A survey of US art organisations has revealed how technology – such as social media, the internet and mobile connectivity – can have a positive impact on their operations.

The Pew Internet survey questioned 1,244 organisations that had received funding from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) between 2007-2011. The survey found most organisations agreed digital technologies had increased engagement, made art more accessible and established more diverse audiences.

Funding boost for disabled sport

Sport England has announced it will invest £2m over the next two years to encourage sport as a lifestyle choice for disabled people.

The money will be given to the English Federation of Disability Sport (EFDS) to provide expertise to sports organisations to help them motivate disabled people to take part. Sports to be focused on include athletics, cycling, swimming, cricket, gymnastics, badminton, tennis, football, table tennis, equestrian, golf and volleyball.

Despite the number of disabled people participating in sport steadily growing since 2005, non-disabled people are still twice as likely to take part regularly.

Sport England’s director of sport Lisa O’Keefe said last year’s Paralympic Games put sport for disabled people in the spotlight and EFDS now has a vital role to play in inspiring more disabled people to get involved.

“We need everyone in sport to work together to challenge the uncomfortable truth that disabled people are still far less likely to be taking part.” Details: http://lei.sr?a=2zx1p

Exercise medicine centre for Graves

Graves Tennis and Leisure Centre in Sheffield is to become one of three regional headquarters of the National Centre for Sport and Exercise Medicine. The Graves HQ will be supported by three other, smaller hubs in the north, west and east of the city and work is underway to finalise the locations.

Sheffield’s 2012 legacy centre aims to drive forward the physical activity and health legacy following the London 2012 Games. The Government has allocated £10m to develop the Sheffield project as part of its £30m investment in the National Centre.

The plan for Graves includes proposals for a replacement swimming pool, additional tennis courts, gymnastics and outdoor football, an extended fitness facility and associated health, rehabilitation and research services.

The centre will promote physical activity and educate the public on improving health and productivity.

The National Centre has committed £5m to the Graves scheme and partners are now seeking match funding to complete the £10m-plus funding package. If all funding is secured, work will begin on site in late 2013.

Sheffield Hallam University and University of Sheffield, Sheffield Teaching Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust, Sheffield City Council, Sheffield International Venues, NHS Sheffield, Sheffield Chamber of Commerce, English Institute of Sport and voluntary sector will all be involved in the centre.

Steve Brailey, chief executive of Sheffield International Venues, which operates Graves, said: “We are delighted that Sheffield is one of the three hubs of the national centre. It is a great opportunity for us to really help improve the health of the people of Sheffield and the Centre will integrate into the sports facilities at Graves to deliver a unique service.

“We all know about rising levels of obesity and physical inactivity and Sheffield will be at the leading edge of the national effort to tackle these hugely important issues.”

Sport England funding announced

Sport England has revealed the details of its £493m, four-year investment cycle which will run up to the next Olympic year (2016).

Cycling, netball, wheelchair basketball and triathlon are among the sports being rewarded for progress made in participation numbers at grassroots level, all receiving funding increases of more than 30 per cent.

Sport England chief executive, Jennie Price, said: “This investment represents years five to eight of our long term plan to get more people playing sport.

A conspicuous legacy of the London 2012 Paralympic Games can be seen in the fact that 40 sports have now developed detailed plans to accommodate and attract more disabled people to take part in organised sport. At least 60 per cent of the £494m investment will support young people aged between 14-25. More than £83m of this will be used to support the development of talented young athletes in 43 sports, ensuring those with podium dreams receive the best possible coaching and support in high-quality facilities. Grassroots clubs in line for £2.1m boost

Grassroots football clubs are set to receive £1.1m of funding from The FA to boost the development of clubs.

Grants of up to £5,000 will be available to grassroots football clubs through the Foundation’s Grow the Game scheme. The initiative aims to increase participation by helping clubs to provide opportunities for new players, or training volunteers to support new players and teams.

The FA has extended the window for club applications to Friday 18 January. Clubs interested in applying for the funding are advised to visit the Grow the Game section of the Foundation’s website or speak to their local County FA.

The FA’s senior national game development manager, Peter Ackerley said: “The FA has invested over £100m into the Football Foundation over the last decade and it’s an exciting time to be involved in the grassroots game and the positive changes to small-sided youth football all contributing to a bright future.” Details: http://lei.sr?a=H3d8R

Plans approved for Newmarket Stadium

Planning permission for the Newmarket Stadium in Wakefield has been granted following a lengthy application process.

The 12,000-capacity stadium, which will be a home ground for the Wakefield Trinity Wildcats rugby league team, had initially been granted permission in 2010, but when Leeds City Council opposed the decision a planning inquiry was launched.

The resulting Local Development Framework report, released June 2012, addressed the council’s concerns, freeing the proposed site from greenbelt status and rejecting claims the stadium would blur district boundaries.

Having received the report, and supplementary information requested as a result, the Secretary of State announced last month he fully approved planning permission for the development.

Young people inspired to take up sport following 2012 Games

A new survey reveals the legacy of London’s Olympics and Paralympics on school children studying at United Learning Group schools, with the majority saying it has inspired them to become more active. More than 2,500 students aged 11-18 and studying at the group’s academies and independent schools responded to the survey. Results revealed 69 per cent wanted to try new sports after watching the Games, 83 per cent said it made them rethink their attitudes towards disability. Details: http://lei.sr?a=F8f9H

Tennis, BMX and skating facilities for Durham

Work is underway on tennis, BMX and skating facilities at Billingham’s John Whitehead Park, Durham, UK.

Work on the multi use games area will begin in the coming weeks replacing current facilities with four tennis courts. This is a reduction from the six courts currently available but the council states new facilities will be much improved.

A contractor has also been appointed to construct a new BMX and skatepark, with work set to begin in spring pending planning permission.

Billingham is currently undergoing a multi-million pound regeneration, which includes a new customer service centre, library, paving, lighting and seating.

Councillor Ken Dixon said there was high demand for the BMX and skatepark and the council had worked with a large number of young people on the design of the facility. Details: http://lei.sr?a=U3B3T

Aerobic training is the best mode of exercise for burning fat, according to a study by US-based healthcare group Duke Medical.

Researchers studied 234 overweight or obese adults with participants being randomly assigned to one of three exercise training groups – resistance training (three days per week of weight lifting, three sets per day, 8-12 repetitions per set); aerobic training (approximately 12 miles per week); and aerobic plus resistance training (three days a week, three set per day, 8-12 reps per set for resistance training, plus approximately 12 miles per week of aerobic exercise).

The groups assigned to aerobic training and aerobic plus resistance training lost more weight than those who did just resistance training. The resistance training group actually gained weight due to an increase in lean body mass. Aerobic exercise was also a more efficient method of exercise for losing body fat.

The completion of the first phase of the upgrading at Medina Leisure Centre on the Isle of Wight, has been delayed, with the Newport facility now set to open on 1 March 2013.

The delay is due to additional works required on a steel structure that will house a new ToneZone gym, exercise studio and dry-side changing rooms. The current ToneZone gym remains open while works continue.

The gym upgrade is the first of three phases of a multi-million pound refurbishment funded by the Isle of Wight Council. The delayed opening will push back the remaining phases of construction at the leisure centre, which include new bar, café and toilet facilities, now to be opened at the end of April, and refurbished pool, plant and wet-side changing rooms to be opened 7 June. Phase three, which will see a new meeting and training room and the refurbishment of female dry-side changing rooms will finish 23 August.

Medina Leisure Centre facilities include a sports hall, outdoor sports facilities, fitness classes, swimming facilities and a gym.

A survey by University of Cork research, funded by Safefood, reveal 398m euro (£324.40m) goes towards healthcare costs each year with the remaining two thirds of economic costs in reduced productivity. Eighteen weight-related diseases were studied and the main drivers of healthcare costs were cardiac disease (44 per cent), type 2 diabetes (nine per cent), colorectal cancer (12 per cent) and other cancers.
As we look ahead to the new year, I want to start by taking a last look back at 2012 and then move forward to set out the BHA's ambitions for 2013.

2012 will be known for three things - the fantastic Olympics which has done so much to raise the profile of 'Great Britain', The Queen's Jubilee and the wet weather! In 2012, we kicked off some important campaigns which have been gathering momentum throughout the year:

- The Economy – to champion a supportive environment for our industry to prosper in the context of global competition.
- Employment - bridging the gap between education and industry to build a skilled workforce for hospitality.
- Intelligent regulation – advising government on how best to cut costly regulation for our members.
- Sustainability – encouraging industry-led effort to develop economic, social and environmental success.
- Health – shaping industry and public sector policy to enhance the wellness of our consumers. We'll begin to see the results of our work in 2013.

We will soon be hosting the Big Conversation for Hospitality – encouraging leaders in our sector to reach out to young people in order to attract them into a career in the industry. Our campaign to cut tourism VAT to 5 per cent is also gaining traction, both within government and the media.

We'll be reminding government that tourism is one of the leading UK industries, demonstrating huge economic potential for export and staycations. We must aim to capitalize on the visibility that the Olympics gave us and be recognized as a major competitor in the global marketplace.

Crucial to our ongoing success is the need to invest in our best resource, our young people. This is the shared mission of BHA and our members.

We’re already counting down to Day One of world-beating British hospitality. It starts on 11 June 2013 at the Hospitality and Tourism Summit in London.

It’s going to be a busy year and we look forward to working with all our members to bring about shared success in 2013.

Privately owned Fonab Castle Hotel will open in Pitlochry on the Scottish highlands in March 2013.

The brainchild of Jed and Joanne Clark, the historic castle – which was used as a medical hospital during World War I - has been transformed into a boutique hotel.

A new wing has been added featuring 18 guestrooms in addition to the 13 suites in the main castle. There has also been 36 luxury lodges built on the grounds with some featuring private hot tubs.

Work is soon to start on the addition of a luxury spa featuring treatment rooms, a swimming pool and a fitness centre.

Designed by Leeds-based Edwards Architectural Services, the design of the new extension blends with the stonework of the original building.

The castle will be transformed into a luxury hotel by March 2013

Hotel and Facilities Management by Leisure Connection (HFM), an operator of outsourced leisure facilities within the private and hotel sector, has reported a 200 per cent increase in profits - just a year after a commercial restructure of the business.

Hotel transaction activity across the UK was down significantly in the second half of 2012, according to Deloitte.

Consistent with the first half of the year single asset transactions dominated and London remained the focus for most investors.

Transaction activity across the UK totalled around £300m in the second half of 2012, compared with £2bn for the first half, and £2.5bn for the same period last year.

The most notable transaction was the acquisition of the Cavendish Hotel by the Ascot Group for £159m.

Deloitte’s global head of hospitality Nick van Marken said in 2013 the market will favour cash buyers or those not totally reliant on bank financing to close a deal.

“There are a number of portfolio and single asset transactions that are currently being marketed. As a result, activity is expected to pick-up, although difficulties in accessing debt funding is likely to continue to be longer and more difficult to complete.”

Colchester Castle closes for £4.2m redevelopment

Colchester Castle in Essex closed its doors to the public on 6 January in order for a £4.2m redevelopment project to get underway.

The castle, which will reopen in Easter 2014, requires roof repairs, a heating upgrade, improved disability access, improved collections care for objects on display and improvements to the visitor experience. New displays will present the archaeology and history of Colchester from the origins of the town in the Iron Age to the Civil War Siege in 1648.

The Colchester and Ipswich Museum Service hopes the redevelopment will see locals make repeat visits to the attraction and states it will leave visitors in no doubt Colchester was the first capital of Britain.

The castle will temporarily reopen this Easter for visitors to see it cleared of its contents. Details: http://lei.sr?a=H9V7H

Rhinoceros take up residence at Chessington’s new ZUFARI

The first inhabitants of Chessington World of Adventures’ new themed land, ZUFARI: Ride into Africa, have arrived.

The Surrey theme park is now home to three white rhinos, which have come from zoos in Holland, France and Portugal, necessitating the need for the zookeepers to learn commands in all languages.

Over the next few weeks the rhino will be joined by other animals including Rothschild giraffes, greater flamingos, blesbok, Nile lechwe and Grevy’s zebra.

ZUFARI will be a theme park adventure crossed with a safari experience. Visitors will take a safari truck expedition into an African kingdom, where a specialist conservation team have stumbled on a previously undiscovered land. Guests will enter an interactive pre-show cinema experience to be briefed on the story, before forming a team and jumping aboard an off-road vehicle to head into the African outback.

Wales’ coal museum installs solar panels

Wales’ national coal mining museum will get a boost from cleaner solar energy in an effort to reduce energy bills and its carbon footprint.

Big Pit, which is also a working coal mine, has installed 200 photovoltaic solar panels on its museum building in Blaenafon.

A second museum, The National Collection Centre in Nantgarw, has also had 200 panels added to its roof.

Along with Big Pit it is part of the National Museum Wales and together the buildings’ solar panels will save the organisation 5m kWh in power over 25 years and 44,813kg of CO2. Big Pit museum manager Peter Walker said the museum would benefit from reductions in energy bills and a return from the Feed in Tariff.

“Coal is such an important part of Wales’ heritage and yet green energy will play a major part in its future. A solar powered coal mining museum is a fantastic way to celebrate this national journey.”

“The project was completed by Warm Wales, which provides energy advice, installations, community regeneration, project management, surveying, architecture and planning expertise. Details: http://lei.sr?a=8g6M3

HMS Caroline gets £1m lifeline to become museum

The last surviving First World War ship, HMS Caroline, has been given a £1m boost for urgent repair works with plans in the pipeline to turn the vessel into a floating museum.

The grant to the National Museum of the Royal Navy (NMRN) from the National Heritage Memorial Fund (NHMF), will enable works to make the Belfast ship, built in 1914, wind and watertight and to remove asbestos.

The restoration will be part of a two-phase rescue plan, the next stage being the transformation of the ship into a museum.

It will be available both to hotel guests and as a day spa and health club for local residents. Spa consultant Neil Howard has also been appointed to deliver the project. Neil’s previous work has included the spa at The Dorchester and The Lanesborough in London, as well as all three Armani Spas in Tokyo, Milan and Dubai.

More than £5m will be spent on the design and creation of the House Spa, while £5m will also be spent on refurbishing and upgrading the hotel’s public areas and its 40 bedrooms.

There would also be some camping pods to provide accommodation for walkers. Details: http://lei.sr?a=J3z5A
ARTS & CULTURE

Andrew Dixon to leave Creative Scotland

Creative Scotland is seeking a new chief executive, following the decision of Andrew Dixon to step down at the end of January 2013. The Scotland arts’ funding body has a budget of more than £75m of lottery and government money annually, and was established through a merger of the Scottish Arts Council and Scottish Screen.

Dixon has had a role in the formation of The Year of Creative Scotland, The Guide to Scotland’s Festivals and a new capital programme, the Creative Place Awards.

However, there has been controversy surrounding him. In October 2012, 100 artists launched an attack on the management and running of the organisation and author, Ian Rankin, was among those to criticise the organisation’s decision making.

In a statement Dixon said: “I am proud of what has been achieved since the merger. We have delivered new resources for the arts and established strong partnerships with local authorities and a number of other agencies.” Details: http://lei.sr?a=kr4b

Aberdeen City Council is making a bid to be the City of Culture (CoC) 2017, with the announcement of plans for a £30m redevelopment of the Aberdeen Art Gallery, as well as the creation of a £3m Museums Collections Centre.

Oldham secures cultural funding

A landmark project to unite Oldham town centre’s cultural “jewels”, including plans for a new Heritage Centre and Coliseum Theatre, have been granted development funding from the Heritage Lottery Fund. The HLF grant of £615,000 will support a later second-stage bid for a full £3.9m grant.

The council-led plans involve a new Oldham Heritage Centre being housed in the former Oldham Library and an Art Gallery on Union Street. A separate application to the Arts Council England Fund is seeking a grant towards a new build Oldham Coliseum Theatre, including a state of the art auditorium.

Oldham Council leader, Jim McMahon, said that heritage will be the foundation stone to rebuild Oldham: “The wider regeneration scheme we’re planning here is inspiring, because it will bring all our cultural jewels together in one integrated facility. That will significantly enhance our leisure, arts and heritage offer and provide yet another significant catalyst for regeneration of our town centre.”

Head of NLF North West Sara Hilton said: “Oldham has a fascinating industrial past and these innovative plans for a heritage resource centre will help bring that story to a whole new audience.”

Separate to this, there are also plans for the Old Town Hall to become a cinema, with restaurants. Details: http://lei.sr?a=b6H3C

Lightbox gallery given Big Society Award

The Lightbox, a museum and gallery set up and run by a group of volunteers, has been given the Prime Minister’s Big Society Award.

Located in Woking, Surrey, the attraction is staffed by more than 150 volunteers and runs an education and outreach service focused on history and the arts which sees community groups and schools work with professional artists in the centre’s purpose-built Education Studio. The local community raised more than £7m to develop The Lightbox cultural centre through charitable events ranging from golf days and sponsored walks to auctions.

Announcing the award, Prime Minister David Cameron said: “I recently met volunteers from The Lightbox and saw first-hand the dedication and passion they have shown to make their museum and gallery a reality.

“The Lightbox shows what the Big Society is in so many ways; from volunteers giving their time and expertise, to winning the support of the whole community for their plan, to generating millions of pounds in donations to make it work. Even now more than 150 volunteers are putting in their time to provide this service to others in the community.”

Designed by Marks Barfield Architects the museum and art gallery is the end result of a 15-year campaign by a group of locals. In 2008, The Lightbox was awarded the Art Fund Prize. Details: http://lei.sr?a=Z1h7A

Inbound visits to increase in 2013

VisitBritain predicts that inbound tourism levels will increase by 3 per cent during 2013 - translating to more than 1 million extra visitors.

Publishing figures from its annual review for 2012, the agency said that during the past year the tourism industry contributed a record £18.7bn to Britain’s economy, a 5 per cent rise in nominal terms.

Records also show that inbound tourism is now the nation’s third biggest earner of foreign exchange and has increased by 3 per cent in volume and 8 per cent in value since May 2010.

Tourism - both domestic and international - is also the country’s fifth largest employer, supporting 2.6 million jobs and contributing £115bn to the economy. In the past two years tourism has accounted for a third of all new employment in the UK.

Launching the review, chair of VisitBritain, Christopher Rodrigues said: “2012 has shown just what Britain can offer.

“It has re-energised our image overseas and triggered the desire to visit our country. Our job now is to turn aspiration into action.”

Northern Ireland suffers tourism dip

Research from the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency show a 12 per cent fall in the number of overseas visitors coming to Northern Ireland between January and September this year. The estimated number of visitors on holiday in Northern Ireland decreased by 3 per cent and those visiting friends and relatives decreased by 14 per cent, compared with the same period in 2011.

Visitors from the UK are down 15 per cent and there is a fall of 20 per cent from the rest of Europe.

Midlothian tourism village gets green light

Midlothian will receive an economic boost thanks to a £13m tourism village to be developed by Oakridge Property. It will include shops, a visitor centre, a hotel, restaurants and cafes.

Midlothian Council gave planning permission for the development in 2011, but it was called in by the Scottish Government because the proposals were contrary to the Edinburgh and Lothian Structure Plan and the Midlothian Local Plan. The government has now decided it can go ahead provided certain conditions are met.

Councillor Jim Bryant, who has responsibility for economic development, said: “This is a significant milestone in nurturing economic recovery in the area. We are confident this is the best location for this tourism village and we look forward to working with developers on this exciting project.”
Regeneration organisation Groundwork has been appointed to manage the development of the Hafod Copperworks in Swansea, Wales, due to start early this year. The long-term vision for the site – which dates back to 1810 and includes 14 buildings and structures of historical significance – is to become a hub for work, education, tourism and leisure.

Led by Swansea Council and Swansea University the development will see listed buildings protected, vegetation cleared, walking trails introduced, the installation of information panels and the staging of archaeological digs and other events.

The application was denied at the council’s planning committee meeting on 3 January, due to a lack of detail. The island’s buildings have been largely unused and fallen into a state of disrepair since the current owner bought it from the Crown in 1995.

The Welsh government is contributing £277,000 to the scheme and £244,000 has been provided by the European Regional Development Fund.

Professor Huw Bowen, who is leading the project team on behalf of Swansea University, said Hafod is one of the UK’s most important heritage sites, but has remained neglected.

“Because of its copper production, Swansea’s impact on the development of the world economy can’t be understated,” he said.

Mulalley secures contract for Stratford centre

Essex construction firm Mulalley has been confirmed as the preferred contractor for the new Atherton Leisure Centre, Stratford, UK.

Newham Council is investing £14.7m in the centre, which will include swimming pools, a gym, crèche facilities, disabled facilities, and possibly some housing. It will replace the existing leisure centre, which was found to contain significant amounts of asbestos and closed its doors for the last time on 31 December.

Construction on the new centre is expected to begin in July. Details: http://lei.sr?a=x9fsC
LYMINGTON & PENNINGTON TOWN COUNCIL

LYMINGTON SEA WATER BATH

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

The Lymington and Pennington Town Council invite expressions of interest for a contract to provide and run additional leisure and recreational facilities at the Sea Water Bath.

The Council owns and manages the bath which is situated behind the Lymington Sailing Club at the end of Bath Road, Lymington, SO41 3SE. The bath is possibly the largest remaining Sea Water Bath in the country measuring approximately 117 metres by 42 metres and 1.5 metres deep at its deepest. The bath is usually open from May to the beginning of September; however this could be extended should activities justify an extension to the season.

The Council is interested in entering into a fixed term agreement with a contractor able to provide suitable additional activities. These will complement swimming which is currently managed by the Council and kayaking which was introduced very successfully in the past year. The Council realises the potential for this and other activities to draw more people to the pool.

Expressions of interest must include the following as a minimum:

- A detailed description of the activities to be presented.
- An outline of the area or areas of the bath required for these activities
- Preliminary financial details including proposed charges for the activities and a rental proposal. The period should preferably be for three or four years but must not exceed five.
- Whether the bidder would consider the possibility of working with another company providing complementary activities.
- Details of facilities such as storage which will be needed. It should be noted that the Council has very limited space for additional structures.
- Full details of the contractor and similar projects undertaken including capability and expertise.
- Latest company report and accounts.

Expressions of interest should be marked clearly SEA WATER BATH INTEREST and addressed to the Town Clerk, Lymington and Pennington Town Council, Town Hall, Avenue Road, Lymington, SO41 5SE to reach him by no later than 12pm on 14 February 2013. Alternatively email: info@lymandpentc.org.uk

Apprenticeships scheme extended to 2014

A government-funded scheme that provides cash incentives for employers to take on apprentices has been extended following positive feedback from participants.

The Apprenticeship Grant for Employers of 16-24 year olds (AGE 16-24) pays some or all training costs and a £1,500 grant to employers who sign up.

Open to employers with fewer than 100 employees, the scheme was initially only on offer during the 2012/13 financial year, but has now been extended to March 2014. It has also been increased so eligible employers can claim the grant for up to 10 apprentices.

Business Secretary Vince Cable said it is a big decision for small, busy companies to take on an apprentice and the £1,500 grant was a token to acknowledge this.

The National Apprenticeship Service, which runs the scheme has also announced the minimum level of support employers can expect from the service, outlining a five step process they will use to match businesses with apprentices. This includes defining employers’ requirements, discussing the right training provider, determining the number of apprentices required, driving recruitment applications and deciding on the right person.

Premier Training International is bringing a fitness training method, used in Spanish and French speaking countries since 1990, to the UK.

The hypopresive method programme focuses on strengthening the pelvic floor, abdominal and core muscles with exercises that stimulate reflex muscle contractions.

Hypopresive instructor and perinatal fitness expert Kaisa Tuominen will lead courses across four training levels, which are scheduled for February, March and May.

Premier Training International’s research and development director Julian Berriman said: “Not only is it new to the UK market, but in the way the techniques address posture, abdominal tone and appearance, core strength and post pregnancy muscle function, it has benefits that will translate extremely well to everyday health and fitness. At Premier we are always looking at how we can improve our offering to fitness professionals, and ensure that we are bang up to date with the latest trends and innovations within the health and fitness industry.”

The first course takes place in February at Premier’s London Academy.

Leisure plans for Devon seafront

A public consultation is underway about proposals to develop new leisure and seafront attraction facilities on Exmouth seafront, Devon.

Located beside Maer on Queen’s Drive, the Exmouth Splash would include an indoor and outdoor recreation area with attractions such as mini-golf and an area of active water play. There will also be an indoor leisure centre and the operator will determine facilities.

A water sports hub would provide hiring, training and retail facilities for sports such as kite, wind and body surfing, canoeing and kayaking. Other facilities at the attraction would include retail areas, amusements and a public square as well as holiday accommodation.

If the proposal gets the go ahead the current Harbour View café building would also be replaced by a two-storey café and restaurant. East Devon District Council is urging the public to comment on the development before the consultation period ends on 14 January.

Panel announced for Art Fund Prize

A panel of judges has been revealed for this year’s Art Fund Prize for Museums and Galleries, now rebranded Museum of the Year.

Applications for the 2013 award, which was created in 2001 to recognise originality and excellence in UK museums and galleries, opened on 2 January and will be whittled down to 10 finalists of which a winner will be decided and granted £100,000.

This year, the competition is open to any accredited museum or gallery, where previously only those with a new project or development from the previous 12 months were eligible. From the finalists a £10,000 prize will be granted to the Clore Award, which recognises achievements in learning programmes.

Chaired by Art Fund director Stephen Deuchar, this year’s panel includes Daily Telegraph art editor Sarah Crompton, writer and broadcaster Bettany Hughes, historian Tristram Hunt MP and artist Bob and Roberta Smith. Last year’s winner was Exeter’s Royal Albert Memorial Museum for its £24m transformation and in 2011 the British Museum won for a project which told a history of the world through individual objects.
