Nuffield: get wellbeing into schools

Creating a role for a 'head of wellbeing' at schools would get students and staff more physically active – and make a positive difference to their emotional and physical wellbeing.

That is the finding of new research by Nuffield Health, which suggests that having a dedicated member of staff assigned to teach children about health and wellbeing showed "significant" changes in emotional wellbeing.

The Improving wellbeing in schools report was based on a two-year pilot that installed a head of wellbeing within a secondary school. By the end of the pilot last year, the mean score for staff wellbeing had increased by 12 per cent (using the Warwick-Edinburgh Mental Wellbeing Scale, WEMWBS).

In terms of exercise and activity, the presence of a dedicated member of staff offered a mixture of both new opportunities and a better understanding of their bodies – giving students the impetus to exercise more regularly. There was also a marked increase in the number of staff using gym facilities, with almost a quarter signing up for regular activities.

"There is a gap in the provision of wellbeing support in schools that urgently needs addressing," said Davina Deniszczyc, Nuffield Health's medical director. "Our pilot showed that a dedicated expert, embedded into a school, can achieve significant change over time."

Neil King named énergie Fitness CEO as Jan Spaticchia expands strategic role

Budget operator énergie Fitness has named Neil King as its new CEO. The announcement was made at the 2018 évolution Conference – énergie’s annual franchisee event, which was attended by 600 members of the company’s network.

King, the former MD of 1Life, joined énergie in January this year as chief operating officer, to support the business as it gears up for sale.

The new appointment completes a top team reorganisation, which sees Jan Spaticchia, the chair and founder of énergie Group, taking up a high-level strategic role as executive chair, focusing on group direction and expansion.

‖ Neil King (right), has been named CEO while founder Jan Spaticchia (left) takes up a strategic role as executive chair

“Our aim is to sit above competitors in the health club market and own the ‘high-service, low-cost’ space”

Liz Terry, editor of Health Club Management, interviewed Spaticchia on stage during évolution, exploring plans for the future of the business.

“Having Neil King strengthening the focus on operations, productivity and club performance, will allow me to concentrate on building company growth and extending our international footprint,” Spaticchia told Terry.

He added that the company is growing rapidly – and developing its boutique club-in-club concept, thé YARD – and will continue to “play to its strengths”.

“One of the key lessons we’ve learned in our 15 years in business is to remain focused on what we’re good at – which is franchising world-class fitness concepts – and avoiding straying into areas that dilute our mission,” he added.

YMCA Awards appoints former Training Room national manager Paula Wells as director

Paula Wells has been named director of YMCA Awards. Wells, who has spent more than 15 years in the fitness industry, joins the awarding organisation from training provider Premier Global NASM, where she was operations director.

After starting her fitness career as a personal training instructor, she has worked as national training manager at The Training Room, as well as had stints at Fitness First and Virgin Active.

‖ Wells has spent more than 15 years in the fitness industry

“Our aim is to sit above competitors in the health club market and own the ‘high-service, low-cost’ space”

“I’m a firm believer that fitness education should be accessible to everyone across the globe,” Wells said.

“Knowledge is powerful. It’s so important to share this knowledge in our communities and tackle physical inactivity by facilitating happy, healthy and more fulfilled lives. Working for an awarding organisation which specialises in this field is an exciting and rewarding opportunity.”

YMCA Awards was one of the first in the UK to provide nationally recognised qualifications to health and fitness professionals. Its qualifications are currently delivered by more than 300 education providers around the globe.
Sporta CEO Cate Atwater reveals reasons for rebrand

Sporta, the body representing charitable leisure trusts across the UK, has rebranded as Community Leisure UK as part of efforts to “tackle a false perception of being a solely sport-focused body”.

According to CEO Cate Atwater, the new name “better reflects” members’ focus on improving the physical and mental health and wellbeing of communities across the UK.

“The new name, brand and proposition for the association came from bespoke research and is far more representative of our members’ work,” Catwater said.

“Our members are there for everyone in the community, whatever they want to do in their leisure time.”

She added that the charitable trust model has “helped develop and protect” public services in tough economic times, ensuring income from leisure operations goes back into the community.

“Charitable trusts don’t tend to shout about it, but they have managed to not only keep facilities open and effective services delivering, but improve and develop them thanks to the valuable support of their communities and partners,” she said.

“But, as we hear on the news daily, many public services are now at breaking point. So, if we want public leisure facilities and services to be there in 10 years, we need to protect and invest in those services.”
The English Premier League has appointed Susanna Dinnage as its CEO. Dinnage – who will become the league’s first female chief – is seen as a left-field appointment as she has no previous experience of the football industry. She has spent her entire career in broadcasting and joins from media organisation Discovery, where she was the global president of Animal Planet channel. She started her career at Music Television (MTV) and also spent 10 years at Channel Five. She joined Discovery in 2009. Dinnage will replace current CEO Richard Scudamore, who is stepping down next month after 19 years at the helm. “I’m excited at the prospect of taking on this fantastic role,” Dinnage said. “The Premier League means so much to so many people around the world. It represents the pinnacle of professional sport and the opportunity to lead such a dynamic and inspirational organisation is a great privilege. “With the support of clubs and the team, I look forward to extending the success of the League for many years to come.”

RFU chief executive Steve Brown announces surprise resignation – will step down by end of the year

Steve Brown has announced he will step down as CEO of the Rugby Football Union (RFU) after just 14 months in the role.

Brown’s shock decision comes just days after former CEO Francis Baron claimed that the governing body was “in a perilous financial position” despite recording healthy revenues.

Brown first joined the RFU in 2011 and has held a number of roles – including chief financial officer, chief officer business operations, and managing director of England Rugby 2015 – before being appointed CEO in September 2017. He is set to leave the organisation at the end of the year. RFU chair Andy Cosslett said Brown’s decision to leave was a “sad day for the organisation”. “Steve has made a huge contribution to the RFU during his time here. He has been a pivotal figure during a long period of sustained growth for the Union and, as managing director of the Organising Committee, played a key role in delivering Rugby World Cup 2015.”

Commenting on his decision, Brown said: “This has been a very difficult decision for me to make, and I informed the RFU board earlier this week that the time is right for me to step down and take some time out. I’ve loved my time in rugby, and am deeply proud to have made a contribution to a sport I love.”

Nigel Melville, director of professional rugby, has been named interim CEO until a new chief executive is appointed.
Liz Nicholl announces plans to step down as CEO of UK Sport

UK Sport chief executive Liz Nicholl has announced she will step down from the role in the summer of 2019. Nicholl, who first joined UK Sport in 1999 – just two years after the organisation was established – said she was leaving the role to “focus on family and other interests”.

Nicholl spent her first 10 years at UK Sport as director of elite sport, before becoming chief operating officer in 2009. She was then appointed CEO in September 2010 after John Steele stepped down to become CEO of the Rugby Football Union. During her nine-year tenure as CEO, Team GB has achieved historic performances at successive Olympic Games.

At London 2012, the team achieved 65 medals and finished third in the medal table. This was followed by an unprecedented second place in the medal table at Rio with 67 medals.

“It’s been a huge privilege to work with so many committed and talented athletes, coaches, leaders, partners and colleagues during my time at UK Sport,” Nicholl said. “I have shared a very special journey with everyone that has been part of our very successful high-performance system over the past 20 years.”

Robert Carlson has worked in the hospitality industry for more than 17 years. He has recently transitioned into the leisure sector, after joining The Climbing Hangar as its director of operations.

Tell us about your career
“I started out in hospitality, working as a bartender in a cocktail bar, before taking on my first managerial role at two independent gastropubs in Twickenham. In 2008 I began working as a deputy general manager at Ping Pong - a restaurant group serving Dim Sum and cocktails. While there I was promoted to general manager, then multi-site general manager, before becoming operations manager, and, finally, head of Operations. During my time at Ping Pong I gained an ILM award in Leadership and Management and an NVQ in Restaurant Management.”

Why did you want to work in the leisure industry?
“This is an exciting, thriving industry that will only continue to grow. It combines my passion for hospitality with a new challenge that offers me the chance to expand my horizons and knowledge. It’s an industry that I’ve always followed closely, and one that I’m thrilled to finally be a part of.”

What are your goals?
“Personally, I want to grow as a leader within the leisure sector and continue to build on my skills and experience in a new industry. I believe that supporting and developing staff is key. It aids the company growth and increases job satisfaction. With that in mind I want to build a culture that empowers the front line teams, allowing them to have autonomy to express their creative sides, as well as drive our business forward and provide the best possible customer experience. My aim is to make the Climbing Hangar a rewarding and exciting place to work, by creating a philosophy that nurtures and develops talent from within. Throughout my career I have endeavored to turn around under-performing sites and improve those that are performing well to exceed past records, and I plan to do the same with the Climbing Hangar. I want to transform it into the market leader for UK indoor climbing, and create an environment that is enticing for our customers, with a focus on food and beverage to make us stand out as a place not only to enjoy climbing but to engage with each other in a social atmosphere with a unique offering.”

Anytime’s parent company buys Basecamp

Self Esteem Brands, owner of Anytime Fitness, has acquired a new fitness concept with plans to franchise it worldwide.

Basecamp Fitness – developed by entrepreneur Nick Swinmurn – currently has five locations in California and is based on providing high-energy workouts.

Designed to increase members’ strength while improving their cardio performance, Basecamp offers 35-minute, high-intensity training sessions which alternates 60-second bursts of various strength-training exercises with 60-seconds on a stationary “airbike”.

“Our plan is to build additional, corporate-owned Basecamp Fitness studios next year to explore consumer preferences and perfect the brand experience,” said Chuck Runyon, co-founder and CEO of Self Esteem Brands and Anytime Fitness.

“We hope to begin franchising Basecamp Fitness in the US and internationally in 2020.”

Dave Mortensen, co-founder and president of Self Esteem Brands and Anytime Fitness, added that the two business will complement each other.

“We believe that Basecamp Fitness and Anytime Fitness will appeal to two very different types of consumers,” Mortensen said.

Weight training – better for the heart than running?

A study has suggested that lifting weights could be healthier for the heart than going for a run or a walk.

Research by St. George’s University in Grenada analysed cardiovascular risk factors, such as high blood pressure, and compared them to the exercise habits of 4,086 American adults – using data from the 2005-2006 National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey.

The study looked at the relationship of two distinct exercise strands – static (strength training) and/or dynamic activities (such as running). Researchers found that engaging in either type of activity was associated with 30 to 70 per cent lower rates of cardiovascular disease risk factors – but that associations were strongest for static activity.

“Static activity appeared more beneficial than dynamic,” said Maia P. Smith from St. George’s University.

Holistic wellness concept
FoodWell to open first site

A new wellness concept, mixing exercise classes with healthy food, is preparing to launch its first site in Manchester. FoodWell will offer group fitness classes – such as yoga, pilates and TRX – in combination with a ‘mindful restaurant’ and a series of workshops on healthy living options.

The company will take over a 9,000sq ft site at the mixed-use district New Bailey, close to the Spinningfields area of the city. The site will be split into several sections, with each “sector” dedicated to an aspect of a healthy lifestyle. The exercise studio – which will be operated by wellness platform Hero under its Rejuvenate concept – will have a capacity for up to 30 people.

“We’re purposely not conforming to the traditional health club or restaurant sector, but instead creating something new,” said Christian Coates, CEO of FoodWell. More: http://lei.sr/M2b8W

Gympass secures exclusive deal with Everyone Active

Corporate fitness sales specialist Gympass has signed an exclusive three-year deal with leisure operator Everyone Active.

The deal will see Gympass offer memberships to Everyone Active centres as a company-wide corporate benefit to its clients – which include companies such as Rolls Royce and Thames Water.

The memberships will be subsidised by the employers by 50 per cent or more. The deal is estimated to bring 10,000 new members to the 68 Everyone Active centres in the South East region.

“Gympass is unique as all their attention is focused on inactive employees, not the people who are already using a gym, so us working with them will not negatively affect our existing membership.”

Active Nation completes revamp of Birchwood leisure centre

Leisure operator Active Nation has completed a £1.5m revamp of its Active Nation Birchwood centre in Lincolnshire.

The centre has been transformed from an outdated, underused facility to a community wellbeing hub. The 12-month revamp was completed in partnership with The City of Lincoln Council.

Facilities now include a health club with an 80-station gym floor, a Les Mills immersive indoor cycling studio – one of only seven in the UK – and group exercise studio.

Active Training Award winners revealed

Winners of this year’s Active Training Awards have been revealed at a gala event in Birmingham.
Organised by ukactive and the Chartered Institute for the Management of Sport and Physical Activity (CIMSPA), the Active Training Awards recognise employers and training providers in the physical activity sector for their workforce development.
This year’s awards saw eight winners selected from a broader spectrum of employers than ever before – from traditional fitness markets to community operations and public health programmes.
Among the winners were Future Fit Training, which picked up the award for ‘best innovation’ for its Pro Zone online training platform, which allows fitness professionals to build their own skills training programme.
Everyone Active picked up the prestigious ‘employer of the year’ award, while London-based Jubilee Hall Trust was named ‘small employer of the year’.
“As service quality and innovation rises year on year in our sector, this year’s award winners continue to raise the bar with their work,” said Tara Dillon, CIMSPA chief executive.

'Technology' as Legend plans to make data available

Legend Club Management Systems will enable all of its customers to have the ability to open their data for collaboration with third parties.
The announcement is an industry first and is seen as a landmark moment for the Open Active collaboration, funded by Sport England and led by the Open Data Institute (ODI). OpenActive is an initiative designed to help people in England get active using open data.
One of its aims is to make physical activity opportunities easier for people to discover, by improving access to information online and offline.
Sean Maguire, managing director of Legend, said: “We live in an era of rapid change where operators cannot be sure where the next innovation will come from with the potential to grow their business. We want to make collaboration a matter of business strategy and choice.”

NEW OPENING

Oxygen Freejumping comes to London’s O2

The newest venue of Oxygen Freejumping has opened at the O2 Arena in London, UK. Implemented by zynk Design and Lunar Trampolines, the flagship 30,000 sq ft (2,787 sq m) indoor park features over 150 trampolines, dodgeball and volleyball courts, a ninja warrior course, and a foam pit.

Other attractions include a six-metre-high suspension ropes course and interactive ‘Reaction Walls’.

Speaking on the launch, Dave Stalker, CEO of Oxygen Freejumping said, “The O2 is a global entertainment destination so to open an Oxygen site here is an exciting time for the brand. zynk has been our design partner from day one and played a crucial part in creating our unique customer experience.”

Stavros Theodoulous, managing director at zynk Design added: “It is great to see the Oxygen brand evolve to become a complete family entertainment centre.

“At the beginning stages of Oxygen’s roll-out, we took the time to future-proof the brand, and that is paying dividends now as it continues to create a fresh and exciting consumer experience, even when applied to a huge venue like the O2.”

The project, which has been in development since 2014, is Oxygen and zynk’s eighth collaboration.

EXPANSION

Kia Oval expansion gets green light

Surrey County Cricket Club (CCC) has received full planning permission for the redevelopment of its Kia Oval ground, which will increase the venue’s capacity to 28,000.

The project will see a new three-tier stand built in between the existing Micky Stewart Members’ Pavilion and the Peter May Stand, which will introduce a range of new facilities – from conference spaces to hospitality areas.

Construction on the stand, designed by architects Rolfe Judd, will begin in October 2019, following the conclusion of the cricket season.

Work will be phased over 18 months and is due to be completed by the start of the 2021 season.

“As well as the extra seats, the project will hugely improve our events facilities, a side of our business that has multiplied many times over in recent years,” said Surrey CEO Richard Gould.

The scheme will encourage fathers to play a greater role in supporting their daughters to develop physical confidence.

Women in Sport has teamed up with the Fatherhood Institute, Fulham Football Club and the English Football League Trust to help fathers and daughters from low income families in London get physically active.

The partnership has received £118,301 of National Lottery funding from Sport England for a project which will encourage fathers to play a greater role in supporting their daughters to develop physical confidence and competence.

Designed to involve girls aged between five and 11, the programme will replicate a concept which was first designed by the University of Newcastle in Australia.

Research by the university found that fathers are less involved with their daughters than mothers. They also tend to spend less time with daughters than sons and don’t acknowledge their role in fostering their daughters’ physical activity habits.

NEW BUILD

Warwick University sports centre prepares for launch

The University of Warwick has released an in-depth fly-through video of its soon-to-be-completed sports and wellness hub in Coventry, UK.

Set to become one of the largest recreational and fitness facilities in Britain, the David Morley-designed complex will span 16,684 sq ft (1,550 sq m) and feature a 12-court sports hall and 230-station gym, as well as pools, indoor climbing walls, fitness suites, studio spaces, and outdoor sports pitches.

The £49m project, which ties in with Coventry’s tenure as the 2019 European City of Sport, is also part of the university’s push to become the “most physically active campus” in the UK by 2020.

Peter Owen, MD of Willmott Dixon in the Midlands, said: “This is a fantastic project to be part of, creating cutting-edge sporting facilities for the community at The University of Warwick.”

The facility is set to open next year ahead of the Europe Corporate Games, taking place in Coventry in August 2019.

INNOVATION

Loughborough opens athletes’ hotel

The Elite Athlete Centre and Hotel (EAC) – the first sports-centric venue of its kind in the UK – has opened as part of the sports campus at Loughborough University.

Designed by David Morley Architects and developed in partnership with UK Sport, Sport England, the English Institute of Sport, and Imago Venues, the 44-bedroom, fitness-focused hotel also includes 20 ‘high-altitude rooms’.

These unique chambers simulate the low-oxygen atmospheric conditions – such as the transalpine mountains – and accelerate the production of performance-enhancing red blood cells, allowing athletes to literally strengthen their muscles during their sleep following training.

Guests staying at the EAC also have access to nutritionist-approved meals and dining stations and are free to make use of the university’s 50-metre swimming pool, ball courts, and fitness studios.

Speaking on the hotel’s inauguration, Loughborough University’s vice-chancellor, Robert Allison, said: “The new facility offers something unique within the UK. “It will undoubtedly help us to reinforce our position as the country’s leading university for sport.”

Urban Massage rebrands and expands

On-demand massage service, Urban Massage, has announced that it will expand its service by introducing a new range of wellness treatments and services.

The company, which operates in several cities across the UK, as well as Paris, is now giving its customers the option to book nail, skin and osteopathy treatments with vetted therapists and GOSCP- regulated osteopaths. It will continue to offer users the same app-based experience enabling them to book treatments within just an hour’s notice.

As part of the expansion, the London-based company will also undergo a rebranding exercise, becoming known as Urban, to reflect its new offering.

Speaking to TechCrunch, Urban’s founder Jack Tang said the company’s move into wellness forms the first phase of a wider strategy that aims to establish the app as Europe’s premier platform for holistic wellness.

“Wellness is the key topic now. People are moving away from seeking pampering indulgences into a really understated wellness and self-care philosophy.”

New edition of hydro spa standards published

The Global Wellness Institute has released the third edition of the Guide to Hydrothermal Spa & Wellness Development Standards. The popular book, which has been expanded by 50 pages, is a primer for designing and building thermal experiences and wet areas at commercial properties or in residential homes.

Created for spa owners, operators and consultants as well as designers, architects and builders, the guide was written to help readers understand these complex areas and guide them as they embark on building a hydrothermal area of any size. It covers everything from project planning to building and construction considerations – including recommended standards and materials – and clearly defines the functions and benefits of all common thermal bathing and wet areas.

Susan Cain to deliver opening keynote at 2019 ISPA event

New York Times best-selling author and top TED Talk speaker Susan Cain will be the opening keynote speaker at the 2019 ISPA Conference & Expo taking place 11-13 September 2019 in Las Vegas, US. The event’s theme, ‘Evolve’, will highlight the growth of the industry and the positive road that lies ahead.

Cain is the author of Quiet: The Power of Introverts in a World That Can’t Stop Talking and Quiet Power: The Secret Strengths of Introverts. Her first book has been translated into forty languages and is in its sixth year on the New York Times best-seller list. It was also named #1 best book of the year by Fast Company magazine, which also named Cain one of its ‘Most Creative People in Business’. With her books, Cain explains how society undervalues introverts and what we lose by doing so.

“We are honoured to welcome Susan Cain as our opening keynote speaker at the 2019 ISPA Conference & Expo,” said ISPA president Lynne McNees. More: http://lei.sr/d7K3z

Good Spa Guide names best UK spas

Winners of this year’s Good Spa Guide Awards were announced on 13 November at a gala dinner at the SpaLife Conference in Birmingham, UK.

The awards, designed to recognise excellence in the UK spa industry, include two categories: The Regional Awards and the Reader’s Choice National Awards, with nine winners selected in each.

Winners of the national awards were voted for by more than 60,000 spa-goers, while the regional winners were handpicked by specially-selected ‘Spa Spies’, who reviewed more than 200 spas and treatments to find the best in the UK. London’s Lanesborough Club & Spa was named Best Spa in London, while The Spa in Gleneagles was once again named Best Spa in Scotland. ESPA at Lucknam Park in Wiltshire took home Best Spa in the South West and South Wales, and Lancashire’s The Woodland Spa was named Best Spa in the North West and Wales.

NEW OPENING

‘Wellness hotel’ for £200m leisure hub

A wellness hotel is being planned for the ambitious Wellness and Life Science Village project at Delta Lakes in Llanelli, Wales – described as one of the first developments of its kind in the world.

Plans have now been revealed for the £200m leisure hub, including a "cutting-edge" leisure centre.

The hotel will be accompanied by a wellness hub, housing a leisure centre and an aquatic centre with a 25m swimming pool, splash pool and learner pool.

There will also be sports facilities, a wellness spa, a primary care centre and landscaped spaces for walking and cycling, as well as a children’s play area and spaces for outdoor performing arts.

Exact details for the hotel are to be confirmed, but the Wellness Hub element of the Village is anticipated to be operational in 2021, with overall project completion earmarked for 2023.

An outline planning application for the development will be considered for approval in coming months, with construction on site due to start in 2019.

The project is being led by Carmarthenshire County Council, in partnership with Swansea University and Sterling Health.

Lodore Falls Hotel opens £10m destination spa

Lodore Falls Hotel & Spa in the Lake District, UK, has opened a new destination spa following a £10m redevelopment.

Called The Falls Spa, the state-of-the-art Scandi-inspired retreat was designed by architects Unwin Jones Partnership with interiors created by Greyline Design, while Rigo Spa was responsible for the wet areas.

Designed to ‘harness the healing powers of nature’, the facilities include five treatment rooms and a fitness suite, as well as a Finnish sauna, a four-person mud rasul, ice fountain and four thermal suites including: a herbal sauna, a salt steam room, aroma steam room and laconium.

The hotel has also introduced 18 ‘Spa Suites’, designed to transform the hotel into a spa destination.

UKinbound backs May’s Brexit deal

UKinbound has publicly backed the government’s much-maligned Brexit deal, saying that it would offer some measure of stability by avoiding a “disastrous no-deal” exit.

The trade association, which represents around 400 UK tourism businesses, has urged MPs to “get behind the deal”.

“The Brexit Withdrawal Agreement provides some reassurance for our members that progress is being made about the shape of our future relationship with the EU, which we welcome,” said UKinbound chair Mark McVay.

“However, some of the big issues that will ensure the continued success of our industry remain unanswered, such as the arrangements for migrant workers, which our industry heavily relies on, post the transition period.

“We would nonetheless urge parliamentarians to get behind this deal, as a no deal Brexit would have disastrous consequences for our industry.

Until a deal is confirmed businesses need to continue preparing for all eventualities.”

Prime Minister Theresa May has claimed there is “strong support from the business” for her deal – a view she attempted to strengthen by releasing supportive statements from three companies, Diageo, the London Stock Exchange and Royal Mail.

UNWTO focuses on tech investment at WTM

The World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) hosted this year’s Minister’s Summit at the World Travel Market (WTM) in London on 6 November 2018 on the topic of Investment in Tourism Technology.

Continuing the conversation on innovation and digital transformation in tourism, which began at the celebrations for World Tourism Day 2018 – on 27 September – in Budapest, the organisation invited a panel of private investors to talk about investment in tourism technology. It then followed this up with the ministerial segment that linked both the public and private sectors to ensure that digital transformation enhances inclusion, sustainability and competitiveness.

Both panels were moderated by CNN’s business correspondent Richard Quest, anchor of Quest Means Business and focussed on innovative ideas and partnerships that can boost investment.

The UK is set to leave the European Union in March 2019

“We would urge MPs to get behind this deal

Mark McVay
Brexit has certainly taken over the front page of every newspaper. It is likely to remain there for the next few months too, as the government tries to get the Withdrawal Agreement through Parliament and negotiations start in earnest on the UK’s future relationship with the EU.

Deep dissatisfaction with the agreement has been expressed by opposition leaders, the DUP – which has made their point by voting against the government on parts of the Finance Bill – and members of Conservative Party, who have even tried to mount a coup.

Danger zone
The mounting concern is that if the Withdrawal Agreement is voted down by Parliament and the UK will crash out of the EU on 29 March 2019 – causing chaos for businesses and individuals.

The prospects for the tourism industry look particularly grim, with two thirds of our overseas visitors coming from the EU. A “no deal” would end a multitude of agreements that facilitate the movement of visitors to and from Europe and ports of entry, such as Dover, would become gridlocked under such a scenario.

Yet, this apocalyptic view of the future is very unlikely to happen for a number of good reasons. First, if the Prime Minister is able to get any Withdrawal Agreement through Parliament, then we will enter a transition period of around two years during which nothing much will actually change. This will give businesses time to assess the impacts that UK’s new relationship with Europe will have on their operations and make the necessary changes.

The end game
Even if the deal is not passed, this does not automatically mean that the UK will crash out of Europe. The vast majority of MPs from across all parties recognise the damage that this would cause and have said that they will work to make sure that it doesn’t happen. There are a number of ways of doing this from cross-party agreements through to a People’s vote.

And even if this didn’t work and the UK does leave the EU without a deal on 29th March, it is important to remember this will not impact the UK’s long-haul markets which generate over 50 per cent of the UK’s inbound revenue and that 80 per cent of tourism revenue in the UK is generated by domestic visitors. Both of which will be unaffected by Brexit.

This is not to say that individual businesses focused on the EU market would not be severely impacted. They certainly will. But overall, the UK tourism industry is better placed than many other industries in the unlikely event that we crash out of Europe.

Awards

Whisky experiences among ASVA winners

The Scotch Whisky Experience and the Isle of Arran Distillery and Visitor Centre have been given top awards by the Association of Scottish Visitor Attractions (ASVA) at its annual conference.

Winning the top prize in the marketing category, the Scotch Whisky Experience in Edinburgh, pipped runners-up Edinburgh Dungeon and its ‘Braveheart’s Revenge’ campaign and Highland Wildlife Park’s #weehamish Campaign to the title.

Meanwhile, the Isle of Arran Distillery and Visitor Centre won the Best Visitor Experience award, beating runners-up the Clydeside Distillery and the Famous Grouse Experience.

Caitlin Carrick, security and visitor services duty manager at National Galleries of Scotland, won the Rising Star award, recognising her contribution to National Galleries of Scotland and the wider Scottish tourism industry. The Rising Star runners-up were Joseph Sellors, monument manager at Dumbarton Castle, and Rosie Willmot, digital marketing manager at the Scotch Whisky Experience.

ASVA chair Douglas Walker said: “Our award winners are all setting a fantastic example by providing a truly world-class visitor experience and bringing the ‘wow’ factor to Scottish tourism.”

BRAND ATTRACTIONS

Tennent’s opens UK’s biggest beer attraction

Beer brand Tennent’s Lager has opened a new immersive visitor attraction this month that will trace the history of the Wellpark brewery – where the beer is made – from the 1500s to the present day.

Located in the East End of Glasgow, Wellpark is the city’s oldest brewery and the new visitor centre has artefacts on display that date back to 1556 when brewing was first carried out on the site.

Marketed as the UK’s biggest beer-themed attraction, the centre’s main exhibition, the Tennent’s Story, centres on the story of founder Hugh Tennent.

“Our award winners are all setting a fantastic example”
Douglas Walker

“Tennent’s Story is at the heart of Glasgow’s history and with this significant company investment at our home at Wellpark, we are bringing the story to life – bigger and better than we ever have before, as we showcase the brewery, the beer and the brand,” said Alan McGarrie, group brand director for Tennent’s Lager.

Harris Museum and Gallery to undergo £10.7m revamp

The Harris Museum in Preston, UK is to merge its museum, art gallery and library as part of plans to “revolutionise” the regional attraction’s visitor experience.

According to Tim Joel, the museum’s deputy head of culture, the creation of an unsegregated space will mean visitors can “come on a journey of discovery throughout the building rather than being in the bitty pockets as they are at the moment”.

“People are wanting us to bring our collections together more cohesively. It’s about using our spaces more creatively and innovatively so that we can display more of our collection,” Joel added.

Bosses at the Harris hope to increase visitor numbers by 100,000 each year to 460,000 through the project and exhibit objects that have not previously been displayed at the museum.

Keltbray moves into Kent theme park project

The proposed theme park project in Kent, England – formerly called the London Paramount Entertainment Resort, until the Hollywood film studio pulled out – has had a £25m cash injection via a deal with construction firm Keltbray.

The financiers behind London Resort Company Holdings (LRCH), the firm behind the project, have set up a joint venture with the construction giant LR Keltbray JV Holdings.

The project has been in the plans for some years now and construction was due to begin in October 2016, but LRCH is yet to submit a planning application for the theme park.

If built, it will sit on the Swanscombe peninsula near Ebbsfleet International Station in Kent and its price tag has risen from the reported £3.5bn to £5bn.

LRCH chair and Conservative MP Steve Norris said: “Over the next five years, this project will become one of the largest construction projects in the UK.”

National Gallery opens pop-ups in Asia

London’s National Gallery has revealed plans to open a series of pop-up “gallery cafés” across Asia, mixing famous pieces of art with a food and beverage offer.

To be operated under its Delicious Art brand, the outlets will “celebrate the excellence of high-quality food and drink and the magnificence of the gallery’s paintings”, selling fine wines, gins, chocolate and other consumables.

The first Delicious Art site is set to open in Seoul, South Korea, which will feature replica pieces from artists including Degas, Monet and Van Gogh.

A new nation-wide campaign looks to get more disabled people physically active by making sport and fitness activities more accessible.

Led by Sport England, ukactive and a number of leading disability organisations, the Everyone Can initiative aims to change perceptions around disabled people’s participation in physical activity and support the sector to become more inclusive. As part of the drive, ukactive has this month launched a series of focus groups with disability champions across a number of sectors – including retail, transport, music and hospitality – exploring how to improve services for disabled people who want to undertake more physical activity.

The findings from the groups will feed into a new report as part of the Everyone Can programme. The report will chart the current barriers for disabled people to being active, and set out a series of recommendations to improve
The campaign looks to remove barriers and make sport and fitness activities more accessible.

We know that disabled people are less active than non-disabled people. This is not good enough.

Adam Blaze, Sport England’s strategic lead for disability said: “It is great to see these focus groups being launched. “It is critical that the changes that are needed in the sport and physical activity sector are driven by the experiences and opinions of disabled people.

“We know that disabled people are less active than non-disabled people. This is not good enough and is something we are addressing through our Towards an Active Nation strategy. The Everyone Can programme will help the physical activity sector create a better, more attractive and accessible offer for disabled people.”

Among several focus groups will be a session with disability groups Activity Alliance, Alzheimer’s Society, Sport for Confidence, Aspire, Cystic Fibrosis Trust, Mind and UK Deaf Sport, helping to establish a clearer picture of the current physical activity environment for disabled people.
It’s easy to teach someone the skills they need, it just takes time and practice,” says Alan Chambers MBE, a former Royal Marine turned extreme explorer. “What’s more difficult is to instill passion in a person if they join the project for the wrong reasons. If they don’t commit on day one, you won’t get the extra you need when things go wrong.”

Chambers recently addressed a captivated audience at the SIBEC Europe event, which this year was held in Marrakech, Morocco. His keynote presentation, which opened proceedings on day one of the conference, detailed his polar expedition from Canada to the Geographic North Pole, leading the first British team to complete the journey without any support services. The 672 nautical mile walk on ice lasted a gruelling 70 days.

Suffering near starvation, with a dwindling fuel supply and experiencing the worst polar weather conditions recorded in 100 years, Alan’s team achieved what many said was impossible. It demanded an extraordinary level of commitment, focus and teamwork, for which Alan was awarded an MBE.

Many SIBEC delegates reported that they took away many key learnings from Alan’s account of the challenge. Here are five key learnings which can be applied to any business.

■ Attitude over experience wins. A member of your team may have all the right skills, but if they don’t have the right attitude or passion for the project, they’ll never achieve what they set out to do. The wrong mindset has the potential to break a team, not just the individual.

■ The importance of meticulous planning should never be underestimated. Being aware of all the variables and scenario planning for every eventuality prepares your team’s mindset to work with the unexpected.

■ Break down one big project into several mini projects. This makes the challenge facing you both manageable and achievable, while maintaining your team’s motivation as they succeed through the phases.

■ Question conventional thinking. Don’t keep doing the same things, in the same way and expect different results. It’s important to keep thinking, keep innovating and making changes, no matter how small, in order to get the desired result.

■ Make the time to talk. Alan coined this as the term “tent time”, where he would get his team together to talk and work collaboratively through any difficulties to find solutions. He also took the time to talk to everyone individually to increase his understanding, so he could effectively support them through the challenge.

We’re looking for an ambitious, high energy General Manager to lead our flagship Plymouth climbing centre as we take centre stage in one of the UK’s fastest growing lifestyle sports in the first PE backed climbing wall in the UK with significant rollout plans.

The Climbing Hangar is a chain of indoor bouldering walls with sites in Liverpool, London and Plymouth with three more due to open in 2019 and four more in 2020 creating significant opportunities for the right candidate to grow with us.

Our customers are from 4 to 70, they love coffee, beer and pizza, chatting, training, yoga, fun events with music and theatre too. Diverse, fun and insatiably curious, our community is an outpost of togetherness where everyone feels connected and part of something bigger.

If you’re passionate about creating opportunities for people to come together in an atmosphere that is obsessive about exceptional service, professionalism, employee engagement and lots of fun, we’re very keen to hear from you.

We are open every day supporting our vibrant community with great climbing, great experiences and great quality, locally sourced food and drink in a welcoming, relaxed environment.

The position of General Manager is not for the faint-hearted. You’ll be commercially astute, customer-focused and full of ideas to evolve the site and our company whilst supporting your friendly, passionate crew.

The UK climbing marketing is growing rapidly, almost entirely driven by bouldering. With no clear market leader, our plans for the business put us in a great position to take up that position and our General Managers are absolutely key to our success.

We love what climbing is; the travel, the mental challenge, physicality but at least as much, the social side, craft beers, great coffee and good food!

Who is our perfect person?

- Our vision is to ‘help people feel good about themselves and each other through their shared experience of climbing’ – you’ll be responsible for ensuring the Hangar has a positive impact on people’s lives and therefore driving our commercial success. Hangar General Managers have a natural gift for hospitality and inspirational leadership demonstrated through passion, their example and their commitment.
- General managers are masters of many trades with a tireless focus on the detail. You already understand why incredible coffee and cake are as important as delivering incredible climbing. Faultless service and immaculate facilities are your baseline expectations, and little gives you more joy than seeing your team and customers grow and succeed under your guidance.
- A calm and systematic individual with experience of managing costs, maximising revenues and a test and learn approach to innovation.

Benefits

- Salary range £28-33k depending on experience and a highly achievable 20% bonus
- Trips abroad
- A flexible work week where possible
- General Manager Training includes route setting and climbing coaching qualifications
- Fantastic opportunity for advancement and promotion for the right candidate.
- The best staff party in indoor climbing
- Trade price equipment and clothing
- Funded training and qualifications

To apply, please send your CV and covering letter.

We looking for an experienced and talented Head of Technical Operations and an experienced and high calibre Technician to strengthen the Technical team as the show moves into its fourth season and we embark on our next exciting chapter.

HEAD OF TECHNICAL OPERATIONS
The Head of Technical Operations role offers the successful candidate the opportunity to be involved in an inspiring, ambitious and unique project, working in a fast-moving, often unpredictable, high-octane environment that accompanies the production of a world-class show. Reporting to the Executive Committee, you will work at an operational level to plan and supervise the construction of new attractions as well as leading and delivering the technical operations of the show and site.

The Head of Technical Operations sets up, directs and runs Kynren with a passionate team that includes volunteers and a small team of employed Technicians. As we plan future shows, they will be run with a team of paid Technicians as part of season long operations outside of Kynren nights.

You will be called upon to deal with a wide range of technical issues and will have a strong working knowledge of techniques, methods and procedures of show production gained in a visitor attraction, theatrical or outside broadcast environment.

TECHNICIAN
As a Technician you will help us develop our ideas and realise our creative vision. You will install, operate and maintain all of our show systems alongside providing training, coaching and support for our volunteer technical teams.

Our base is in Bishop Auckland in picturesque County Durham. We’re 25 minutes from both Durham and Darlington mainline stations with Newcastle, Teesdale, Weardale and the Yorkshire Dales within commuting distance. It’s a great place to live and work.
