34-year-olds are the group “most engaged”, with 67 per cent using vouchers. However, just 25 per cent admitted they went out more often than usual as a result of establishments offering vouchers and Deloitte believes it may be time for eateries to cut back on such deals.

Jon Lake, corporate finance director in Deloitte’s licensed retail group, said: “Some [operators] will find it difficult to determine the most effective method for phasing out vouchers and increasing their customers’ average spend while retaining their loyalty. However, our research indicates it could be achievable.”

BP renews cultural sponsorship

BP is set to invest £10m in the British Museum; the National Portrait Gallery; the Royal Opera House; and Tate Britain after renewing its sponsorship of the arts institutions.

Each of the four institutions have existing partnerships with BP and will now secure a greater amount of funding to help further develop programmes.

Culture minister Ed Vaizey said: “This is a significant investment, with £10m going directly towards the staging of world-class exhibitions and performances.”

British Museum director Neil MacGregor said: “BP’s renewed commitment to the Museum allows us to ensure that our six million visitors a year will continue to have the opportunity to experience important loan exhibitions for the next five years.”

Tate director Nicholas Serota added: “BP’s continued support over the next five years will be vital as we rehang the displays in 2013 following completion of major building works.”

£4m Hastings gallery to launch in March

Hastings’ new £4m Jerwood Gallery, which will enable the Jerwood Foundation to display its collection of contemporary British paintings, will open on 17 March.

Designed by HAT Projects, the contemporary art attraction is part of a wider £9m redevelopment of the East Sussex resort’s Stade area.

Capital and running costs for the Jerwood Gallery will be entirely funded by the foundation, and it is expected the building will act as an “important catalyst” in the town’s regeneration.

The gallery will incorporate more than 5000 sq m (5,382sq ft) of exhibition space, including a 180sq m (1,938sq ft) space for temporary programmes, as well as a sculpture courtyard.

Jerwood Foundation chair Alan Grieve said: “This is the culmination of the initiative to make a new home for Jerwood’s collection of 20th and 21st century art.”

Parkwood will maintain the existing programme

Local authorities back Silverstone masterplan

Aylesbury Vale District Council and South Northamptonshire Council have approved plans put forward for a comprehensive development of Silverstone.

A 20-year vision for the British Racing Drivers’ Club-owned venue has been drawn up to safeguard its long-term future as an international motorsport facility.

The decision to approve the outline plans – subject to section 106 agreements – conforms with the February 2009 Silverstone Development Brief. A kart track; an outdoor stage; a Museum of Motor Sport and three hotels are among the proposals.

Green light for Turnstone’s St Neots leisure scheme

Huntingdonshire District Council has approved plans put forward by property group Turnstone Estates for a new 32,000sq ft (2,973sq m) leisure scheme in St Neots.

The development is designed to revitalise the town centre and will boast a six-screen cinema; four restaurant buildings; and a public plaza, as well as residential units.

Turnstone managing director Chris Goldsmith said: “We are very much looking forward to delivering these long-awaited leisure facilities to St Neots and the surrounding area.”

Royal Albert Docks shortlist announced

Newham Council has said that eight developers have been shortlisted to come up with proposals for the redevelopment of the Royal Albert Docks site in east London.

Dauphin Holdings Group; Muse Developments; Salmon Harvester Properties; Wrenbridge Land; and St Modwen Properties are in the running to develop the 35-acre (14-hectare) site.

Micro World Developments; Canary Wharf; and Sinowest Construction Group also feature on the shortlist, with a developer to be appointed by September.

Operators chosen for 2012 facilities

The Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC) has said that it has appointed operators to manage the Aquatics Centre, Multi-Use Arena and ArcelorMittal Orbit following the 2012 Games.

It means that the futures of six of the eight permanent Olympic venues are now secured, with leisure trust Greenwich Leisure (GLL) to operate the Aquatics Centre and Multi-Use Arena.

Meanwhile, Balfour Beatty WorkPlace is to operate the ArcelorMittal Orbit attraction and has also been chosen to co-ordinate the maintenance of the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park once reopen from 2013.

The contracts will provide 86 apprenticeship places per year, while combining two venues into one deal will ensure the Aquatics Centre will require no additional public subsidy.

Baroness Margaret Ford, chair of the OPLC, said: “GLL and Balfour Beatty WorkPlace will play a key part in the creating a Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park that is a thriving visitor destination with world-class sporting venues both affordable and accessible to the public.”

National Trust welcomes planning framework report

A new report from the Communities and Local Government select committee urging “significant changes” to planning reforms has been welcomed by the National Trust (NT).

The committee of MPs has called for the removal of a default ‘yes’ to development from the new National Planning Policy Framework, following a review of the document.

Earlier this year, the NT had raised concerns the planning strategy had placed short-term economic gain ahead of other considerations, including the protection of the countryside.

Peel submits latest MediaCityUK proposals

Manchester-based real estate investment company, The Peel Group, has submitted plans for the latest phases of mixed-use development at MediaCityUK in Salford.

It is expected the new additions will create 459,000sq m (4.9 million sq ft) of space to the east of the existing facilities, which opened at Salford Quays last year.

Among the outline plans submitted to Salford City Council is 26,000sq m (280,000sq ft) of hotel space and 2,500sq m (269,000sq ft) of leisure facilities.

Office space, residential units and retail outlets are also proposed as part of the plans, along with public spaces. The development site spans more than 10 hectares (24.9 acres).

The latest phases are to the east of the existing MediaCityUK complex

Environmental considerations have also been taken into account, with water features and green roofs, the retention of trees and enhanced pedestrian/cycle access included.

PTI unveils Suspended Movement course

UK-based provider Premier Training International (PTI) has announced the launch of its new CPD Certificate in Suspended Movement Training, which has been on offer since late December.

The first of the courses, which are due to take place from the end of February 2012, have been designed for fitness professionals looking to learn more about suspension training techniques.

Available at a number of selected PTI venues, the new one-day course will provide an understanding of the theory and safe application of effective methods and includes a variety of exercises.

PTI sales and marketing director Victoria Branch said: “Courses such as the Certificate in Suspended Movement Training allow learners the opportunity to offer their clients a new and stimulating way to exercise.

“The methods and techniques acquired over the day are designed to integrate seamlessly with other training modalities so as to enable trainers to enrich the breadth of training provision that they can deliver to client.”

De Vere unveils new apprenticeships

A new apprenticeship programme, which has been designed to offer “high quality” employment opportunities to young people is to be unveiled by the De Vere Academy of Hospitality.

Due to formally launch on 1 February 2012, the De Vere Apprenticeship scheme is to last for at least 12 months and will see all candidates employed across the group.

The programme has been devised following consultation with the National Apprenticeship Service (NAS) and now complies with new national standards for apprenticeships.

De Vere Academy managing director Kellie Rixon said: “The De Vere Academy now has an even more robust structure that will allow more young people to become stars in the catering, hospitality, and service sectors.

“We are grateful for this further collaboration, support, and development being undertaken with NAS.”

Business leaders support £1bn Youth Contract

The leaders of the four largest employer organisations have backed the government’s £1bn Youth Contract, which aims to create job and learning opportunities for young people.

The British Chambers of Commerce, the Confederation of British Industry, the British Retail Consortium, and the Federation of Small Businesses all support the initiative.

It follows a round-table discussion headed by deputy prime minister Nick Clegg, which also saw representatives from Hilton Hotels and InterContinental Hotels Group attend.

While we all looked forward to Christmas and the well deserved break with family and friends, our thoughts have inevitably turned to shedding those excess pounds that we have accumulated following the parties, pies and profiteroles.

Now it’s time to turn those good intentions into brilliant deeds for 2012 by signing up for The Springboard Charity’s Latin Aerobics sessions. Strut your stuff as the Virgin Active Zumba-trained instructors guide you through salsa, samba and reggae-ton steps at some of London’s top hotels.

Springboard and partners Virgin Active have teamed up with Marriott Grosvenor Square, Renaissance St. Pancras, Lancaster London, The Tower Hotel and Grosvenor House Hotel, so you’ll be strictly sweating in some of the best venues in town.

The good news is that the cost of this programme is less than joining a gym, so you’re improving your health and having a great time all at a very reasonable cost. And don’t forget you’ll also be helping to raise vital funds for a charity that directly supports young people, disadvantaged groups and unemployed people by helping them get meaningful opportunities to get a job in the hospitality and leisure sector – one that’s managing to hold its own during this difficult economic climate and there is a demand for new talent to enter the industry.

The sessions started on 9 January at the Grosvenor House Hotel, and will run every Monday for six weeks. You won’t even feel like you’re working out because the fun factor takes over as you immerse yourself in the latest aerobic dance craze! Get all your friends, family and colleagues involved to boost your drive and confidence. Don’t think of it as a workout, think of it as a party!

We’re aiming to get 600+ people signed up to take part and, with the Olympics just around the corner, there couldn’t be a better time to get involved. Get fit as you dance the winter blues away! As Len Goodman might say: “It’s got to be worth at least a seven!”

Card charges face UK crackdown

The government is planning to bring forward new legislation to tackle “excessive” card surcharges imposed by businesses such as travel and entertainment operators.

It follows Office of Fair Trading recommendations and will lead to a ban on charges for all forms of payment, not just debit cards.

The ban will be enforced across "most retail sectors" and will ensure the UK becomes the first nation to introduce forthcoming EU legislation due by late 2012.

Mark Hoban, financial secretary to the Treasury, said: “[Consumers] have a right to understand the charges they may incur up front and not be hit through a hidden last minute payment surcharge.

“We’re leading the way in Europe by stopping this practice. The government remains committed to helping consumers get a good deal in these difficult times.”

The new 24,000sq ft (2,230sq m) venue, which is housed within the former Liquid and Envy nightclub, is approximately a third larger than the company’s inaugural facility.

DP Associates designed the 360 Play centre, which boasts three main zones covering physical play, creative play and skills play on ground floor level. Read more: http://lei.sr/a=S4k0f

Leisure firms ‘neglecting’ over-65s

The majority of leisure and hospitality businesses in the UK are “neglecting” the growing over-65s market, according to new research published by Barclays Corporate.

A total of 160 senior executives across the sector were surveyed as part of the study, with 88 per cent claiming to be “either engaged or highly engaged” with the demographic.

However, 62 per cent said their businesses did not offer any “specific services of products” towards over-65s and 82 per cent of those having no plans to introduce any in the future.

Just 3 per cent of firms polled are planning a major investment in provision for the over-65s market, despite its projected growth of 1.4 million people over the next five years.

Mike Saul, head of hospitality and leisure at Barclays Corporate, said: “This lack of tangible engagement with a generation that has, for decades, shaped what leisure is in the UK should be something of a wake-up call.

“As the industry struggles against multiple headwinds, it would be a mistake to overlook the opportunities this healthier ageing population presents.” Details: http://lei.sr/a=toJ8N
