Dragon's Den entrepreneur to launch new gym chain

By Pete Hayman

A new fitness club chain – nuyuu fitness – is set to launch later this year as the result of a £2m partnership between businessman James Caan and former LA Fitness national sales manager, Ben Silcox.

The new chain has already acquired three LA Fitness gyms in Slough, Berkshire; Livingston, Scotland and East Grinstead in East Sussex, with a further three sites to be announced within the next six months.

Caan – one of the stars of the BBC programme, Dragon's Den – is backing the nuyuu venture through private equity company, Hamilton Bradshaw.

nuyuu fitness clubs will offer customers modern facilities with a range of cv and resistance machines equipped by Precor, as well as Vibrogym systems, which are designed to accelerate weight loss.

The company, which aims to achieve significant growth in its first two years, will provide customers with the option of monthly memberships costing £19.99 based on a 12-month contract, or £24.99 per month for members who opt to sign-up on a non-contract basis.

Caan said: "We are talking about giving people what they want, at a price they want, without sacrificing quality. *The sector is ripe for a heavyweight investor to come on board and the nuyuu proposition is compelling. That, plus the fact there are some great deals to be made on properties at the moment, places nuyuu in the ideal position to spearhead growth."

Silcox, who is set to be managing director of the venture, added: "With nuyuu, we believe we have got the formula right and will be a force to be reckoned within the gym industry."

New football stadium planned for Nottingham

City unveils plans for new venue which could host World Cup matches in 2018

By Pete Hayman

Nottingham Forest Football Club (NFFC) has unveiled plans for the construction of a new £100m stadium at Gamston as part of the city's bid to be included as a host city at the 2018 World Cup.

The proposed inclusion of the Coca-Cola Championship club's current City Ground venue will no longer be considered as a result of the new plans, which have been presented to representatives of the Football Association (FA).

NFFC is working alongside Rushcliffe Borough Council, Nottingham City Council and Nottinghamshire County Council as part of the city’s attempts to secure Host City status as part of the FA’s bid to stage the 2018 World Cup.

Mark Arthur, NFFC chief executive, said: "After exhaustive studies of the existing City Ground, and how redevelopment of both temporary and permanent new facilities could take place on such a restricted site, the bid team have concluded, with the FA, that it is impossible to transform the ground into a fully compliant FIFA stadium fit to host World Cup matches in 2018."

Pontin’s reveals major new investment proposals

By Pete Hayman

Pontin’s has announced plans for the refurbishment of its UK holiday parks as part of a multi-million pound development scheme to be carried out over the next five years.

The company’s owner, Ocean Parcs, said the new proposals will go beyond the £50m scheme that was unveiled in February, with the Southport Holiday Park in Lancashire set to benefit from investment worth more than £100m alone.

Subject to planning permission, the Southport site will receive a complete overhaul to boast a hotel and conference facility, bars, restaurants, cafés, a lido leisure facility and a sports and health club.

It is hoped that the new facilities will also be made available to non-park residents to establish Ainsdale-on-Sea as a leisure destination.

Meanwhile, Prestatyn Sands in North Wales will benefit from new and refurbished facilities to extend its capacity to 5,000 guests, while a similar scheme at Brean Sands will enable the Somerset park to cater for 4,000 guests.

Lowestoft (Pakefield) Holiday Park in Suffolk will double in capacity and size to more than 100 acres (40.5 hectares), while Camber Sands in East Sussex will also be redeveloped.

However, the company has announced that its Blackpool holiday park will close at the end of its current lease as a result of falling visitor numbers.
BHA chief confirms July 2010 departure

Bob Cotton announces plans to relinquish role to coincide with next general election

By Pete Hayman

Bob Cotton, the chief executive of the British Hospitality Association (BHA), has announced that he will be leaving the organisation in July 2010, following the next general election.

Cotton, who was appointed as BHA chief executive in January 2000, said that the election would provide an "appropriate" time to step down from his position at the organisation, which is the representative body for the UK’s hospitality sector.

"Building up good relationships with government departments is a key role and my successor will be able to do this right at the start of the new administration – no matter who wins the election," said Cotton.

The BHA's council and national executive will start its search for a successor later this year, while Cotton will continue as chair of the Hospitality Skills Academy and as president of Hospitality Action beyond July 2010. Cotton is also a board member of Springboard UK.

Administration concerns for Tavistock attraction

By Martin Nash

Devon County Council (DCC) has refused to bail out the Morwellham Quay tourist attraction near Tavistock in West Devon, raising fears that the trust operating it may have to appoint an administrator.

DCC rescued Morwellham Quay three years ago when it was in danger of becoming insolvent and has so far paid out £1.2m of taxpayers money to the trust. But the council’s new Conservative leadership has said that no more public funds will be made available.

The attraction has received £1.2m of council funding so far

DCC leader John Hart said the loan was always intended to be on a short-term basis but the council will not immediately ask for repayment of money it has already advanced. He also criticised the previous Liberal Democrat council for lending the money in the first place.

Following an emergency meeting held on 4 September, the Morwellham and Tamar Valley Trust said that it believes that administration would be "the worst possible solution" for the Victorian-themed attraction.

In a statement, the trust said: "Such a course of action would result in a liquidation of assets, potentially crystallising losses in excess of £5m, both for the Trust, and for the other public funding bodies."

The last ten years have been immensely rewarding and challenging but it is now time to move on. The hospitality industry now plays an even greater role in the UK economy than it ever has done and, despite the current recession, looks set for further expansion."
Trust to run Bletchley Leisure Centre

New £21m Buckinghamshire complex set to open to the public in January 2010

By Pete Hayman

Hertsmere Leisure has been appointed to operate the new £21m Bletchley Leisure Centre near Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire, which is scheduled to open on 3 January 2010.

The facility will replace the town’s existing leisure centre and will feature a 780sq m (8,396sq ft), 100-staton fitness suite equipped by Matrix Fitness Systems to incorporate aerobics and spinning activities.

Milton Keynes Council (MKC) is hoping to gain Inclusive Fitness Initiative accreditation for the complex, which will also boast a 25m, eight-lane swimming pool; a sauna and steamroom; four squash courts; a six-court sports hall and a seven-rink bowls facility.

A gymnastics hall, a multi-purpose hall and a café will also be provided by the new Bletchley Leisure Centre, which has been developed by Bedford-based contractor SDC and will be handed over to the council on 21 December.

MKC leisure spokesperson Paul Sanders said: "With the transfer from the old centre to the new one straddling Christmas, a traditional time when leisure centres often close for maintenance works, this couldn't be better timed and a great New Year start when many people want to make those resolutions to get more active and fitter."

Craig Millar, SDC's director responsible for the scheme, added: "Many of us at SDC will always have a soft spot for this project; having been involved with this scheme from concept to completion we feel a part of the community in delivering something for everyone in Bletchley and beyond."

Glasgow legacy plans announced

By Pete Hayman

Improving the health and fitness of people across Scotland is at the heart of a new £23.5m Scottish Government initiative to create a legacy from the Glasgow 2014 Commonwealth Games.

'A games legacy for Scotland' was launched by Scottish first minister Alex Salmond and deputy first minister Nicola Sturgeon on 1 September, and outlines how the government aims to capitalise on the economic, social and cultural benefit of the Games.

Four key priorities have been identified by the plans, which aims to improve the health of Scottish people through the new Active Nation physical activity programme.

Sports Trusts and National governing bodies will be asked to outline their work in supporting more people to be active and improve their health. The trust has identified that 50% of the Scottish population is inactive.

Sportscotland will contribute £18m from its own £25.5m legacy funding pot to help support athletes and improve facilities, while a further £5.5m will be provided by the Big Lottery Fund 2014 Communities Grants Programme.
Total Fitness to alter members' terms

UK health club operator forced to revise agreements following OFT intervention

By Pete Hayman

Health club operator Total Fitness UK has been forced to revise its membership agreements after the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) took action to ensure the company provided fair terms and conditions.

Under the terms of the new agreements, Total Fitness will clarify the terms relating to circumstances in which the company can exclude or limit its liability for loss suffered by members, while the company’s cancellation procedures will also be made clearer.

Total Fitness, which is making the changes in order to comply with the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations, will also ensure members are aware that the company does not have "absolute discretion" to change opening times or to alter the provision of certain facilities and services.

Mike Haley, OFT director of consumer protection, said: "Gym agreements, like any other consumer contract, must be balanced, fair and understandable. We have worked closely with Total Fitness to secure these changes and we believe that consumers will find the new membership agreements much clearer and fairer."

ZigZag Academy will provide training for the interactive zone, including two computerised Sportwalls, and eight five-step wireless Xer-Dance platforms. The kit was chosen following feedback from a local school.

The council’s executive member for leisure, Felicity Baker, told local newspaper, the Weston and Somerset Mercury: "At the moment there are so many people who want to use our leisure centres and we know there are plenty more, so increasing capacity is a good thing for everybody."

Domestic limited-overs cricket will now be reduced from 50 to 40 overs as part of the overhaul.

Slow progress threat to 2012 legacy
Government pledges could be undermined as downturn hits councils’ sports plans

By Pete Hayman

New sports facilities in London are being built too slowly to cater for an anticipated increase in demand as part of legacy plans for the London 2012 Olympics, according to a new report by Drivers Jonas.

It has raised concerns that government pledges to use the Games to promote healthier lifestyles could be undermined, after the second Sports Crane Survey found that the number of facilities opened or refurbished since 2006 had fallen, mainly due to the recession.

Researchers found that a total of 61 of London’s sports facilities were either opened or refurbished between 2007-08 – the same number as in the 18-month period between July 2005 and the end of 2006. A Drivers Jonas spokesperson said: “The government will have to rely more on innovative policies than boosts to supply to encourage those who don’t exercise to start getting fit.”

Concerns have been raised that demand won’t be met post-2012

Tim Lamb, chief executive of the Central Council for Physical Recreation, said: “The 2012 Olympics are our chance to make London and the rest of the country a healthier and more active city, and it would be tragic to see that wasted.”

BUCS teams up with PwC to boost students’ skills

By Pete Hayman

British Universities and Colleges Sport (BUCS), the national organisation for university sport, has secured a three-year partnership with the global professional services firm, Price-waterhouseCoopers (PwC).

The first year of the new agreement will see BUCS and PwC working together to deliver a series of workshops at 10 institutions across the UK, which are designed to target the skills and attributes that students gain through playing or managing sport.

PwC will sponsor BUCS’ hockey

The Skills through Sport initiative aims to build on skills common to both sport and the workplace to improve students’ chances of getting a job.

James Chalmers, PwC’s head of strategy and talent, said: “We’ve long recognised that people develop and improve their skills both in work and out of it, and that’s why we’ve partnered with BUCS this year.”

The deal will also give PwC sponsorship rights to two BUCS sports – Rowing and Hockey.

Bangor set for NI's first Olympic pool

Sports minister backs £15m grant to help fund proposed 50m swimming facility

By Pete Hayman

Northern Irish sports minister Nelson McCausland has backed plans for the construction of the country's first Olympic-sized swimming pool, which is set to be built in Bangor.

In June 2007, former sports minister Edwin Poots selected North Down Borough Council (NDBC) as the preferred bidder for the scheme, which will see the pool form the first phase of Sport Northern Ireland’s Elite Facilities Programme.

The full business case and a £15m grant for the new 50m development, which is set to get underway in spring 2010, has now been approved by McCausland. The facility will be incorporated into plans for a larger leisure centre in Bangor.

McCausland said: “This represents a £15m investment by the Department for Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL). We have reached this point which will allow the project to move forward towards its construction phase, which is currently on target for completion in 2012 and which will create much needed construction jobs. "This will be Northern Ireland’s first Olympic-sized swimming pool. As a regional centre of excellence, it will be a state-of-the-art facility to be enjoyed by all the people of Northern Ireland.”

Community scheme for Lambeth

By Tom Walker

Synthetic surface firm TigerTurf and sports equipment supplier Nike have joined forces in Lambeth, London, to provide a new Sports Action Zone (SAZ) at the Lilian Baylis Old School.

The facility is part of Sport England’s community initiative for grass roots sports, launched in response to recommendations from central government.

Brian Dickens, SAZ director for the area, said: “The surface will be used by children in the local community who don’t usually have access to this type of facility and has already proved to be a catalyst for community cohesion.

“We now have a fantastic new football arena to go alongside our basketball area and I have no doubt that it will have a similar impact on the local children.”

Scottish hoteliers resisting recession

Occupancy levels on the increase as Scottish operators welcome more UK guests

By Pete Hayman

Hotels in Scotland have reported a 5.3 per cent increase in occupancy during July, despite an overall 4 per cent decline across the UK, when compared with the same period last year.

According to accountancy firm PKF, hotels in Scotland and Wales have both benefited from an increase in the number of Britons opting for ‘staycations’ this summer as Scottish and Welsh sites saw an 8.6 per cent and 2.1 per cent increase in RevPAR respectively.

Alistair Rae, a partner in the real estate and hospitality sector at PKF, said: “Increases in both occupancy and room yield indicate that hoteliers are not having to reduce prices to maintain numbers which is a positive sign that there is a relatively strong demand.

*Overseas visitors have been drawn by the benign exchange rates for the euro and it would appear that destination hotels on the West Coast and North of Scotland are also drawing in the UK holidaymakers.”

However, the strong growth reported in Scotland and cities such as Cardiff failed to halt the decline in overall figures for the UK, which included an 11.9 per cent fall in RevPAR.

MWB sees drop in pretax earnings

Marylebone Warwick Balfour (MWB), the hospitality group behind the Malmaison and Hotel du Vin chains, has seen the two brands’ earnings before tax drop from £12.2m to £10.4m. However, their combined revenue stayed at £52m and a higher marketing spend led to a higher than expected occupancy rate of 77 per cent. MWB’s group revenue increased from £134.1m to £135.7m. Average room rates dropped 12 per cent to £102 as a result of the economic climate.

Roadside dining makes the Good Food Guide

The Little Chef on the A303 at Popham, subject of a recent makeover by top chef Heston Blumenthal, has made it into the new edition of The Good Food Guide. With roadside dining having something of a dire reputation, inspectors from the guide were reportedly so impressed by the preparation of dishes, such as steak and Abbot Ale pie and braised ox cheeks, at the Hampshire eaterie, that they awarded it a score of two out of ten for cooking. The guide gives a score of two to establishments that display ‘decent cooking, good basic technical skills and interesting combinations and flavours with occasional inconsistencies’.

Admiral Taverns to sell 20 properties

Admiral Taverns has put another 20 of its pubs on the market, worth a total of £4.4m. The move follows plans announced last month by the company to restructure its debt with bankers Lloyds Bank.

Go-ahead given for Leeds hotel

Planning permission has been granted for a new £30m hotel in the centre of Leeds, West Yorkshire. The 244-bedroom hotel, on a site adjacent to Millennium Square and Leeds Metropolitan University, will be constructed by GB Building Solutions in a joint venture with developer Oxford Hotels. Opening is scheduled for early 2012 and an operator is expected to be appointed shortly.

Simon Wood, chair of Oxford GB said: “We are aiming to provide a high quality hotel, right where it is most needed. With so much development in the area, hotel rooms in Leeds will be in high demand.”

Accor sizes up business split

Hotel operator Accor is to consider plans to separate its pre-paid services division from its main hotel operations after reporting a 54 per cent fall in first-half pre-tax profits.

The company, which operates the Ibis and Novotel brands, said that the recession had severely affected demand for its upscale and mid-range hotels, while its economy hotel business in the US suffered a 12.7 per cent decrease in like-for-like sales.

Accor also revealed that it opened more than 12,000 new rooms during the first half of the year as part of plans to open a total of 30,000 in 2009.

In a statement, the company said: "Given the depth and speed of the changes ahead, the transformation and development of the two core businesses will be stepped up."
Council reveals new museum designs

Southampton’s new Sea City Museum to form part of Cultural Quarter proposals

By Pete Hayman

Southampton City Council (SCC) has unveiled the latest designs for the new Sea City Museum Project, which is set to form part of the wider development of a new Cultural Quarter.

The first phase of the Sea City Museum scheme, which has been designed by London-based architects Wilkinson Eyre, is scheduled to open in 2012 to mark the 100th anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic.

Exhibition galleries will tell the story of the city from pre-history to the present day, with a particular focus on the city’s role as a major maritime port and as a departure and arrival point for people travelling across the world.

Visitors will be able to experience what it was like to be in the Merchant Navy at the start of the 20th century, while displays will also tell the story of local crew who worked aboard the ill-fated Titanic liner. Special galleries will be shared between the museum and the City Art Gallery to create more space to display the council’s collection of paintings, before the second stage of the Sea City Museum Project expands the exhibition areas after 2012 to provide more space for the council’s art and heritage collections.

In addition to the new museum and the City Art Gallery, the proposed new Cultural Quarter will incorporate a refurbished Guildhall Square, a new arts complex, the Mayflower Theatre, the BBC studios and the Guildhall. Work is already underway to refurbish Guildhall Square.

By Pete Hayman

The Mary Rose warship at Portsmouth Historic Dockyard is to be withdrawn from public view on 20 September in order to allow construction work to start on a new £35m museum at the Hampshire attraction.

A special programme of events and activities will be provided during the temporary closure of the historic Tudor warship, which will remain out of view until 2012.

John Lippiett, Mary Rose Trust chief executive, said: “We have devised an imaginative programme of events and interpretations during the closure to give visitors a different, but equally fulfilling, visitor experience.”

Exhibition design group Event Communications has been appointed to develop the interpretive design for the planned £18.5m visitor centre at the Giant's Causeway tourist attraction in Northern Ireland.

Event will work closely with The National Trust – which manages the world heritage site – on the project which will include scoping and shaping the interpretative plan for the Giant's Causeway and Causeway Coast World Heritage Site.

Event’s executive creative director, Steve Simons, said: “The Giant’s Causeway is one of the great natural wonders. I am thrilled that Event has been awarded the task of immersing visitors in its splendours.”

RSC mulls temporary venue proposals
Courtyard Theatre could stay open until 2012 as part of theatre company’s plans

By Pete Hayman

A temporary theatre, opened to replace the Royal Shakespeare Company’s (RSC) two main venues in Stratford-upon-Avon while redevelopment work was carried out, could remain open for two more years.

The RSC intends to apply for extended planning permission to delay the closure of The Courtyard Theatre until 2012 to help with the organisation’s transition back to the Royal Shakespeare Theatre (RST) and Swan Theatre, which are due to stage full performances in 2011.

If approved, the Courtyard Theatre will continue to stage Shakespeare productions during the winter of 2010-11, as well as a range of preview events and activities, before The Other Place – a smaller, 200-seat studio venue – is reinstated by the RSC.

Liz Thompson, RSC’s director of communications, said: “Our application to extend the temporary planning permission will be for around two years. This includes the time required to take the Courtyard Theatre down, and also takes us through the transition back into the RST and Swan Theatres, our 50th anniversary in 2011 and the World Shakespeare Festival.”

Arts Council initiative to transform vacant shops

By Pete Hayman

Applications are now being invited by Arts Council England (ACE) for a £500,000 initiative to help artists transform empty high street shops into places promoting artistic activity.

The ‘Art in empty spaces’ initiative was launched in April to support a £3m Department for Communities and Local Government scheme to reinvigorate town centres affected by the recession.

Artists can apply for grant funding for a range of projects that aim to transform vacant shops into galleries, recording studios or family workshops.

ACE hopes that the initiative, which has benefited from an additional £500,000 funding package from the National Lottery, will enable artists to provide innovative ways to connect with communities.

Empty shops in Chester have already been used by Roam the Rows for the Chester Performs festival, with 46 events staged in vacant premises to provide an artistic experience for shoppers.

Painting sale controversy over Titanic museum funding

Plans by Southampton City Council to sell two renowned works of art from its collection to raise funds for the new Southampton Sea City Museum have caused an outcry in the art world.

Sir Alfred Munnings’ painting After the Race and French sculptor Auguste Rodin’s Eve are together valued at around £5.5m.

Following the award of a £499,900 first-round pass and the possibility of a further £4.5m of funding for the attraction, a spokesperson for the Heritage Lottery Fund responded, saying: “We would not normally expect the proceeds of the sale of heritage to be used to create partnership funding for a project.”

IN BRIEF

Interactive gallery opens at The Public

The interactive art gallery at The Public in West Bromwich has finally opened. A one-off £3m grant from Arts Council England (ACE) has funded completion of the arts complex, which was in financial difficulty following a doubling of annual running costs since its partial opening in June 2008. A new business plan submitted to ACE by Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council and Sandwell Leisure Trust secured the funding package.

Welsh tourism still on the up

The results of a tourism business survey conducted by Visit Wales have revealed that the Welsh tourism industry enjoyed a successful summer period despite the bad weather and economic downturn.

Of the 200 businesses which were surveyed following the August bank holiday, 39 per cent reported an increase in their guest/visitor numbers for the period June to August and a further 42 per cent achieved the same level of business as last year – while only 19 per cent reported a decrease.

The main reason for the success was reported to be more people staying in the UK. The caravan and camping sector performed the best out of the accommodation sectors, with more than a half reporting an increase in numbers.

The trend to book at the last minute has continued over the summer months. 34 per cent reported more last minute bookings. Further evidence of the affect of the economic situation is that 36 per cent reported that visitors are spending slightly less. The general consensus is that people are cutting their spending on food and drink. It’s also interesting to note that 20 per cent of those surveyed identified repeat business as a reason for an increase in business.

However, confidence for the autumn season is not particularly high considering how good the summer has been. This is because advance bookings for the autumn are down, and operators are once again relying on an influx of last minute bookings.

Brits take more holidays at home

UK residents continue to boost ‘staycation’ numbers due to weak pound

By Martin Nash

VisitEngland has released figures from the United Kingdom Tourism Survey showing that holiday trips taken by UK residents in England in the first quarter of 2009 have increased by 13 per cent.

The figure equates to 1.2m more holiday trips and over five million extra nights’ holiday taken, when compared with the same period during 2008.

While overall trips, including business and visiting friends and family, from the January to April period have remained at a stable 27 million, the holiday sector has benefited from Brits choosing to take their breaks close to home this year.

James Berresford, chief executive of VisitEngland, said that after much speculation and expectation about 2009 being the year to holiday at home – with ONS statistics confirming that outbound travel from Britain is down 18 per cent over the same period – the results are encouraging.

“Time will tell if the trend continues throughout the summer, but these early indications that people are rediscovering holidays in England is welcome news.”

Network Rail unveils high speed proposals

Plans for a new £34bn high-speed railway link between London and Scotland have been unveiled by Network Rail in a bid to meet an expected increase in demand over the next decade.

The High Speed 2 scheme, which will slash journey times between the capital, the Midlands, the North West and Glasgow, will be the second of its kind in the UK after the construction of the Channel Tunnel link between Folkestone and London St Pancras.

Travelling at speeds up to 200mph, Network Rail expects the new service to reduce journey times from London to Birmingham to 46 minutes, while journey times will be halved to both Edinburgh and Glasgow.

XL failure to increase prices of holidays

By Tom Walker

The Air Travel Trust Fund (ATTF) is to introduce an additional £1.50 levy on all package holidays in October.

ATTF, which pays for the industry’s ATOL compensation scheme, has been forced into the move after it had to dish out nearly £29m in order to repatriate customers of the failed XL Leisure travel company last year.

In total, ATTF paid out £36m in compensation during the year, pushing the fund to a deficit of £46.5m. It is expected holiday providers will pass on the cost to consumers.
Funding warning for harbour scheme

Further delays to Penzance harbour revamp could risk loss of government funding

By Pete Hayman

Plans form part of wider scheme to improve links with Scilly Isles

Government funds earmarked for the multi-million pound redevelopment of Penzance Harbour could be at risk if the scheme is delayed further, according to Cornwall Council.

Plans for the construction of a new passenger and freight terminal building as part of a wider project to improve the sea link with the Isles of Scilly were scrapped in June due to opposition from local residents, who were concerned that the scheme incorporated the site of the town’s Battery Rocks beach.

However, a report examining potential options for the scheme commissioned by the Route Partnership – comprising Cornwall Council, the Council of the Isles of Scilly, Penwith District Council and the Duchy of Cornwall – concluded that the plans for a new terminal building would result in the lowest operational costs. The Department for Transport has now indicated that the project could lose out on a share of a £44m major funding package if plans are not fully approved by February 2010.

IN BRIEF

Architects selected for new Worthing pool

Worthing Borough Council has announced that designs put forward by London-based architects Wilkinson Eyre have been selected for a new £17m swimming complex in Worthing, West Sussex. More than 100 expressions of interests were submitted as part of a design competition for the proposed venue, which is set to provide the town with a new landmark building and will replace the outdated 1960s Aquarena facility.

Council to consider new leisure facilities

Dudley Council has announced that it will consider plans for alternative leisure facilities following the closure of a local swimming pool on 31 August. Coseley Swimming Pool was closed after a safety inspection revealed that more than £2m would be needed to bring the site up to modern standards. Preparatory work is now being undertaken ahead of the demolition of the pool, but leisure chiefs have now said that they will look at the possibility of providing alternative facilities.

£19m town centre revamp underway

A ground-breaking ceremony has been held in Seaham, County Durham, to mark the start of work on a £19m scheme to transform the town’s St John’s Square area. Plans include a new public open space at the heart of the development, along with the demolition of existing Durham County Council offices and NHS County Durham buildings and the construction of a new multi-purpose facility housing a library.

Clyde Gateway scheme approved

By Pete Hayman

The proposals includes a hotel

A multi-million pound leisure and retail development, which will form part of the heart of the Clyde Gateway regeneration initiative near Glasgow, has been approved by South Lanarkshire Council.

Ashfield Land’s plans for the 268,000sq ft (24,898sq m) Two74 Cambuslang Road mixed-use scheme include a nine-storey, 170-room hotel, a nine-screen cinema, restaurants and 50,000sq ft (4,645sq m) of sports retail space.

The proposed £50m development will be built on a 7-hectare (17.3-acre) site at the heart of the Clyde Gateway site, adjacent to the route to the planned 2014 Glasgow Commonwealth Games Athletes’ Village and Sir Chris Hoy Velodrome and situated close to the M74 motorway, which is currently being extended.

Trump succeeds in fresh land bid

Donald Trump has been awarded outline planning permission for the development of five areas of land in Aberdeenshire that could be incorporated into proposals for a new £1bn golf resort.

Although Aberdeenshire Council approved the application as part of the Trump International Golf Links Scotland plans, the Trump Organisation does not own the five areas of land and will be unable to develop the sites until ownership issues have been resolved.

By now, you may have already chosen what you want to do after you leave school, whether you want to go to university, college or straight into work.

If you are reading this while attending the Leisure Industry Week (LIW) event, you are already a step ahead of many of your school-leaving peers – you are showing an initiative by getting out there and finding out about the options open to you!

The scope of the leisure industry is diverse, as you can tell if you look around you on the show floor at LIW. There are many opportunities for you to consider and each sector – whether it’s countryside management or sports coaching – has it own entry-level routes and requirements. Once you have an idea of which sector interests you the most, you are in a much better position to start considering your options.

If you choose to go to university or college, it may be the first time you’ve left home for long periods, the first time you’ve had to feed yourself or wash your own clothes, not to mention being self-disciplined enough to stay ahead of your studies. If you’re going straight into work, you’ll have a degree of financial independence that you probably won’t have had before, but with it comes the burden of working hard, being punctual, reliable and doing longer hours than you’ve previously been used to at school. If you don’t pull your weight, there’ll be no letters home to your parents, just a letter delivered to you with "P45" written on it.

For some, the thought of stopping studying and starting earning is attractive, and there are options that will allow you to earn while you learn, such as apprenticeships and in-house training schemes. However, be prepared to work your way up from the bottom. You will have to wait a few years before earning the industry average.

Alternatively, you may feel that you want to continue studying and do a vocational course such as an S/NVQ and HND; the aim is still the same – to get that first job, even if it’s only for the summer months. The more experience you have, the more attractive you are to employers.

The key is being prepared. It is easy to become confused by the amount of leisure-related courses and entry-level paths available, so you must seek career advice, research thoroughly and strategise the best route for where you want to be.

The training for each area differs considerably, and whether you want a career in health and fitness, arts, attractions, spa, hospitality or tourism, the decisions you make now could help or hinder your career.

So you want to work in leisure?

With the London Olympics just around the corner, there has never been a more exciting time to set out on a career in leisure. But what do you need to know if you’re looking for that elusive first job? We find it all out for you.
of training courses, some with more integrity and value than others.

SkillsActive, which is the leisure industry’s Sector Skills Council, is a good place to start. It is a government-backed organisation tasked with providing a coherent approach to skills training. A part of the SkillsActive group is the National Skills Academy (NSA) for the sport and active leisure sector. The NSA is a network of employer-led Centres of Excellence, which are designed to provide the skills required by employers through work-based learning.

According to Mark Hyde, national business development director for sport and active leisure at the NSA: “Employers want recruits that are fit for purpose, they need to be able to come in and be aware of what they need to do. These programmes, pending the recruit’s performance, will pretty much guarantee them a job.”

To give an example of such courses, Lifetime Training has launched a new NVQ Level 2 for fitness instructors and NVQ Level 3 for personal trainers this year, both of which will be funded by the government for anyone older than 16-years-old who does not hold a HND or degree qualification.

“Students will attend a four week classroom course and then a 12 week placement with support and mentoring from personal tutors,” explains Siobhan Wright, marketing manager for Lifetime.

Going on a vocational college course that includes on-the-job training, can be one of the more advantageous routes into a rewarding career. By mixing theory with practice, you get the best of both worlds and can back up your technical know-how with practical nous. There are also apprenticeships which range from leisure management to operational and customer services through providers such as ICON Training. Depending on the sector you wish to go into, this can be invaluable.

The leisure industry is hugely diverse offering a range of career opportunities

CASE STUDY Tom Heeley

Where are you working, and what is your position?
Leisure attendant at the Metrodome in Barnsley, South Yorkshire.

What does your day-to-day role include?
I supervise the pool and its users. My role involves anticipating any potential problems or issues before they arise, carrying out rescues and other emergency actions as and when they arise. I would be required to give immediate first aid treatment to any casualty.

What attracted you to leisure?
I have always enjoyed sports and swimming in particular, so this role was right up my street!

What attracted you to this job?
Since I was very young, I always thought being a lifeguard was a cool job, so I have always wanted to become one myself. Now I have achieved my dream!

How easy was it to find a job?
Quite easy, with the help of the Entry to Employment programme, run by ITS. I was put on a 21-week work taster programme, which gave me a chance to get a feel for the leisure industry by working at the Metrodome. Once the placement finished, I was offered lifeguard training and as a result of my success in this, I was offered a job.

How did you enter the sector? What did you study before getting your first job?
I was working with ITS, who coached me on interview skills and helped me put my CV together, then when the opportunity for a work placement came up at the Metrodome, I jumped at the chance to find out more about the industry.

How well do you think your course prepared you for this career?
It helped a lot and gave me the confidence to go out and get my dream job.

What advice would you have for school leavers looking to get into leisure?
It helps if you have a keen interest in sports and keep yourself physically fit, so you can pass the fitness part of the assessment for this type of role.

Is there anything you would do differently if given the chance?
Prepare more beforehand for the lifeguard assessment. I managed to pass it, but you can never be too prepared!
What’s your job?
I am working at the Furzefield Centre in Potters Bar, Hertfordshire, as a full-time leisure assistant.

What does your day to day role include?
My day to day role includes lifeguarding, rigging and de-rigging of equipment and maintaining cleaning standards within the centre by carrying out regular checks.

What attracted you to the leisure?
The money attracted me as I began work as a casual employee while still studying. Also the opportunity to work with a different group of people.

What attracted you to this job?
The centre is quite close to where I live and to where I used to go to school.

How was it to find a job?
It was rather easy for me to find the job because a family member already worked at the centre and encouraged me to apply.

How did you enter the industry? What did you study before getting the job?
Firstly, I competed the NPLQ course in order to obtain my lifeguard qualification and then applied for a casual job. In the sixth form, I studied double business studies and single media.

How well do you think your education course prepare you for this career?
I don’t think my courses prepared me for becoming a leisure assistant because they were more computer-based and not very physically active.

What advice would you have for school leavers looking to get into leisure?
I would advise all school leavers to keep their options open when looking for a job in the leisure industry.

Is there anything you would do differently if given the chance?
Yes – I would have studied harder when I was at school.

Is working the job what you expected?
The job is almost what I expected, although there are more cleaning duties involved than I previously thought.

What are the best aspects of your job?
The best aspects of the job are being able to use the facilities at a reduced price and working with a friendly group of people.

And the worst?
Early morning starts.

words on how to prepare yourself: "My advice to any youngsters thinking of coming into a vocationally-based training course in the industry is to spend time beforehand gaining some work experience in a hotel or restaurant. It doesn’t have to be specific – just any area that gives a feel for what it’s like to stand in front of the customer and to have to talk to him, or to experience personally the pressures in the kitchen or the restaurant on a busy night. "I think too many youngsters decide on a career in hospitality without really understanding what it’s like to work in a busy establishment at peak time. Any work experience they gain before they join a course will benefit them immeasurably. It’s far better that they start their formal training with their eyes wide open than to have them opened after they’ve started their course – when it’s too late."

STRAIGHT TO WORK
Going straight into work is obviously the quickest way into the industry, and it means that you’ll start earning straight away, while some of your old school friends won’t be able to rub two pennies together as they go on to university. However, with work comes responsibility. As previously mentioned, work is not school. If you don’t attend without good reason, if you don’t do what you’re supposed to, or if you’re simply not very good at your job, you’ll be fired. But don’t let that put you off. Stay focussed and try to learn as much as you can from your more experienced colleagues and superiors and you’ll be fine.

Getting a job in the first place will likely be the hardest thing, but our very own www.leisureopportunities.co.uk – not to mention the back pages of this very magazine – advertises more than 100 new vacancies per week, which should help you out. Once you see a job you like the sound of, you’ll need to put together a CV in order to get an interview. There is plenty of help available to aid you in doing this, and your careers advisor at school should be able to point you in the right direction.

After you’ve been invited to an interview, make sure you arrive in plenty of time, make sure you look and smell respectable, and generally act like someone the interviewer would like to work with. Be yourself of course, but be the best version of yourself. It’s also essential that you do some back-ground research: find out as much about the company as possible before you get there, and have some pre-prepared questions ready for your interviewer.

If you’re struggling to find a job, there are lots of employment agencies all over the country that will help you look, including your local Job Centre. Don’t be afraid to go in. Unfortunately, opting to go for a job without having any prior experience is one of life’s biggest Catch 22s. You can’t get a job without experience, and you can’t get experience without a job. One way around
BEING EMPLOYABLE

Regardless of sector, the leisure industry is driven by customer service and communication. So although a degree will provide a wider knowledge than the vocational route, employers are also interested in softer skills — such as being a team player and the ability to relate to others.

Julie Gallagher, HR director for Midway Attractions – part of Merlin Entertainment Group – said: "While qualifications within leisure, tourism and possibly travel give an indication that a potential candidate has an interest in the industry, we wouldn’t only take applicants with this sort of background.

The right personality, cultural fit and a real passion for what we do are very important."

Daniel Selmon, HR recruitment manager for Fitness First, added: "It is the candidates’ energy and buzz that sets them apart. Enthusiasm, drive and a will to succeed, a sense of fun and a positive attitude – it’s these qualities that we look for when seeking out talent."

And don’t forget the importance of first impressions! Before you apply for a job or attend an interview, research the employer and tailor your CV accordingly. Include a list of your relevant achievements and career aims. Finally, dress smartly, listen carefully and speak up at the interview to ensure that you’ll be much closer to taking that first step on the career ladder.

CASE STUDY Alex Tunbridge

Where are you working, and what is your position?
I work at Stevenage Borough Football Club as head of community and supporter services.

What does your day-to-day role include?
Promoting the brand of Stevenage Borough FC within the local community, in order to increase the club’s supporter base. This is done through visiting local schools, working alongside local businesses, liaising with local community groups and generating a media presence. On a day to day basis I spend my time between the stadium, training ground and local community venues, with every day being different from the last.

What attracted you to the sport/leisure industry?
I’ve always had a keen interest in sport and in particular football. I enjoyed being outside and football is a fast vibrant industry which is constantly evolving.

What attracted you to this particular job?
I’m from the local area and had been working at AFC Bournemouth. The opportunity to come back and work for the football club I had supported for over 15 years was too good an opportunity to turn down.

How easy was it to find a job?
I was very lucky and stumbled into my job at Southampton FC and AFC Bournemouth. However, once you have worked at one professional football club you will find it easier to get into others. Saying that, at the current moment in time there are very few opportunities available. Be prepared to start in a club’s community department on a casual and part time basis and work your way up.

What did you study before getting your first job?
I studied for GCSEs and A levels before gaining a degree in sports management at the University of Southampton.

How well do you think your education prepare you for this career?
A degree can really make the difference when you start a job, however, you learn so much more when you’re actually in it. There are some things which no coursework or exam can ever prepare you for, especially in the football industry.

What advice would you have for school leavers looking to get into a similar position?
If you’re in a position to study for a degree then defiantly pursue it, joint degrees in particular are good for the sports industry because it is so vast. If you’re not in a position to study for a degree then look at getting a job in the industry and working your way up. Football Clubs Community Departments are a great route into the football industry.

Is there anything you would do differently if given the chance?
I would have probably have taken advantage of some of the extra-curricular and education opportunities offered to me at school and university. While at the time first aid courses and seminars on sport seem a bit boring, they look great on your CV and can make a real difference when applying for jobs.

CASE STUDY Tom Helliwell

Where are you working, and what is your position?
I work at the four-star Best Western Premier Moor Hall Hotel and Spa, near Sutton Coldfield in the West Midlands. I am one of two Chefs Tournant at the hotel and I work as part of a brigade of nine chefs.

What does your day-to-day role include?
I get involved in all types of food production. At the moment, I look after the sauce section, which I really enjoy, but I also get involved in ordering, health and safety and supervising the junior chefs.

What attracted you to the hospitality industry?
I have always really loved cooking. From an early age, I used to help my mum at home and then at school, I did a GCSE in Food Technology. I also love cookbooks! I first started working in a hotel, when I was doing my A levels, on pot wash at Moor Hall in fact.

What attracted you to this particular job?
I wanted to move back closer to home and I have always kept in touch with my old colleagues at Moor Hall. The exec chef, Lee Romillie, is a good guy and when an opportunity came up to work with him again, I jumped at the chance. Lee is a great teacher and I have learned so much here – the variety is what I love because it gives you so many opportunities to grow in your job.

How easy was it to find a job?
The right personality, cultural fit and a real passion for what we do are very important."

Daniel Selmon, HR recruitment manager for Fitness First, added: "It is the candidates’ energy and buzz that sets them apart. Enthusiasm, drive and a will to succeed, a sense of fun and a positive attitude – it’s these qualities that we look for when seeking out talent."

LEISURE LADDER

The feelfit.com service is a points-based system aiming to help users to achieve their personal fitness targets by keeping track of every activity they take.

STEVE BARRETT
fitness director

How did you get to this point in your career?
I worked very closely with Reebok for 15 years as a Global Master Trainer at the Reebok University. There I was able to move into product and programme development. Two years ago, an entrepreneur wanted to invest in an online PT product, he approached me and that was the start of feelfit.

What is your day-to-day role?
My time is split between monitoring the live and beta sites. I like to keep an eye on the support emails that come in from members using the live site, while on the beta I’ve got developers, graphic designers and copywriters. I dip in and out of their work to make sure it’s all coming together.

What has been the high point of your career so far?
Last year I taught the warm up to the 26,000 runners of the Las Vegas Marathon. I was on a massive stage in the middle of the LV strip – instead of a starting gun they had $100,000 worth of fireworks!

How would you describe yourself?
Thorough and patient – I like to get things right.

How would your critics describe you?
I wouldn’t be surprised if I had been called pedantic!

GEORGE BOWDEN
marketing manager

What attracted you to the leisure industry?
I’ve always been sports mad. For me to be able to work alongside like minded people is a great bonus.

What are the advantages of working in the leisure sector?
It allows you to focus on your own well being. With my current project feelfit, I can easily keep track of my fitness levels and make sure I represent the leisure industry in the best light possible.

And the disadvantages?
I wouldn’t say I have experienced any disadvantages, apart from some events I am involved in roll into weekends and that can be tiring come Monday morning!

What are your ambitions?
We’ve managed to achieve the first points-based fitness system in the world with feelfit and I would like to have the opportunity to do something similarly groundbreaking for myself in the future.

What will your next move be?
Onwards and upwards! I was asked a similar question about three years ago – where I wanted to be in five years time. Let’s say I have two years left! What do you do in your leisure time?
I always keep busy, whether it is catching up with mates, playing golf or having the opportunity to do something extreme, like sky diving.

Any advice for people wanting to work in leisure?
Find out what sector really pushes your buttons and what qualifications you need. Once you’ve done your background work, target the top companies within this sector and speak directly with the correct person.
SkillsActive, the National Skills Academy for Sport and Active Leisure and the Register of Exercise Professionals (REPs) make up the SkillsActive Group. Each organisation plays a key role in ensuring our sector has the professionally trained and qualified staff it needs to offer a service that supports and encourages people to be more physically active, more often.

A fortnight ago, REPs encountered criticism in a Daily Mail report which questioned the credibility of personal trainers. The report cast doubt on the standards set by the Register and the quality of training and expertise held by personal trainers working in health clubs. Although the report omitted some important facts, the story raised key issues and illustrated just how important it is to ensure trainers and instructors are members of REPs.

REPs is an independent public register which recognises the qualifications and expertise of exercise instructors in the UK. It provides a system of regulation for instructors and trainers to ensure that they meet the health and fitness industry’s agreed national occupational standards.

Membership of REPs aims to provide assurance and confidence to consumers, employers and health professions that all registered exercise professionals are appropriately qualified and have the knowledge, competence and skills to perform specific roles. Members are acknowledged for their professionalism, their adherence to the industry’s nationally recognised standards and their ongoing education. They are also bound by a Code of Ethics and hold appropriate public liability insurance. However, REPs membership is not a statutory requirement for those working in the fitness industry, which is why we so often hear stories of personal training ‘gone wrong’. Anyone in the UK can in fact set themselves up as a personal trainer and carry out fitness sessions with individuals who may suffer from a range of chronic injuries or even serious medical conditions – all of which can be exacerbated through poorly designed exercise.

The Register seeks to minimise such harm by setting standards, but like any industry watchdog, it is not fool proof. Regrettably, there may always be a small minority of professionals working in any industry who act carelessly and fail members of the public. REPs works hard to minimise such cases in the fitness industry and the more aware members of the public are of the Register, the more effective it can become at protecting them.

GLL is planning to operate the exchange programme on an annual basis.

Calls for more work experience

Nearly half of school leavers failing to gain placements

By Pete Hayman

A new campaign launched by Prime Minister Gordon Brown – Backing Young Britain – has called on the hospitality and tourism industries to offer more work experience for school leavers and students.

Around 15 per cent of young people have expressed an interest in a career in either tourism or hospitality, but a recent Populus poll for the Department for Work and Pensions revealed that only three in five businesses across all sectors offer placements.

The survey also revealed that 40 per cent of school leavers were unable to secure work experience due to high demand or companies not offering placements. The Backing Young Britain initiative aims to create thousands more work opportunities through a partnership between public, private and voluntary organisations.

Adam Marshall, director of policy at the British Chambers of Commerce, said: “Many of our members continue to offer work placements – even during this tough economic climate. Businesses recognise how important placements can be for young people trying to improve their CVs, and for spotting future talent.

“If more and more businesses feel able to offer placements, Britain’s future workforce will be better trained and job-ready.”

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) has named the 34 English museums that are set to benefit from a share of £4m funding to help fund improvement schemes.

Grants have been made available through the annual DCMS/Wolfson Museums and Galleries Improvement Fund in conjunction with the Wolfson Foundation, which was first established in 2002 to upgrade the quality of museum displays and public spaces.

The largest share of the latest funding round was awarded to the Bowes Museum in County Durham and the Natural History Museum in London, which will net £300,000 to fund building projects.

HMS Belfast, part of the Imperial War Museum, has been awarded £150,000 for the reinterpretation of the ship’s command centre, while the Wiltshire Heritage Museum in Devizes has netted £150,000 to create a new Bronze Age Gallery housing material excavated from Stonehenge.

The athletics track at Queens Park, Inverness, has officially reopened, following a £135,000 refurbishment scheme.

The track upgrade will form part of a strategy to increase the number of children involved with athletics and was funded by the Inverness Common Good Fund and the Highland Council.
