SkillsActive, the sector skills council for active learning and leisure, and the Register of Exercise Professionals (REPs) have unveiled the results of the sixth Working in Fitness survey.

Almost 1,500 workers from across the health and fitness sector took part in the 2009 study, which is designed to monitor salary trends, training and job satisfaction.

According to the 2009 survey, more than half of the public sector workers who replied to the survey said they had received a pay rise during the course of the year, although less than a quarter of private sector workers saw an increase in salary.

In terms of pay, the new report has also found that males earn 16 per cent more on average than their female counterparts, which jumps to 33 per cent for freelance and self-employed workers.

The average number of training days for employees throughout the fitness sector continues to remain high at six days per year, although more than half said they now pay for their own training.

Almost 1,500 fitness professionals participated in the 2009 study

Stephen Studd, chief executive of SkillsActive, said: "Given the economic environment, it would be unreasonable to expect the fitness market to remain unaffected. However, it is reassuring to see continued investment in training."

Sports minister Gerry Sutcliffe has warned the Football Association (FA) that it could face a significant funding cut if it failed to implement reforms put forward in 2005.

The recommendations, which were outlined four years ago by Lord Burns' structural review of the national governing body, included the appointment of two non-executive, independent directors as part of efforts to break-up the 'old guard' of the FA Council.

Sutcliffe has called on the FA to "put its house in order" to "put its house in order. If that doesn't happen the influence of the FA will diminish and football as a sport will suffer."

However, Sutcliffe told the Guardian newspaper that the FA has failed to act fast enough to implement the changes and could now face a £25m cut in grassroots funding from Sport England and the withdrawal of political support.

Sutcliffe said: "Funding is one lever we’ve got. It would be a last resort. But there has to be, and there already is, a recognition that the status quo is not good enough."

"[The FA must] use this opportunity – where good progress has been made – to put its house in order. If that doesn't happen the influence of the FA will diminish and football as a sport will suffer."

Glasgow Museums Resource Centre (GMRC) has reopened to the public, following the completion of a multi-million pound refurbishment scheme at the venue.

The unveiling of the new-look centre in Nitshill will enable members of the public to view the majority of the city’s extensive museum collection, with approximately one million objects and pieces of artwork housed at the GMRC.

Mayor urges continued arts spending

Concerns raised over London’s future as a “cultural powerhouse” if funding is cut

By Pete Hayman

London mayor Boris Johnson has called for public spending on arts and culture to be maintained to help the industry through the recession.

In a speech to delegates from the arts, business and public sectors at the Victoria and Albert Museum, Johnson said the range of museums, galleries, theatres and concert halls had established the city as a “cultural powerhouse”.

According to Arts and Business, increased visitor numbers to cultural attractions had coincided with a 7 per cent fall in business investment.

Concerns have been raised that funding for the arts and culture sector may not recover until 2011, which could have a damaging effect on tourism.

However, a spokesperson for the mayor said there were no plans for mandatory admission fees at London’s museums and galleries. He added that the mayor “believes there are lessons to be learned from the US about increasing philanthropic giving” after a recent visit to the Met in New York.

Scottish Government announces spending plans

By Pete Hayman

The Scottish Government has revealed plans to maintain public spending on the arts, sport and the natural environment, despite an overall cut in expenditure for 2010-11.

Finance minister John Swinney has announced details of the draft budget, which aims to protect frontline services despite having to contend with an additional £15m to be spent on certain sectors continuing to work with our partners to achieve our grammes that matter most.

Finance minister John Swinney has announced details of the draft budget, which aims to protect frontline services despite having to contend with an additional £15m to be spent on certain sectors continuing to work with our partners to achieve our grammes that matter most.

Efforts to promote physical activity and to increase participation in sport will be sustained through a £1m increase in investment from £53.9m to £54.9m, while funding will be made available to support arts and culture. Culture minister Michael Russell revealed that spending levels will be sustained in order to help establish Creative Scotland, the body which will represent the cultural industries.

The government has also committed itself to increasing the creation of woodland areas with an additional £15m to be invested each year, while a further £5m will be spent on providing forest recreation facilities in the Scottish Borders.

However, Swinney said that administration costs have been cut back and departments have been asked to reduce spending on services not considered a priority for 2010-11.

Swinney said: "We have had concerns raised over London’s future as a “cultural powerhouse” if funding is cut bearing in mind that administration cannot be reduced to the point where we lose the quality of public service delivery.

Crucially, that will mean continued to face difficult choices about where to reduce planned spending next year. We will meet this challenge while continuing to work with our partners to achieve our priorities and protect progr- mames that matter most.

Culturally, that will mean protecting spending on front line public services. It will mean ongoing investment in our economic recovery plan, including support for skills development and for hard pressed businesses."
Council approves Scarborough Spa plans

Town’s Grade II-listed complex set to be transformed into new entertainment venue

By Pete Hayman

Scarborough Borough Council (SBC) has approved plans for a multi-million pound revamp of the town’s spa complex in a bid to transform the site into a new entertainment venue.

The Grade II-listed building – first opened during the 19th century – will undergo a major upgrade of its interior facilities, including the grand hall, the sun court, and the buffet bar.

Plans for the grand hall include the creation of additional backstage areas, new lift pits, a refurbished dance floor and an extended stage, while the foyer will be renovated and the buffet bar will benefit from a raised floor.

New glass pavilions will be constructed on the first floor terrace area and a roof awning provided for the sun court also forms part of the proposals.

A report submitted to SBC planners said: "The renovation of the spa will enable a wider programme of events to be staged, appealing to a more varied audience and enhancing the business activity by capturing a greater proportion of the conference market."

"Redeveloping the spa will strengthen the wider South Bay cultural quarter, while also continuing the theme of preserving and showcasing the grandeur of Scarborough’s architectural heritage."

Architects selected for Liverpool canal scheme

By Pete Hayman

Duggan Morris Architects have been selected to design a new £250,000 pavilion, which is set to be built alongside the Leeds and Liverpool Canal in South Sefton, Liverpool.

The London-based practice’s design for the building, which was chosen following an international contest, has been inspired by the profile of a canoeist in motion, and features a number of jetties stretching out into the canal.

Arts Council England, North West, NewHeartlands – one of nine Housing Market Renewal (HMR) schemes – and the Liverpool Biennial art commissioning agency are behind the proposals for the new pavilion, which will form part of the Arts for Places scheme. The initiative will also involve local authorities and housing associations.

Arts for Places will result in the creation of three public art commissions through the HMR programme, which aims to tackle housing market collapse and transform neighbourhoods in Sefton, Liverpool and Wirral.

Joe Morris, director at Duggan Morris Architects, said: "We believe our design will complement the regeneration already taking place in the area and will enhance the work already completed."

Marnoch issues newspaper response

REPs registrar welcomes Daily Mail article raising issues over training regulation

By Tom Walker

The registrar at the Register of Exercise Professionals (REPs), Jean-Ann Marnoch, has written an open letter in response to a recent Daily Mail article which questioned the way personal trainers are regulated in the UK.

In an article on 26 August, the newspaper claimed there had been an increase in injuries relating to personal training sessions and that some injuries were down to “the personal trainer’s lack of expertise”.

The article also questioned the validity of training courses which lead to a personal trainer qualification in a matter of weeks. It also claimed that some medical experts have raised concerns that self-regulatory standards within the fitness industry are not high enough.

In her response, Marnoch welcomed the article and said it raised “key issues” as well as illustrates just how important it is to ensure all personal trainers are members of REPs.

She added: “REPs was set up in 2002 to regulate people working in fitness and has strict entry guidelines developed in partnership with the industry – and every day turns away trainers and instructors who do not meet the standards.”

Searle appointed as new FIA chief medical officer

By Tom Walker

The Fitness Industry Association (FIA) has appointed John Searle to the newly created post of chief medical officer (CMO).

Searle will spearhead efforts to engage the healthcare sector and has been tasked with raising awareness of the fitness sector’s role in both prevention and remedial strategies.

A former consultant anaesthetist and director of intensive care at the Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital, Searle became a REPs-accredited fitness trainer following his retirement.

Searle revealed his belief that exercise can be used to benefit healthcare stems from his own experience of using a personal trainer to help tackle the effects of acute rheumatoid arthritis.

Searle said: “I would like to see a personal trainer linked in with every general practice in the country; that’s my personal vision. General practices have doctors, they have practice nurses, physiotherapists and counsellors – why not have a personal trainer?”

Leisure-net’s membership services survey kicks off

Leisure-net Solutions will include an ‘e-enquiry’ element for the first time in its annual call-Focus survey.

The survey, which aims to benchmark how the fitness industry replies to telephone enquiries, will also chart how effectively the sector deals with email enquiries.

Mike Hill, managing director of Leisure-net, said the new aspect has been introduced to highlight the problems the industry has with responding efficiently to enquiries.

“The 2009 call-Focus survey will examine whether the industry has improved upon last year’s disappointing scores,” he said.

Work starts on Aberystwyth scheme

Construction work has started on a £1.3m scheme to extend the Carwyn James Building at Aberystwyth University, which houses the institution’s sports and exercise studies department.

Eight new teaching and research laboratories will be created as part of the scheme, in addition to the ten existing facilities as part of the project, expected to be completed by summer 2010.

A new two-lane, 400m performance-standard athletics track will also be installed around the all-weather sports pitch in order to replace an existing single lane tarmac track, which is situated adjacent to the Aberystwyth University’s sports centre.

Elsenham Golf submits revised application

Elsenham Golf and Leisure has submitted a revised planning application for a new sports complex near Stansted Airport. Uttlesford District Council rejected the initial application for a multi-purpose sports centre in May as it failed to meet the environmental requirements of the local green belt. If the new application for a smaller facility on the site of the company’s existing nine-hole golf club is approved, local residents will be able to access a new swimming pool, a health and fitness suite, a sports hall and squash courts, as well as a restaurant.

New athletics track planned for Wycombe

Wycombe District Council has unveiled plans to build a new community athletics track and pavilion at the Sir William Ramsey School in Hazelmere, Buckinghamshire. The existing athletics track at Wycombe Sports Centre is set to be demolished to make way for a coachway and park and ride. The new track will offer eight-lane competition facilities, spectator seating for 100 people, a pavilion and floodlights. The plans are currently the subject of a public consultation and full planning permission will be applied for in the autumn.

St Mirren FC put up for sale

St Mirren Football Club is seeking a new owner after several directors formed a consortium to sell a block of shares giving any prospective buyer a 52 per cent stake in the club. The group, which has put a total of 98,000 shares up for sale, includes current chair Stewart Gilmour, who intends to leave the Scottish Premier League club after 12 years at the helm.

New research hails impact of state school cricket

A report from the Institute of Youth Sport at Loughborough University has revealed that cricket is helping to improve the social wellbeing of pupils at state schools across the UK.

The study, which was undertaken in order to examine the impact of the Cricket Foundation’s ‘Chance to shine’ initiative, concluded that students benefited from improved social skills and sportsmanlike behaviour, while the research also claimed that the sport was seen to be helping to improve the behaviour of young people both on and off the field.

Cricket has helped to benefit areas of social deprivation, while gender barriers for girls are also being removed. ‘Chance to shine’, which aims to deliver cricket and its educational benefits to at least two million children by 2015, reached 350,000 young people at 3,000 state schools across Britain during 2009.

Work starts on THFC training facility

Construction commences on Spurs’ multi-million pound project in North London

By Pete Hayman

Work has started on a new multi-million pound training centre in Enfield, North London, which will house Tottenham Hotspur Football Club’s (THFC) first team, development and academy squads.

The 67-acre (2.4-hectare) Bulls Cross facility is set to feature a two-storey building with a basement, which has been designed by London-based KSS Group to incorporate a 70m x 50m (230ft x 164ft) indoor artificial pitch.

A learning centre for THFC’s academy and educational space, a hydrotherapy/swimming pool, medical facilities, a fitness centre, changing rooms and a media centre also form part of the new building, which will boast a transparent ETFE roof similar to Cornwall’s Eden Project.

The centre will also feature 11 outdoor pitches - one artificial pitch and 10 natural grass pitches, a security building and a groundsman’s lodge.

It is hoped that the facility will enable THFC to help develop talent, as well as secure major economic benefits for the local area in addition to the club’s £2.3m investment in community programmes.

Saints confirm stadium revamp plans

By Pete Hayman

Northampton Saints Rugby Football Club (NSRFC) has confirmed plans for a £6m redevelopment of the Franklin’s Gardens stadium as part of a deal with supermarket ASDA.

The club plans to increase the venue’s capacity to 17,000 spectators after it admitted earlier this year that the last few years had seen the stadium operate at 98 per cent of its current 13,500 capacity.

Proposals include replacing the Sturtridge Pavilion with a new stand as part of the scheme, which will be funded through the sale of a long-term lease on the Edgar Mobbs Way car park (Car Park D) to ASDA.

Keith Barwell, chair of NSRFC, said: “We have sold out of tickets for our Heineken Cup match against Munster more than a month ahead of schedule and we have also seen season ticket sales increase for two straight years.

“Furthermore, European Rugby Cup (ERC) is now stipulating that knockout matches have to be played in a stadium with a minimum capacity of 15,000, which is more than the current capacity. “We don’t want to find ourselves in the situation where we are facing the prospect of taking big games away from Northampton.”

£7.6m boost for cycling network

The Welsh Assembly Government has announced a £7.6m funding boost towards the completion of a major new cycling and walking network in the South Wales valleys.

It will be used to create 100 miles (161km) of new routes as part of the Valleys Cycle Network, which will follow former tramways, towpaths and railway lines.

The new network will complement more than 250 miles (402km) of existing routes and will improve walking and cycling opportunities for residents of Merthyr Tydfil, Pontypridd, Llantrisant and Pontypool, while also linking up with routes in the valleys.

Bristnol South pool receives funding

Bristol City Council has earmarked funding worth £200,000 to improve the facilities at the Grade II-listed Bristol South Pool. The funding is the first phase of a planned £7m redevelopment of the ageing pool, with the first phase set to include new changing facilities, internal repairs and general refurbishment works. Deep cleaning and redecoration will also be carried out, as well as improvements to disabled access. Work will get underway in December, with the pool set to close for three months.

Banchory leisure facilities approved

Aberdeenshire Council has approved plans for a new leisure centre to be built at the Hill of Banchory. The complex will comprise a swimming pool, two sports halls, squash courts, a climbing wall, an aerobics studio, a health & fitness gym, changing rooms and a spa, as well as a café, a conference hall and a crèche. Built on land owned by developer North Banchory, the facility will be leased to the council for 25 years at £1 per year. It will be operated by a private investor with a council contribution towards the facilities and the running costs.

Buckinghamshire pool to be revamped

Middleton Pool in Newport Pagnell, Buckinghamshire, is undergoing a £250,000 redevelopment. Funded by Newport Pagnell Town Council and a grant from the government’s free swimming initiative, the revamp will include the creation of new training and function rooms as well as the introduction of a number of energy-saving methods at the centre.

CSL relaunches as Active Nation

Sports trust Community Leisure Services has rebranded and relaunched as Active Nation to transform itself into a campaigning organisation tackling inactivity. The trust said the move was prompted by Department of Health figures showing that one third of children and two thirds of adults are either overweight or obese – and with just 12 per cent of the population exercising regularly, that figure is expected to rise. A spokesperson for the trust said: “Through innovative sport and exercise programming, Active Nation hopes to educate local communities on the benefits of an active lifestyle, exciting and igniting the nation’s enthusiasm for sport and exercise. Active Nation will be campaigning throughout England, inspiring and motivating; persuading the nation to be more active.”

New BPL dolphin to promote swimming

Barnsley Premier Leisure (BPL), the Yorkshire-based sports trust, has adopted a new mascot to help its swimming development team teach schoolchildren about the dangers of water and the benefits of being able to swim. The grey furry dolphin will accompany the team on visits to local schools as part of BPL’s swimming for schools initiative. Edward Lim, the leisure trust’s swimming development manager, said: “A recent survey revealed that just under half of all Key Stage Two pupils cannot swim before they start secondary school, which shows how important it is to educate the next generation about the importance of learning this vital skill.” The trust is looking for a name for the dolphin and inviting local children to come up with suggestions.

Lottery game to boost sports

More than 130 national sports governing bodies are set to benefit from a new live TV game being launched this autumn. BingoLotto, which will show on Virgin 1, will donate 20 per cent of every Gamecard sold to good causes. The Gamecards, costing £2, go on sale at Tesco across the UK stores in September and viewers will need them to take part in the interactive game. The main beneficiaries from the game will be the Central Council of Physical Recreation (CCPR) and the National Council for Voluntary Organisations, but a number of sports bodies will also receive support.

Nintendo teams up with Fitness First

Video game to provide users with interactive training sessions and health advice

By Tom Walker

Nintendo has launched a new fitness video game on its Wii platform which has been created in collaboration with health club chain Fitness First. The games company is hoping for the NewU Fitness First Personal Trainer to top the Christmas wish list this year on the back of the success of its WiiFit concept. According to Nintendo, advance orders from UK retailers have “exceeded all expectations”.

Due for release in mid-September, the product offers goal-based training, with the option to work out with one of four personal trainers. It is said that the product will be the first product of its kind to feature a video throughout, which will provide users with interactive training sessions. The video game includes nutritional advice, which the designers have developed in conjunction with the people behind the television programme, You Are What You Eat. It is thought there are around 24 million gaming consoles in the UK, the same number as there are UK households.

FA extends Carlsberg agreement

Nintendo will remain as the official beer of Wembley until 2014

By Pete Hayman

Drinks company Carlsberg UK has reached an agreement with the Football Association (FA) to extend its sponsorship deal for a further four years. The extension, which will run from August 2010, will see Carlsberg support efforts to recruit and retain referees at grassroots level in its role as the FA’s official referees partner. Carlsberg will also remain as the ‘official beer’ of the England national team, the FA Cup and Wembley Stadium until the end of July 2014. Jonathan Hill, the FA’s group commercial director, said: "It’s great that we will be able to continue to bring Carlsberg’s energy to our top assets and now the key area of recruiting and retaining referees, to the benefit of the amateur game."

UK hotel operators "over the worst"
Rate of decline projected to slow heading into early 2010 according to PwC forecast

By Pete Hayman

Hotel operators across the UK are set to experience further deterioration in growth rates before Christmas 2009 but are now "over the worst", according to a new report by PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC).

In its latest hotel forecast, PwC predicts a 12.1 per cent decrease in RevPAR for the year, but expects the rate of decline to slow heading into early 2010.

Leisure tourism has helped to offset a significant reduction in corporate travel during 2009, although PwC has warned that the business and conference markets remain critical to the industry's recovery.

PwC has also found that room rates are nearly £20 cheaper on average compared with 2008, which has seen London slip from second to 22nd in the global list of most expensive destinations.

Robert Milburn, UK hospitality and leisure leader at PwC said: "Room rates have become the sacrificial lamb in the battle for occupancy, and keeping rates low will continue to make it easier to attract last minute custom. It is a delicate balance and we are not out of the woods yet but, as the economy starts to stabilise, the path has at least become clearer.*

Plans for a new £100m five-star hotel at the Flaxby Park Golf and Country Club near Knaresborough, North Yorkshire, have been unveiled by York-based developer, The Skelwith Group.

The club, which first opened in 2004 and is hoping to submit a bid to host the Ryder Cup tournament in 2022, includes a 303-bed-room property, four helipads, three restaurants, a spa complex, bars, boutiques and conference facilities.

The club already has an 18-hole, championship-standard golf course but the plans include a 27-hole course with Professional Golfers Association approved tour facilities and a 24-hour driving range.

Nature trails throughout the estate will also be created as part of the development.
Premier Inn signs £125m airport deal

Four new hotels to open at three major London airports as part of joint venture

By Pete Hayman

Budget chain Premier Inn has unveiled plans for the development of four new hotels at three London airports as part of a £125m joint venture with Arora Family Trust.

The four sites will add 1,570 bedrooms to the Whitbread-owned company’s portfolio as part of a ‘developer turn-key’ deal with the trust, backed by hotelier Surinder Arora.

Two of the hotels will be situated at Heathrow Airport, with 5,400-room and 4,240-room sites set for Terminals 5 and 4 respectively. Meanwhile, a 300-room hotel will be built at Stansted and a 630-room hotel is set to become the first terminal-based budget hotel at Gatwick’s North Terminal.

Premier Inn already operates hotels at 14 airports across the UK and Ireland, and expects the four new properties to be opened on a phased basis from autumn 2011 onwards.

Mark Anderson, commercial and property director at Whitbread, said: “As air travel returns to long-term growth, we see opportunities to build our presence at airports. The success of the budget airlines shows there is an increasing demand for low-cost travel, and that includes accommodation.”

Surinder Arora added: “We are delighted to have reached this landmark agreement with Premier Inn, which very much complements our existing Arora Hotels portfolio.”

Firmdale reveals plans for £60m London hotel

By Luke Tuchscherer

A new £60m luxury hotel is to be built on a former bomb site in London as part of an agreement that will also include a 50,000sq ft (4,645sq mt) residential development.

Ham Yard – near Shaftesbury Avenue – was bombed during World War II and has remained derelict since. It was bought at auction for £30m by Tim and Kit Kemp, the husband and wife team who are behind Firmdale hotel group.

Firmdale already has six London hotels in its portfolio, including properties in Covent Garden and Knightsbridge, but the Kemps are aiming to make the new 100-room hotel its flagship site.

OFT against Scottish plans for minimum alcohol price

Speaking at the Regulatory Policy Institute, Oxford, Office of Fair Trading chief executive John Fingleton said that “fixing a minimum price for a product to try to curb consumption has a number of undesirable effects.”

Ahead of plans by the Scottish government to introduce a minimum price for a unit of alcohol this autumn, Fingleton said: “The scheme would reduce the incentives of companies to compete, innovate and cut costs. There is also a political risk that weakening competition can be seen as an attractive short-term option where the alternatives might be to introduce a tax or implement more targeted regulation.”

Elsewhere, licensee body Justice for Licensees is to urge a government rethink about the reintroduction of the 17.5 per cent VAT rate.

First meeting for Scottish think tank

A new think tank comprising 10 representatives from museums across Scotland has met for the first time at the University of Glasgow to discuss the future of the sector. The Museums Think Tank was established following the Museums Summit earlier this year to make recommendations to the Scottish Government as part of a draft national strategy that will determine the future direction of Scottish museums.

London attractions see rise in visitor numbers

The number of people visiting museums, galleries and other London attractions increased by 8.4 per cent in June, compared with the same period last year. The figures from Visit London also revealed that the total number of visitors for the three months from April to June was up 12.8 per cent on the same period last year. The boost in visitors has been attributed to warm weather and European tourists taking advantage of the weak pound. During the period, visits to paid attractions rose 14 per cent, while free attractions saw a 12 per cent increase.

Renewable attraction for Renfrewshire

ScottishPower Renewables has opened a new visitor centre at the Whitelee Windfarm in East Renfrewshire. The facility boasts exhibitions on renewable power generation, the construction of the windfarm and the local environment. An education hub will also enable children and adults to learn more about windfarms and renewable energy. Kirk Ramsay, CEO of Glasgow Science Centre, which will operate the attraction, said: "We are proud to be managing the visitor centre at Europe’s largest onshore windfarm."

£1m HLF funding for London palace

Work on a ‘palace for everyone’ set to transform 17th century property

By Tom Walker

Historic Royal Palaces’ (HRP) plans for a major £12m scheme to improve visitor facilities at London’s Kensington Palace have received a £1m funding boost from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF).

Work on the ‘Welcome to Kensington - a palace for everyone’ project is set to get underway in June 2010 to transform the 17th century property into an educational and inspirational visitor experience, as well as opening it up to a wider audience.

The scheme will include the creation of new public gardens to link the palace with a neighbouring park, a new visitor entrance leading from the Broad Walk and the Round Pond to establish an outdoor space for public use, and improved access.

An inner central ‘hub’ is also included in the proposals to give visitors a feel of what the palace has to offer inside, as well as new educational and community facilities and clearer routes and signage.

The project is being financed by HRP with the support of donors, trusts, sponsors and charitable foundations, with £8m already secured. A campaign to raise the remaining £4m over the next two years is now underway.

Sir Trevor McDonald, HRP trustee, said: "This ambitious initiative will enable many more people to explore this palace of extraordinary history; opening its doors, its rooms, its memories, its stories, its gardens and its collections to the widest possible audience."

RAF museum to trial audio tours

By Martin Nash

The Royal Air Force Museum at Hendon in north London is to trial mobile phone audio tours.

The test will begin in the Bomber Hall with the tours delivered via the visitor’s mobile phone, where the user calls a number and then presses a sequence of keys to learn more about an exhibit.

Tour recordings will also be available on the museum’s website, enabling users to download them to their mobile phone, but still want to hear them.

The museum views the move as having huge potential to increase the visitor experience.

A gallery dedicated to Architectural Ceramics contains large-scale objects, while a further two rooms are devoted to factory and handmade 20th century collections respectively and another gallery accommodates contemporary works.

Grosvenor nets Southampton project

£13m arts complex scheme to transform site of former Tyrrell and Green store

By Tom Walker

Southampton City Council (SCC) has named the international property company, Grosvenor, as the preferred bidder for the city's new £13m arts complex.

The 200,000sq ft (18,581sq m) mixed-use scheme, which aims to transform the site of the former Tyrrell and Green department store, was selected from a number of rival bids.

Plans drawn up by Grosvenor’s partner architects CZWG for the proposed complex include 75,000sq ft (6,968sq m) of gallery spaces, auditoriums and educational areas as well as restaurants, apartments and retail units.

Royston Smith, SCC’s cabinet member for economic development, said: "The Cultural Quarter is a key part of our wider plans for the physical regeneration of the city centre and economic development of the city.

"The proposals are helping to bring in around £175m of private and public investment to this area of the city."

The arts complex will form a part of the planned new Cultural Quarter for Southampton. Other projects include the Sea City Museum Project, scheduled to open in 2012.

More arts organisations net ACE funding support

By Pete Hayman

Arts Council England (ACE) has announced that a further £6.2m is to be invested in a total of 18 arts organisations over the next two years as part of the Sustain initiative.

The £40m Sustain programme was launched in a bid to maintain artistic excellence during the recession, and aims to help organisations that are currently under pressure during the 2009-11 period.

Among the recipients of the latest awards is Yorkshire Sculpture Park in Wakefield, which received £1.45m – the largest share of funding – while Halle Concerts Society in Manchester netted £800,000.

London Philharmonic Orchestra (£556,500), Oldham Coliseum Theatre (459,800) and Chichester Festival Theatre (£427,000) also received grants.

10 Sustain applications were declined, however, with ACE still considering bids for a share of a further £31m funding; the latest round of which will be announced in October.

Threshold stone unveiled at new £18m Belfast theatre

A ceremony has been held in Belfast, Northern Ireland to mark the unveiling of the threshold stone on the site of the new £18m Lyric Theatre, which is scheduled to open in 2011.

Designed by Dublin-based architects O’Donnell and Tuomey, the new building on Ridgeway Street will be almost four times the size of the city’s former Lyric Theatre, which first opened to the public in 1968 before closing its doors in January 2008.

Construction work started in March on the new theatre, which will boast a 400-seat capacity auditorium, a 150-seat studio theatre, a rehearsal room, riverfront foyers and a bar.

£2.1m for Liverpool urban park plans

NWDA funding boost for former International Garden Festival site refurbishment

By Pete Hayman

Plans for the restoration of the gardens at Liverpool’s former International Garden Festival site have been handed a £2.1m funding boost by the Northwest Regional Development Agency (NWDA).

Merseyside-based developer Langtree is behind the planned redevelopment, which aims to transform the site – which has remained derelict for the past 25 years – into a major new visitor attraction for the city.

The first phase of the International Garden Festival site scheme will include work to restore the Chinese garden, the Japanese gardens, the lakes and watercourses and the woodland sculpture trails.

Mersey Waterfront, the Land Restoration Trust and Liverpool City Council are also involved with the scheme, which is in line to receive £1.6m from the Northwest European Regional Development Fund as well.

Steven Broomhead, NWDA chief executive, said: “The agency’s investment will also cover the management and maintenance of the park for five years, within which time it is anticipated that we will be able to commence development on the balance of the site and secure its long-term future.”

First stage of Derbyshire gardens revamp unveiled

By Pete Hayman

Belper River Gardens in Belper, Derbyshire have reopened to the public after work on the first stage of a major refurbishment scheme – designed to preserve and upgrade the site – was completed.

Phase one of the project has been carried out by Alfreton-based contractor, EMS Civils, which included piling work to stabilise the banks of the River Derwent and the reconstruction of the walls, the mill lade, paths and the gardens’ play area.

The first stage of the project has taken eight months to complete at a cost of around £750,000. Meanwhile, the second phase is expected to get underway in October and will involve the replanting of lost trees and shrubs.

Amber Valley Borough Council (AVBC) is also planning a design competition for the third stage, which will focus on the park’s Swiss tearooms.

Funding for the new play area established as part of phase one of the Belper River Gardens project was secured through a £40,000 contribution from AVBC. The scheme has also received a £50,000 grant from the People Millions scheme – run by ITV and the Big Lottery Fund – following a successful funding application by local community group, the Friends of Belper River Gardens.

The first stage of the project has taken eight months to complete

IN BRIEF

Refusal urged for Peak Park wind farm

The Peak District National Park Authority (PDNPA) has urged the refusal of a major wind farm within 1.5 miles (2.4km) of its boundary, arguing that better renewable energy solutions should be pursued for sensitive landscapes than wind farms. The wind farm would have five turbines, with blade-tips up to 126m (413ft) high. The PDNPA says this would make them among the highest in England and visible from most vantage points in the national park up to 20 miles (32.2km) away.

City boatyard set for new lease of life

British Waterways has unveiled new plans for the regeneration of the historic Taylor’s Boatyard, situated in the Chester Canal Basin on the Shropshire Union Canal. The restoration of the Grade II-listed buildings at the 0.5-acre (0.2-hectare) site is set to play a key role in preserving Chester’s heritage, while also becoming a commercially viable enterprise in its own right. The boatyard complex currently includes a series of main workshops and a brick foundry, a joinery workshop, canalside work areas and a dry dock area.

£2m boost for Scottish machair preservation

A new £2m scheme to preserve machair wildlife habitats on the Hebrides archipelago off the west coast of Scotland has been handed a funding boost by the European Union (EU). More than £1m will be invested over a four-year period by the EU Life + fund following an application by a group led by RSPB Scotland, which will match the grant funding in partnership with the local authority – Comhairle nan Eilean Siar (CnES) – and Scottish Natural Heritage (SNH).
£8m regeneration criteria announced

The Isle of Man government has unveiled the outline eligibility criteria for towns and villages interested in applying for a share of an £8m funding package to support regeneration schemes. Outline guidance notes have also been made available by the Department for Trade and Industry as part of the Town and Village Regeneration Scheme. The scheme will operate through local committees to promote improvements to island communities.

Maidenhead plans unveiled

A public consultation into plans for the long-term regeneration of Maidenhead, Berkshire, has been launched by the local authority and the Partnership for the Rejuvenation of Maidenhead (PRoM). PRoM and the Royal Borough of Windsor and Maidenhead council are seeking comments from local residents on a number of proposals, including how to create a more attractive town centre with improved green spaces.

Design team selected for historic mill

A historic 18th century mill in Shrewsbury, Shropshire, is set to be redeveloped as a visitor attraction after a design team led by architects Feilden Clegg Bradley Studios was appointed to draw up plans for the site's future. The team has been appointed to examine sustainable solutions for the 212-year-old Ditherington Flax Mills. English Heritage acquired the mill in 2005.

£250m plan for Telford town revamp

Cafés, bars, restaurants and a new pedestrian high street to head transformation

By Pete Hayman

Detailed plans for a £250m project, designed to transform the town centre of Telford in Shropshire, have been unveiled by Telford and Wrekin Council (TWC) and the Southwater Event Group (SEG).

It is anticipated that the proposals will provide the town with a thriving night-time economy centred around a pedestrian high street and including cafés, bars and restaurants, as well as a new public square for events and arts.

The project also includes an extension to the SEG-owned Telford International Centre in a bid to attract an additional 200,000 conference visitors each year, while a new leisure hub will also be created. Facilities will include a revamped ice rink, a new leisure pool and a cinema.

Other aspects of the scheme include two new hotels to provide an additional 450 rooms, four office buildings and a new Learning and Media Centre, as well as a residential development.

A masterplan for a major redevelopment of John o’Groats in Scotland has been unveiled by Highlands and Islands Enterprise (HIE) and consultants, GVA Grimley.

The plans, involving a 5-hectare (12.4-acre) town centre site, incorporate suggestions put forward by local residents and businesses as well as tourists to the region.

A destination focal point such as a sculpture or an artwork has been proposed as part of the scheme and would help to draw ‘end to enders’ to a main square near the town’s harbour.

The first phase of the four phase scheme would include the restoration or replacement of the John o’Groats hotel, a new harbour square, a refurbished Last House Museum and work to upgrade coastal paths.

Plug pulled on Welsh scheme

Plans for the construction of a new £100m retail and leisure development at Llanfair P.G. on Anglesey, North Wales, have been withdrawn by the company behind the scheme, Ynys Mon Estates.

The Isle of Anglesey County Council has confirmed that it has received confirmation from Ynys Mon that it had pulled out of the Ty Mawr project – to include a cinema, bowling alley and fitness centre – seven months after it was given the go-ahead by planners.

Carnegie Theatre and Arts Centre
Development and Management Opportunity

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

We are seeking expressions of interest from suitably experienced organisations to develop, manage and operate the Carnegie Theatre and Arts Centre under a partnership arrangement with Allerdale Borough Council.

The Carnegie is located in the centre of Workington on the west coast of Cumbria and is one of the town’s key assets having built its reputation as a venue capable of staging a range of activities and events of local and regional significance as well as being an important year round facility for a variety of community groups in the area. Annual admissions to the Carnegie average around 70,000 over the past four years.

Currently managed and operated by the Council, a varied programme of community and arts related activities are provided at the Carnegie through the following facilities and services:

- 336 seat theatre with dressing rooms and other ancillary accommodation.
- Monroes Bar with a combined 200 capacity performance space offering live rock, pop and blues music.
- Café (64 covers) and exhibition space.
- Community rooms for hire (fitness classes, arts/crafts, adult education and other uses).
- Design centre incorporating rented workspaces for small businesses.
- Computerised box office also providing services to local festivals and events.

We are open to all ideas of how these facilities and services can be improved and developed to benefit existing and new customers.

This is a tremendous opportunity to work in partnership with the Council to develop and manage a premier cultural venue and also to maximise its potential as a valuable community resource for local people. Workington town centre has recently undergone a major redevelopment and this is also an opportunity for the Carnegie to play a pivotal role in its further regeneration.

At this stage, organisations are requested to express their interest in writing and provide information on their experience in this area, specifically covering any examples of where similar facilities and services have been provided at other locations.

Once expressions of interest have been considered by the Council,

One of the interesting things coming out of the slow wind-up to the next election is that all parties have now admitted they’ll have to cut public expenditure should they get hold of the reins of power next year. The big question is where these cuts will come from.

Areas such as health, education and policing look reasonably safe as proposals to cut spending in these areas provide little political upside. On the other hand, initiatives and organizations seen as wasteful with little public support present ripe targets – the cutting of the Trident programme has already been announced while other targets include the National Identity Card (Labour) and the RDAs (the Conservative Party).

Over the coming months this list of targets will continue to grow. The task will therefore be to ensure that, when the spotlight of public expenditure inevitably falls on tourism, strong arguments are in place to show that the funding allocated to the sector is warranted. If government was unconvinced of the benefits of tourism during the good years, it is unlikely that it will survive the spending cuts.

The Tourism Alliance is therefore using the party conferences to highlight the benefits of tourism – spending just £1,400 on overseas marketing generates 100 new visitors. These visitors spend £50,000 in the UK, of which around £8,000 goes straight to the Exchequer. The sector has a good story to tell, but we must tell it well.

Being a solution, not a problem

The government needs to be convinced of tourism’s value.

Kurt Janson is policy director at Tourism Alliance
The latest employment figures from the Office for National Statistics make unnerving reading. The unemployment rate was 7.9 per cent for the three months to July 2009. It has not been higher since the three months to November 1996 and it is up 0.7 over the previous quarter and up 2.3 over the year. The number of unemployed people increased by 210,000 over the quarter and by 743,000 over the year, to reach 2.47 million.

Meanwhile, the number of redundancies in the three months to July 2009 was 246,000. Although this figure was down 55,000 over the quarter, it was up 107,000 on the year.

The last of these figures is perhaps the most disconcerting, as redundancy brings with it a range of issues for the individual involved. For the 246,000 people made redundant in the three months to July this year, loss of employment and earnings are likely to have been coupled with a feeling of loss of face and confidence and often a loss of purpose and direction. For the employers involved, there are also challenges. It should be a focus, for responsible employers, to ensure that those they make redundant receive the best support possible. For some employers this is not possible, usually due to a lack of resources.

Now, as a result of government funding and as part of their Into Work programme, the Springboard Charity are delivering support and assistance to those affected by redundancy. The Response To Redundancy Programme is focused on individuals in specific boroughs in London who have left employment within the last six months. The programme provides essential services to help individuals back into sustainable employment, including up to eight days of tailored training to cover employability skills and training needs analysis, information, advice and guidance on hospitality, leisure, travel and tourism, ‘industry taster days’, vocational training opportunities, CV and Covering Letter building, supported job search and sign posting into other employment in the industry.

The programme provides essential support that employers are often unable to give, enabling individuals to get back on their feet and into employment within the industry as quickly as possible. It’s a programme that changes lives and supports the industry – at a time when it is needed most.

Hotel completes Welsh initiative

Deganwy hotel first to complete new training scheme

By Pete Hayman

The Quay Hotel in Deganwy, North Wales, has become the first business across the country to complete a training initiative designed to provide visitors with a “unique” Welsh welcome. Croeso Cynnes Cymreig (A Warm Welsh Welcome) has been developed as part of a joint venture between Visit Wales, the Welsh Language Board, the Tourism Training Forum for Wales and the Welsh Assembly Government.

The three components of the programme include a customer service course and two self-assessment modules, with a focus on businesses’ knowledge of local history, food and culture in order to strengthen a sense of place. The use of Welsh language within the business place is also targeted.

Heritage minister Alun Ffred Jones said: “This new training programme gives those working in our tourism industry the confidence, skills and knowledge to share Wales’s language, history and culture with our visitors by providing a high quality welcome which is distinctive to Wales.”

Lifetime gains awarding status

Training provider Lifetime has been recognised as an official Awarding Organisation by Ofqual, the regulator of qualifications, exams and tests in England.

The company will now be able to submit full qualifications to the new Qualifications & Credit Framework (QCF) beyond 2010 under the name Lifetime Awarding.

According to Peta Hairsine, Lifetime Awarding organisation manager, the awarding arm was established following increasing need for ‘fit for purpose’ qualifications and work-ready recruits to enhance the quality and professionalism of the fitness industry and beyond.

Lifetime Awarding works in partnership with employers and operators to secure jobs in health clubs, leisure centres, hotel fitness facilities and related outlets.

Cities and local areas submit 'City of Culture' bids

Bath refutes DCMS claims as 29 prospective candidates across the UK for 2013 culture role are announced

By Pete Hayman

The Department for Culture Media and Sport (DCMS) has revealed that 29 cities and local areas have been put forward as candidates to be the UK’s first ‘City of Culture’ in 2013.

Launched in July, the government-run competition aims to build on the success of Liverpool’s status as European Capital of Culture during 2008.

Among the applicants so far are 24 English cities and local areas including Birmingham, Brighton and Hove, Cornwall, Manchester, Norwich and Urban South Hampshire.

Derry and Belfast (Northern Ireland) have applied, along with Aberdeen in Scotland. A bid calling itself ‘The Country-side’ and one other city that does not want to be named at this stage have also bid.

However, a spokesperson for Bath and North East Somerset Council rejected DCMS claims that the city of Bath was one of the 29 applicants, saying that at no point had the council indicated it would be submitting a bid on Bath’s behalf.

British Museum to resubmit extension plans

By Tom Walker

British Museum officials are to submit revised plans to Camden Council for a £135m extension, which was initially turned down by the council in June.

The amended plans, drawn up by architects Rogers Stirk Harbour + Partners, include sinking part of the extension below ground in an attempt to resolve local criticism that the extension proposals will restrict architectural delights.

The museum wants to expand views of the museum’s Grade I-listed Reading Room.

The new plans will go on public display later this month, although no date has yet been set for the plans to be handed in to the council.

Original plans for the scheme, which featured a 1,000 sq m (10,760sq ft) building at the rear of the museum to replace the former offices of the British Library on Montague Place, encountered opposition from a local conservation group over fears that the project would diminish the museum’s existing architectural delights.

Nature reserve for Shipley

The former site of the American Adventure theme park in Shipley, Derbyshire could be turned into a nature reserve if new plans are put into action.

The Derbyshire Wildlife Trust has proposed that the 112-acre site, owned by the county council, be put to good use after the theme park closed in 2007.
