The Sport and Recreation Alliance (SRA) has launched a nationwide campaign to make physical activity a “fundamental right” for all children.

The #RightToBeActive campaign asks those across society, including parents, to join the call for government to embed the fundamental right of all children to be active in policy, regulations and legislation.

“Government must consider expenditure on children and young people a vital long-term investment for the development of this country’s future infrastructure and economy,” said SRA CEO Emma Boggis.

“If change is to be created, there must be a commitment to a long-term strategy to make sure no child is left behind. Everyone can play their part and show support for getting our children active by signing the #RightToBeActive petition.”

The campaign has been launched on the back of a new study by SRA, which showed that 60 per cent of UK adults think that society “doesn’t do enough” to get children active.

More than 2,000 adults were surveyed for the study, with 78 per cent believing that parents are ‘most responsible’ for childhood obesity. 86 per cent of respondents agreed that parents should take more responsibility to get children active, while 62 per cent said government will not solve the childhood obesity crisis.

Jeremy Wright named new culture secretary as part of "Brexit chaos" reshuffle

Jeremy Wright, the MP for Kenilworth and Southam, has been named Britain's new culture secretary following a tumultuous 24 hours for the Conservative government, which saw the resignations of both Boris Johnson and David Davis. Prime Minister Theresa May was forced to reshuffle her cabinet following the resignations.

Matt Hancock, who has been culture secretary for just six months, is now the new health secretary, replacing Jeremy Hunt – who in turn has been appointed Johnson’s successor at the Foreign Office.

Wright was first elected MP in 2005 at the age of 33 and is a surprise choice for the culture secretary role. A trained lawyer specialising in criminal law, he has spent the past four years as attorney general for England and Wales and advocate general for Northern Ireland. This will be Wright’s first role within the Department for Digital, Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS). Political commentators have pointed out his lack of experience on the “digital” and “media” aspects of the role, with the minister only using the world “digital” twice while speaking in Parliament during his 13-year tenure.

He will also oversee arts, sports, and tourism.

“Very excited with new job as Secretary of State at the Department for DCMS,” said Wright. “It is a department whose work has a huge impact on our heritage, the things we enjoy now and on our national future.”

David Beckham and his development group – who are hoping to establish a Major League Soccer (MLS) franchise in Miami, Florida – have released the first image of the proposed stadium complex.

Beckham said the project will combine a 25,000-seat stadium with a park and commercial projects on land currently occupied by a city-owned golf course near Miami International Airport. As well as the home of the Miami MLS team, the plans include 750 hotel rooms, restaurants, retail and entertainment, along with a new 58-acre park and 23 acres of football fields for the public.

Beckham officially launched his MLS venture in Miami on 29 January, following nearly five years of negotiations.

“Bringing an MLS club to Miami has been a hell of a journey, but it is the only city for me.”

Beckham exercised an option to buy an expansion MLS franchise in 2014 and is a surprise appointment to the role of culture secretary.
Noella Gabriel, co-founder of Elemis, has been named president of the UK-based skincare company.

The move was announced by Elemis CEO Séan Harrington, who said Gabriel had helped the company achieve “unprecedented growth and success in the UK and EU markets”.

“To have Noella by my side as we continue to grow the company and lead the future of the brand is a privilege and an honour,” Harrington said.

“She has incredible magic and ingenuity as a leader – this next step for her is only natural, and so well-deserved.

“We share a common vision: to build a skincare brand that went beyond just cream in a jar.

“We knew from the start we were on to something special, and that it would take the sum of us all to bring to life.

“In her new role, Gabriel – who until recently held the role of managing director – will continue to oversee and manage the UK business, while supporting and driving the US business as Elemis looks to expand into specialty retail.

Harrington will concentrate on expanding business worldwide.

Gabriel said: “My dedication to developing, mentoring and boosting leadership is unwavering.

Scottish sports minister Aileen Campbell launches inclusive community fund

Community-based sport and physical activity projects in Scotland are in line for a cash investment thanks to a new programme aimed at changing lives and creating a more inclusive and healthier nation.

Sports projects and programmes can now apply for grants from The Changing Lives Through Sport and Physical Activity (CLTSPA) grant, which will look to deliver positive change in communities across the country.

The programme was launched earlier this month by Scottish sports minister Aileen Campbell. "This programme will provide vital support and funding and is a great example of organisations working in partnership," she said.

"The barriers to taking part in sport and physical activity are complex and varied, and through programmes like this we can help people overcome these issues and enjoy the clear benefits that sport and physical activity bring. "I am keen, through this programme, to see both sporting and non-sporting organisations use sport and physical activity to get more people taking part."

Brazilian football legend Ronaldinho launches cryptocurrency and digital stadia venture

Former Barcelona and Brazil midfielder Ronaldo de Assis Moreira – better known as Ronaldinho – has launched a new digital venture which looks to combine an entirely new cryptocurrency with a range of football services “in the real world”.

The project – in partnership with Malta-based World Soccer Coin – is aiming to launch a digital currency called the Ronaldinho Soccer Coin (RSC) and use it to deliver both “digital and real services”.

The partnership looks to establish a football academy, host amateur matches around the world, develop and operate a betting platform and marketplace, and develop digital, virtual reality (VR) stadiums.

"The stadiums will be created using cutting-edge digital technologies, such as block-chains, artificial intelligence and VR"

The Rugby Football League (RFL) has appointed Ralph Rimmer as its new CEO. Rimmer, who has been interim CEO of the national governing body since January, will take over the new role with immediate effect.

A former amateur player and coach, Rimmer has worked at all levels of rugby league – in development, performance, club and stadium management – and is an experienced administrator.

He was CEO of Sheffield Eagles during the early days of Super League and helped take the club to the Challenge Cup Final in 1998. He then held the post of CEO of Huddersfield Giants and later managing director of the Galpharm Stadium.

Rimmer first joined RFL in 2010, when he was named chief operating officer.

Commenting on his appointment, Rimmer said: “I take up this role with a 100 per cent commitment to driving Rugby League forward. I intend to work collaboratively with all to achieve its future growth and success.

“I believe that I understand its changing landscape, and am hugely ambitious as to what we can achieve together.”
Fitness operators looking to improve their member retention should focus on recruiting “knowledgeable, friendly instructors”, according to a new report.

One in five people who exercise regularly see having the “right instructor” as the most important factor in sticking to a new fitness regime – but just 4 per cent of people claim to have found their “dream instructor”.

The findings come from a study undertaken by management software provider Mindbody, which researched data obtained from gyms and studios which use its platform.

The skills that gym members most value in their trainers differs depending on the member’s preferred method of primary exercise.

34 per cent of those who mainly attend gyms for weight training value the trainer’s fitness knowledge the most, while the most important quality for those who do HIIT is an instructor’s ability to push them hard.

“We see in our data that a growing number of people are turning to pay-as-you-go classes and PT sessions as opposed to fixed gym memberships, which presents both a challenge and an opportunity for studios and gyms,” said Charlotte Newton, Mindbody’s senior marketing manager for EMEA.

Most popular group exercises revealed in new report

Indoor cycling has been identified as the most popular group workout in the UK – beating pilates and yoga – by a new industry report from ukactive and the DataHub.

The Moving Communities: Active Leisure Trends 2018 report indicates that group cycling currently makes up 13 per cent of all exercise classes.

Other findings from the report – which was based on data from more than three million customers and 150 million individual visits across 396 leisure centres over the past three years – include that group workouts are far more popular with women than men. While 38 per cent of women visits are for group exercise, the percentage of men visiting leisure centres for group classes is only 14 per cent.

Women also make up 74 per cent of all group classes.

Budget club operator Buzz Gym has signed a deal with equipment supplier Life Fitness, which will see the company introduce a “transformed business model” as it sets out on a UK-wide expansion. The chain will invest and install Life Fitness’ premium kit at its sites, as part of plans to combine affordable, no-contract gym memberships with a premium fitness equipment offer.

The soon-to-open Buzz Gym Oxford will be the first facility to launch with Life Fitness kit, followed by another new site in Plymouth. The duo of openings will take the number of clubs in its portfolio to five.
Les Mills has teamed up with awards and qualifications body Sports Leaders UK to launch a new partnership, which will support schools, children, parents and carers to be physically active through a “Netflix-style” platform.

Born to Move, which is a virtual, screen-based asset offering classes incorporating a range of exercises – including strength, martial arts and yoga – is designed to “support physical literacy, confidence and self-esteem”, according to a press statement.

The classes are marketed as “for kids by kids”, with trained pupils leading their peers through the exercises. They are aimed at age groups ranging from four- to 16-years-old and the sessions feature music hand-picked by their peers.

The programme will also promote physical activity outside school with free taster classes for families to engage with in the home via Les Mills On Demand.

“Every child in the UK deserves a healthy start to life and Born to Move has been created to provide children with the physical literacy skills and confidence they need to enjoy an active lifestyle,” said Born to Move project lead Justine Williams.

Leisure trust invests in ‘mental health first aid’

A leisure trust has ensured that all its senior managers are qualified “mental health first aiders”, as part of a proactive approach to supporting staff and members who may need help.

Twenty managers at Sandwell Leisure Trust (SLT) attended a bespoke training course to acquire the skills to identify, understand and help someone who may be experiencing a mental health issue.

Delivered by specialist provider Inter Wellbeing, the course also helps employees develop the skills and confidence to approach and support someone and guide a person towards the right support for recovery or successful management of symptoms.

“Mental health awareness and training is an increasingly important area for employers, so we think a proactive approach is vital,” said SLT business and commercial manager, Mark Wildman.

EVENT BIDDING

England plans bid for 2030 World Cup

There is growing evidence that The Football Association (FA) is planning to launch a bid to host the FIFA World Cup in 2030.

The FA is understood to have been satisfied with the “increased transparency” of the new voting system, which was used last month to decide the host of the 2026 World Cup.

A joint bid by the US, Canada and Mexico was declared winner against a rival bid from Morocco at a FIFA meeting on 13 June. Following the vote, a large screen in the room showed clearly how every member federation had voted.

It was in stark contrast to the secret ballot held in 2010, which saw Russia pull off a surprise win against England’s bid for the 2018 World Cup.

The bid for the 2030 World Cup has already secured one significant backer – the Labour Party.

The party’s deputy leader Tom Watson revealed Labour would throw its support behind a campaign which would see the tournament played at the “home of football” in the centenary year of the competition.

“It’s the national game, it can bring the country together, it can give us hope,” Watson said. “We should be bidding for the World Cup 2030.”

Swim England launches performance centres

Swim England, the national governing body for swimming in England, has announced plans to open five performance centres nationwide to nurture young talent.

The body is working in partnership with swimming clubs and universities to “give swimmers the opportunity to stay in the sport, achieve academic excellence and perform to the highest standards”, according to a release.

Located at High Wycombe, Leeds, Guildford, Manchester and Nottingham, the centres were chosen following an application process and have been developed using a “partnership model” to “ensure long-term sustainability”.

“We are incredibly proud to be working with local partners to develop these Swim England Performance Centres,” said George Wood, Swim England sport development director.

MENTAL WELLBEING

Physical activity "key to student mental health"

For many students the benefits of being active are multiplied
Sir Ian Diamond

Getting university students physically active and playing sport can have a dramatic effect on improving their mental wellbeing, social inclusion, and perceived academic attainment and employability.

According to the British Active Students Survey: 2017/2018 Report, students who are classified as "active" scored better than those classified as fairly active or inactive across four aspects of personal wellbeing: life satisfaction, feelings of worthwhile, happiness and anxiety.

The survey – published at the British Universities and Colleges Sport (BUCS) Conference – also showed that students who participate in both sport and gym activities reap the greatest benefits.

“For many students the benefits of being active are multiplied as activity to manage the stress of coursework deadlines and regular examination diets,” said Sir Ian Diamond, chair of BUCS.

Portsmouth’s inclusive sport complex approved

Portsmouth City Council has approved plans for an inclusive and sustainable sports facility at University of Portsmouth.

Designed by FaulknerBrowns Architects, the complex will include a 25m, eight-lane swimming pool, an eight-court sports hall, a health club with a 175-station gym and multifunctional studios, climbing and bouldering facilities, two flexible squash courts and a ski simulator.

The building will also set new standards for sustainability for a sports building and is on target to be the first of this type in the UK to be BREEAM rated ‘Outstanding’.

“Having worked closely with the university and planners, this will set a significant benchmark for future buildings in the university masterplan and generally across the city,” said Michael Hall, partner at FaulknerBrowns Architects.

PUBLIC LEISURE

£20m leisure centre planned for Bingham

Rushcliffe Borough Council (RBC) has revealed it is exploring plans to build a new leisure centre in Bingham, Nottinghamshire.

In a cabinet meeting earlier this month, the council gave the go-ahead for “detailed investigations” into constructing a centre on land owned by the authority in the town to start as part of a possible wider commercial development of the site.

The study will look into the feasibility of building a centre housing a swimming pool, large health club with gym floor and exercise studios, changing rooms and community spaces.

The council said it is “keen to align the leisure centre with the wider ongoing Bingham master-planning process and future housing development”.

“We want a high-quality leisure centre and community facility for residents in Bingham that will support healthy lifestyles and complement the growth of the town in the years to come,” said Debbie Mason, RBC’s deputy leader.

“The cost of building a new leisure centre is significant, so we are undertaking a further study to give careful consideration not only to ensure the location of the site is correct in the wider plans for the town, but also in the long term so the site can give us the sufficient financial return to make it viable.”

Having worked with the sector to set new professional standards, CIMSPA has now endorsed hundreds of training providers, qualifications and pieces of CPD.

It’s a great achievement, but in reality it means very little unless we can validate the value of these endorsements through a robust quality assurance process.

Embracing progress
I’m delighted to say that this final piece in the jigsaw is now in place and CIMSPA’s new team of quality assurance associates have been conducting external visits to our educational partners to verify that the delivery and assessment of their training meets the agreed employer-led professional standards.

The experience to date has been hugely positive. Eager to showcase their best practice and to distance themselves from substandard providers, our education partners have wholeheartedly embraced these quality assurance visits.

They welcome the immediate verbal feedback they receive from the associates as well as the detailed written report, which identifies both good practice and areas for improvement.

We’ve been immensely impressed by the quality of the training that has so far been assessed – we really do have some great training providers delivering high calibre training that meets the needs of employers.

Wheat from the chaff
But we’re not so naive as to believe that all external quality assurance visits to education partners will be so successful. And that’s the point of the system. Yes, we want to recognise great training, but it’s also imperative that we identify inferior education which fails employers, employees and ultimately the entire sector.

Employers currently invest around £500,000 a year in retraining people who have received poor education and training. The past lack of regulation has allowed some providers to peddle inadequate training products, but the launch of CIMSPA’s new quality assurance function allows us to eradicate bad practice.

We now have a system in place that will ensure that education partners don’t fall below the standards that we have worked so hard with the industry to raise. Our goal is to always find organisations delivering excellence – nothing less. This is precisely what the sector has asked of CIMSPA.

Carden Park plans £10m ‘world class’ spa

Carden Park Hotel in Cheshire, UK has broken ground on a new £10m luxury spa. Expected to open next summer, the spa will be a stand-alone facility located in the estate grounds, and will play host to 14 treatment rooms, relaxation areas, as well as a restaurant and lounge area, offering far reaching views of the surrounding countryside. A beauty lounge will offer a range of beauty treatments including manicures, pedicures and lash and brow services.

A number of different thermal experiences, including a vitality pool, ice fountain, snow shower, experience showers, foot baths and heated loungers will be on offer, as well as an outdoor-spa garden with hydrotherapy pool, outdoor sauna, hot tubs, private ‘secret garden’ relaxation spaces, fire pits and a champagne bar.

“This is a momentous leap forward for the business as we invest in what will be one of the most luxurious spa developments in the UK,” said Carden Park general manager Hamish Ferguson.

HB Architects, Pave Always Ltd Building Contractors, Barr & Wray Interior Design and spa consultant Nicki Kurran have been appointed to create the spa.

Luxury Lodges adds new treetop accommodation

Luxury Lodges, an operator of luxury self-catering holiday resorts, has expanded its accommodation portfolio with the launch of The Treehouse, an experiential offering designed to make guests feel at one with nature.

Situated in the heart of the Clowance resort in St Ives, Cornwall, the Treehouses form part of the company’s collaboration with entrepreneur David Lloyd, and offer panoramic views of the surrounding parkland and lake.

Each 20sq m (65sq ft) treehouse can sleep up to four people, and offers two spacious bedrooms, expansive open-plan living spaces and a 360-degree terrace, as well as a private, open-air roll top bath.

“We are thrilled to introduce the Treehouse to our growing collection of unique self-catering properties throughout the UK,” said Luxury Lodges MD Ross Grieve.

Formby Hall Golf Resort & Spa in Liverpool has unveiled multi-million-pound plans to transform the four-star resort into a luxury leisure destination.

Planning applications submitted to Sefton Council by resort operator CS Hotel Solutions outline an £18m revamp project including a new spa building and hotel expansion, as well as 20 lakeside ‘eco lodges’ for overnight stays.

The resort will undergo a significant redevelopment that will include the creation of a new two-storey wing for the hotel. The new wing will play host to 63 bedrooms, while the existing spa and health club will be converted to make space for a further 20 rooms.

The new spa will have its own building, described as “a high-end space”. It will feature treatment rooms, relaxation areas and a thermal suite offering a variety of thermal experiences, saunas, hot tubs and outdoor vitality pools.

On-demand massage service The Massage Company (TMC) is set to expand its UK footprint with the opening of its second massage centre in Tunbridge Wells, Kent.

Expected to open in September this year, the £500,000 centre will be located inside a 200-year-old brewery on Monson Street and will house 14 treatment rooms, including a duo treatment room for couples, and a large reception area.

It will be the first of three locations operated by Taran Bassi, TMC’s first franchisee. The centre will employ up to 30 members of staff and will offer a range of massage treatments.

Earlier this year, Massage Company founder Charlie Thompson said the business is in the middle of a recruitment drive and is actively looking to expand.

“Our aim is to educate the UK public and to establish massages as part of people’s approach to a better and more balanced lifestyle,” Thompson told Leisure Opportunities.

Young designers to rework Cadogan

Luxury travel brand Belmond has chosen two young designers to bring on board for its Belmond Hotel Cadogan in Chelsea, supplying design products for the London hotel’s scheduled reopening later this year.

Product and furniture designer Mac Collins and sustainable design advocate Antonia (Toni) Packham were named by Belmond as their choices from a pool of 3,000 young hopeful designers who displayed their work at the New Designers exhibition in Islington, London.

Collins, who is just about to graduate from the University of Northumbria, exhibited his chair design ‘Iklwa’ - an ultramarine throne, inspired by the aesthetic of 20th Century funk and rap movement of Afrofuturism. It was praised by judges as “a thought-provoking, culturally enriched and beautiful piece of craftsmanship that demonstrates, in its exciting use of colour and considered appreciation of shape, an understanding of the power of design to evoke emotion, capture the imagination and pay homage to heritage”.

“We were blown away by Mac and Toni’s raw talent and fresh-thinking approach to design,” said Belmond senior vice president of brand and marketing, Arnaud Champenois.

Northern Irish hotels report 2017 boom in uptake

An “outstanding” 2017 has been reported by the Northern Irish hotels industry, with record numbers of rooms being sold, according to a leading chartered accountancy firm.

ASM Chartered Accountants, which analyses the sector annually, reported that 2.3 million rooms were sold in 2017, while occupancy reached 77 per cent and the average room rate saw an uplift of 10 per cent to £90.48 a night. Total revenue per room climbed to £66,206 - a 43 per cent rise in two years.

ASM called Derry “the star of the show” in Northern Ireland’s hotel boom, with improved profitability particularly highlighted.

“We were blown away by Mac and Toni’s raw talent and fresh-thinking approach to design,” said Belmond senior vice president of brand and marketing, Arnaud Champenois.

Weather leads to tourism industry sizzle

The current heatwave in Britain has resulted in an economic upturn for the country’s tourism sector. The Belfast Telegraph recently reported that hoteliers in Northern Ireland are experiencing a “bumper summer”, with ‘staycations’ growing due to “temperatures which have rivalled the Mediterranean”. According to the latest available figures from Visit Britain, the first nine months of 2017 saw 30.1m tourists flock to the UK, an uplift of 7 per cent on the same period in 2016. Analysts have predicted another rise in 2018, in part owing to a weakened pound. Visit Britain has also predicted that the recent royal wedding will cause a 15 per cent rise in visitors from the US, while the Independent has reported that the number of visitors from China increased by 33 per cent to 268,000.

Speaking to the BBC, Patricia Yates, director of Visit Britain, said the hot weather is serving as a “timely reminder” for the rising numbers of people who are “making a late call on where to go on holiday”. Yates noted that late bookings on the rise, with nearly 80 per cent of all holidays booked occurring within three months of the date of travel.

Tourism bodies welcome Brexit paper with caution

The UK travel industry has offered a “cautious welcome” to the government’s Brexit white paper, after the document acknowledged some of the sector’s key concerns – such as worries over barriers being created for people visiting the UK from EU.

Following the publishing of the Brexit plans, UKinbound’s chair Mark McVay said that the tourism body welcomed the government’s proposals for the new relationship with the EU, which “recognises and supports the significant contribution that tourism makes to the UK economy”.

"We have consistently argued that frictionless arrangements before, during and at arrival at the UK’s borders are vital to an industry which in 2017 brought in an estimated £25bn to the UK economy and £10bn from EU tourism alone,” said McVay.

English Heritage launches castle campaign

English Heritage has launched a new campaign for families to visit its castles, after a survey by the organisation revealed that children’s memories of castles are more than twice as likely to have come from film and fiction instead of a real-life visit.

A 2,000-person survey of both children and adults showed that while most adults’ first castle sightings are likely to have been in real life, almost two thirds of children remember their first memories from fictitious castles featured in the likes of Harry Potter, Cinderella and Frozen.

Of the children surveyed, more than two thirds said that they enjoyed visiting castles, however less than 40 per cent had visited one in the last year, and 12 per cent had never been to one.

English Heritage manages 66 castles – more than any other organisation in Britain. In an effort to boost attendance through the summer months, the body has launched #LoveCastles – a campaign aiming to bring more families to these historic sites.

“While most of us can remember our first trip to a castle, today’s children are increasingly likely to catch their first glimpse of a castle on a screen,” said Kate Mavor, CEO of English Heritage.

Science Museum urged to end fossil fuel partnerships

A collection of 50 scientists has urged the London Science Museum to end three oil company partnerships, with the collective arguing the sponsorships are “undermining” the museum as a scientific institution.

Called Culture Unstained, the activist collective are urging the Science Museum to drop deals with fossil fuel companies BP, Shell and Equinor.

The group says that the museum approved sponsorship deals with these companies despite being aware they are involved in alleged “corruption, pollution and links to human rights violations”.

“Climate change is real and urgent”

Naomi Oreskes

To accept sponsorship from an industry that has worked to cast doubt on climate science undermines the scientific community’s clear message that climate change is real and urgent,” said professor Naomi Oreskes, one of the signatories.

NATURE ATTRACTIONS

Denizen envisions vertical gallery for Inverewe Garden

Plans have been lodged by the National Trust for Scotland (NTS) to build a vertical gallery and bird hide in a 19th-century botanical garden in the country's Highlands.

London-based architects Denizen Works are behind the proposal for Inverewe Garden, which was first opened in 1862 and features more than 2,500 exotic plants and flowers. The 20m-tall (65.6ft) tower is designed as a “landmark to encourage more people to visit the garden”. “Our response to this open brief from the National Trust for Scotland saw us explore the history of Inverewe and take inspiration from the natural world,” said a statement from the architects.

Planning has been submitted to Highland Council, with work to start in Q3. The project is expected to be complete by the second quarter of 2019.

AWARDS

Tate St Ives has been named the winner of this year’s Art Fund Museum of the Year. The awards ceremony took place at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, where Anne Barlow, the director of Tate St Ives, was presented the prize – worth £100,000 – by artist Isaac Julien and the recently crowned ‘world’s best teacher’, Andria Zafirakou.

The Gallery underwent an extensive expansion project which was only unveiled in 2017. The development doubles the space for showing art, adding almost 600sq m (6,500sq ft) of galleries, and creates spectacular new studios for learning activities. It gives the gallery enough space to accommodate the 250,000 visitors it welcomes each year.

Other finalists shortlisted for the award included Weybridge’s Brooklands Museum, Ferens Art Gallery in Hull, Glasgow Women’s Library and The Postal Museum in London.

Could indoor cycling be harmful?

Research in the US has suggested that indoor cycling classes could cause kidney damage “comparable to car crashes”

High-intensity indoor cycling classes carry a “significant risk of kidney damage” – especially for first-time participants – according to a report in the American Journal of Medicine. The study claims that indoor cycling classes – particularly those which simulate climbing hills and cycling on flat roads and include sprint cycles – may result in a rhabdomyolysis.

Rhabdomyolysis is a condition where severe muscle trauma – due to a lack of oxygen – causes muscles to break down and release their contents into the bloodstream. The syndrome, typically found in victims of a crush injury – such as a result of a car crash – can lead to serious complications, including kidney failure hours after the muscle damage.

“Risk factors for the development of rhabdomyolysis are related to the intensity of the exercise, the conditioning of the participant, hydration, and body temperature, in addition to other potential contributing factors,” the report says.

“Physiology studies have demonstrated that significant numbers of calories are burned, fluid losses are significant and body temperatures increase during indoor cycling classes.” The study presented details of three “unusual cases of exertional...

In the first case, rhabdomyolysis developed in a 33-year-old woman following 15 minutes of a class. In the second case, it occurred in a 20-year-old male who exercises regularly.

In the third, most serious case, a 33-year-old female developed “biopsy-proved acute kidney injury” secondary to exertional rhabdomyolysis and required hemodialysis.

“Due to the severity of her renal failure and history of anti-inflammatory drug use, a kidney biopsy was performed, which confirmed rhabdomyolysis,” the report described the third case.

IN NEED OF GUIDANCE
As a result of the study, the authors – a team from the Westchester Medical Center in New York, US – recommended a set of guidelines for indoor cycling be set up.

“The only way to prevent rhabdomyolysis resulting from indoor cycling is to have safety guidelines set up,” the authors write in the report.

“Beginners need to know how to gradually increase the time and cadence on the indoor cycle.

“They need to be made aware of the importance of staying hydrated and the need to avoid nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. Participants need to be informed of the risks of rhabdomyolysis. Guidelines should include information about the signs and symptoms of rhabdomyolysis and the urgency of seeking hospital treatment when such manifestations occur.”

Floating pools

New floating, urban sea pools are heading to coastal cities and towns around the world, with the first ones to be rolled out in Finland.

Finnish architects OOPEAA have won a competition to design and create floating sea pools for public use in coastal cities and towns around the world, with the first to be rolled out in Oulu in the north of Finland.

Following a pilot project in Helsinki in 2016, city development and investment group Töölö Urban ran the competition in April 2018 to commission a firm to design the Allas Sea Pools. OOPEAA’s entry was selected as the winner, in part due to its flexible building system.

The future sea pools will be built on floating platforms on coastal sites in places where it is not possible to build on land. Two structures either side will contain spa, sauna and wellness facilities and a restaurant and cafe, respectively, along with informal gathering areas and other public spaces. The concept is ‘scalable and applicable to any site in the world’ according to OOPEAA, with the floating platforms varying in size from...

Raoul Grünstein, MD of Töölö Urban
2,000sq m to 10,000sq m (21,500sq ft to 107,600sq ft).

Designed to "activate people's relationship to the waterfront by providing a comfortable and inviting atmosphere," the concept includes a 'custom toolbox' allowing for variables such as 'customer needs, seasonal changes and local requirements'.

This has been introduced to ensure that each build is adaptable, while still keeping some construction uniformity. The timber structure is partly constructed out of cross-laminated timber (CLT) elements, which Helsinki-based OOPEAA said is an "ecological choice that allows for flexibility in application as well as for sustainability in the life cycle of the building".

Raoul Grünstein, MD of Töölö Urban, said: “Our aim is to roll the concept out first in Finland and then all across Europe. Our target for the Oulu site is 70,000 bathers a year. “In Helsinki, we have had more than 100,000 visits during the first five months of its opening.”
The latest in-depth survey of the UK fitness club market, Project Fitness UK 2018, published by Allegra Strategies, estimates the value of the total UK fitness club market at £5.1bn and projects a compound annual growth of 8.5 per cent in value and circa 5 per cent in the number of gyms and health clubs over the next five years.

Given the fitness club market should now be in a mature state of development, and taking into account economic forecasts for the UK generally, these are impressive growth estimates.

GROWTH TRENDS TO DATE

Allegra’s estimates are based on significant growth to date – 7.1 per cent in value terms over the last five years. Having increased its retail footprint

Insight

- Most fitness operators contacted by Allegra for the survey think future prospects for trading are “excellent”
- The number of private sector clubs increased from 3,269 to 4,400 between 2013 and 2018

An industry report by Allegra Strategies has deemed fitness the “fastest growing business sector” in the UK.
The growth has been fuelled by increasing awareness – and actual experience – of the benefits of exercise on health by 15.1 per cent since 2012, the health and leisure centre sector is deemed to have been the fastest growing business sector in the UK over the last five years.

Between 2013 and 2018, private sector clubs increased from 3,269 to 4,400 facilities, although the public sector contracted from 2,750 to 2,680. During the same period, memberships of private health and fitness clubs increased from 4.7m to 6.9m and of public sector clubs from 3.2m to 3.3m. Together, there are now 10.2m health and fitness club members in the private and public sectors in the UK. However, these active membership numbers only represent 17 per cent of the active UK population.

The growth has been fuelled by increasing awareness – and actual experience – of the benefits of exercise on both physical and mental health. The rise in obesity, heart disease and diabetes has further highlighted the need to alter sedentary lifestyles, and government initiatives and sporting events have given the industry a further boost, as have technological developments. Importantly, 93 per cent of respondents to Allegra’s survey think it’s fashionable to be fit.

All these macro trends will continue to provide a positive boost to the industry in the next five years. Most operators contacted by Allegra researchers think future prospects for trading are excellent.

The market has experienced bifurcation between the low-cost and premium operators, resulting in an increasingly squeezed middle market. Researchers forecast that the low-cost segment will continue to drive growth, as UK consumers are increasingly motivated by value and convenience.

Allegra found 81 per cent of consumers think it’s important to be fit, but only 17 per cent belong to a gym.

The number of public sector facilities fell slightly between 2013 and 2018.

Head of Quest
Salary: £45,000 - £50,000

Hertfordshire based, with work across the UK

Do you have significant, senior management experience in active communities and facility management in the leisure sector and are you ready for a new challenge?

Are you passionate about our sector and do you have great organisational and people management skills?

Is helping communities, facilities and teams to improve year on year, something that excites you? Then look no further!

We are looking for an outstanding individual to join the senior management team at Right Directions to head up and manage the operation of Quest, the UK quality scheme we deliver on behalf of Sport England.

Quest has fundamentally changed over the last seven years and continues to evolve; do you want to be part of the decision-making team that makes this happen? The Head of Quest will play the lead role in the operational management of both the Active Communities and Facility Management schemes and work with Sport England and our other partners, which include Swim England, IQL, STA, Active Alliance, CSPN, ukactive and CIMSPA.

As well as significant sports development experience, you will have a proven track record in people management and working with external, strategic partners. You will also ideally have a working knowledge of Quest, either as an assessor or having achieved Quest accreditation. You will have a great eye for detail, with organisational, mentoring and leadership skills.

Do you have great ideas, together with the drive and dynamism to see the ideas through to the end? If so, this is an exciting opportunity to make a difference in the leisure industry, as part of the leading leisure quality award.

Right Directions is a small, family-oriented business, with a big vision. While you will be based in Hertfordshire, you will work across the UK. The role is initially for two years, with potential to continue.

The salary ranges from £45,000 to £50,000, depending on experience. Please send us your CV, along with details of relevant experience and why you are ideal for this role and our team, by Friday 3 August 2018.

Interviews will take place on 17 September 2018 at Sport England’s Head Office in London.

Ready to take the plunge?

For more information or an informal discussion please contact Sian Wheeler, Team Support Manager, on 01582 840098 or email sian@rightdirections.co.uk with your CV and covering letter. Look us up on www.questnbs.org

South Suffolk Leisure is a charitable Trust formed in 2006 managing leisure facilities across Suffolk. As a charity, our trading surplus will be re-invested back into developing and improving the facilities and services for our customers. With a mix of leisure centres with wet and dry facilities as well as a dual-use sports centre, we offer the community a variety of activity options.

Our gyms offer state of the art gym equipment as well as a variety of fun, motivational and challenging classes for all ages and abilities. As well as health and fitness we offer the Swim England accredited swimming lessons at both our swimming pools. Sports and junior clubs are run at our four sports centres and soft play is located at our Little Kingfisher play centre.

We are leading the way to active living.

I didn’t know what I wanted to do when I left school. I’ve always been sporty and was always down my local leisure centre and knew all the staff. One of them said to me that you could build a really good career as a swimming teacher as there were always plenty of shifts to work. I got myself qualified and now I work pretty much full time over all different shifts, so I still get time to play football and see my mates.

Training to be a STA-qualified swimming teacher. Swimming Teachers can work flexible hours across a variety of shifts, and you could train to be one in only five days with GLL College.
