Six Senses opens first three lodges in Bhutan resort

Located in the colourful Himalayan Kingdom of Bhutan, famous for its Gross National Happiness (GNH) philosophy, Six Senses Bhutan has opened its first three lodges in Thimphu, Punakha and Paro.

The lodges combine the brand's commitment to wellness, sustainability and out-of-the-ordinary experiences with the country's rich culture, warm hospitality and omni-present spirituality.

Comprised of five lodges spread over the west and central valleys of the remote Himalayan kingdom, Six Senses Bhutan offers guests an adventure combined with uplifting experiences.

From sunrise meditations and holistic spa treatments, to private astrology readings and butter lamp lighting ceremonies, to hikes and treks through pristine forests, the aim is to leave enriched and reconnected.

Punakha lodge in Six Senses Bhutan offers views over the rice paddies

The additional two lodges will be located in Gangtey and Bumthang, and the idea is for guests to embark on a 'Six Senses Journey' across the key valleys of Bhutan. Each location will have its own Spa & Wellness Centre with extensive facilities and treatments reflecting the valley in which they are set. Therapies range from hot stone baths in Thimphu and Bumthang to a pyramid meditation room and swedana treatment at Gangtey, to a dip in the heated outdoor pool at Punakha or treatment in a spa room overlooking the ruins in Paro.

The focus on wellbeing is emphasised with programmes that include Six Senses Integrated Wellness in Punakha to start with, Sleep With Six Senses and Eat With Six Senses.

Each location has been designed to fully immerse travellers into the local culture. The lodges, which vary in style, showcase the diversity and special character of each valley.

Sustainability lives at the foundation of Six Senses Bhutan and is reflected through active management of energy, water, waste, purchasing and chemical usage.

Lux Resort opens in the Maldives

Lux Resorts & Hotels has unveiled its latest Maldivian opening, Lux North Male Atoll, which includes 67 contemporary white-washed double-storey penthouses and a vibrant South Beach aesthetic.

Set back from the resort, the translucent overwater Lux Me Spa features a menu where the healing power of touch, water therapy, and breath-work come into play. The Lux Me Spa includes five overwater spa treatment villas, one overwater beauty salon with a hairdresser, a common relaxation area, Lux Me Spa boutique, sauna, fitness centre, rooftop yoga, a spa for children and yoga classes for children.

The signature wellness experience, Celebration of Life, has been inspired by the graceful dolphins that populate the waters of the Maldives. It begins with techniques for conscious breathing to soothe the nervous system, followed by a flow yoga or aqua stretch session.

The Lux Me Spa is set back from the resort in overwater treatment villas

Aqua stretch sessions use the buoyancy of water to allow limbs and muscles to move in ways that aren't usually achievable, easing stiffness and tension. Combined with a Shiatsu-style pressure point massage, the treatment aims to realign the body, and is concluded with an aromatherapy scalp or grounding foot massage. The resort has been styled by Singaporean design house Miaja, which took inspiration from the clean lines of a luxury yacht.

Japanese skincare comes to Paris

Lenor Japan will open its first beauty salon, EN, this spring in the Odéon district of Paris.

EN will offer customised facial treatments from its range of about 100 products and essences, all of which are prepared by hand.

After a personalised skin consultation, the salon will offer three different treatment options: a 45-, 60-, or 80-minute course. In addition, it will be possible to add optional foot and body massages.

Every product applied at EN is adapted to the customer's specific skin.

After an in-depth skin consultation, the staff will recommend and select the most suitable ingredients to create the best blends for each customer.

Ingredients include extracts of organically grown plants, scrubs from precious rock salts, and powders from Japanese tea leaves.

EN uses Oriental aesthetic philosophy to pinpoint reasons for unhealthy skin, including posture, habits or diet, and marries traditional French creams with Oriental massage techniques similar to Shiatsu.

EN offers customised facial treatments made from 100 essences

"I decided to open our first beauty salon in Paris rather than in Tokyo because this, to me, is the rightful beauty capital," said Jun Matsuoka, president of Lenor Japan. "I hope that this salon will be the first of many."

Founded in 1999, Lenor Japan celebrated its 20th anniversary in January. The company headquarters are located in Tokyo.

Among the company's brands, EN is the first that has been established overseas. If the concept succeeds in Paris, the company aims to launch the brand in other markets.

The Oxygen Pod offers up to 27 per cent concentrated oxygen levels and seats six guests

Rudding Park adds Oxygen Pod to Roof Top Spa

Rudding Park Hotel and Spa in Harrogate, UK, has expanded its Roof Top Spa offering with the addition of an Oxygen Pod. Seating six guests, the Oxygen Pod offers up to 27 per cent concentrated oxygen levels, six per cent more than the levels found in dry air, and is designed to strengthen the immune system as well as reduce the appearance of ageing.

Based on NASA technology, the Oxygen Pod enables the body to absorb higher levels of oxygen which can help restore function to damaged cells and organs.

In addition to the increased oxygen levels, negatively charged ions purify the air and stimulate the metabolism, while dry salt inhalation aids the respiratory system, promotes healthier skin and sounder sleep. Details: http://lei.sr/W9s4D_S

Biophilic spa concept scoops award

French ecological architect Vincent Callebaut has won a competition to redesign ancient thermal baths in the Savoyard town of Aix-les-Bains, France. Dubbed "Ecume des Ondes" (Foam of Waves), Callebaut's proposal features a many-storied, heavily foliated structure with waveform green terraces.

Other elements of the spa centre include a retail galleria dedicated to wellbeing, a rooftop restaurant with an aquaponic urban farm, and a viewing centre for the site's Roman ruins, as well as a number of residential sky villas.

The residences – according to Callebaut – will also be "covered with more than 25,000 plants, shrubs, and endemic trees", all producing "more energy" than they consume.

"It's about both preserving the best of each identifiable era to build the

The thermal baths – once a leisure playground for Europe's elite in the Belle Époque period – have been out of commission since 2008.

GETTING SOCIAL with FITNESS

Noha Khalil of The Wellness discusses how gym and spa elements are increasingly coming together through design to deliver outstanding fitness concepts

Noha says clubs should feel 'comfortable and happy'

When it comes to design and functionality, the lines between fitness and wellness concepts, between gyms and spas, are increasingly overlapping. Fitness trends are evolving very fast globally, and we at

The Wellness are focused on integrating these trends within the hospitality industry," says architect and interior designer Noha Khalil.

"Many investors are looking for new concepts that reach out to a bigger audience. To just have a gym or a spa separately is not aligned with guest expectations nowadays. At The Wellness, we thrive when working within that overlapped space as we can constantly push the boundaries of what a health club is and what it will be in the future."

Based in Dubai and Hong Kong, The Wellness is a full-service wellness specialist that has been delivering design driven solutions in the Middle East, Asia and globally for 30 years.

With many completed wellness focused projects in its portfolio, Noha says the company is also focused

The Wellness believes that workout spaces should be interactive to encourage physical and mental equity on turning gyms into social workout spaces - whether within a five-star hotel facility or a standalone site.

"Fitness has to be so much more than just equipment. It's not just for physical strength but wellness as lifestyle. It's important to focus on the word wellness, as this will have different interpretations for different individuals. We're keen to make sure the outcome will not only be better physical condition, but enhanced mental balance too.

"This requires a deep understanding of the users' needs and the right elements to achieve the ultimate performance on all levels of wellbeing.

Comfort, health and happiness

"Comfort, Health and Happiness are the key criteria used in our design direction. Comfort starts with going through the assessment process, in order for users to know themselves, their aims and to feel comfortable in the workout space.

"Health means serving the right nutrition plan to the guest to support and boost their immune system. It's no secret that the major element of a healthy body is the food eaten alongside a fitness regime.

"If comfort and health are present, this will enable higher performance, ultimate focus, goals to be achieved and a robust rebuilding process. All this works to create a happy social workout space."

"This is where The Wellness excels. Our social workout spaces are obviously not only about the equipment. Recovery in all its forms, whether active or passive, is essential to the experience.

"A well-designed changing facility including thermal experiences such as infrared sauna, steam room, and cold therapies are part of this recovery. Hot and cold therapies after exercise enhance blood circulation and help combat muscles strains. That's just one of the many ways to effectively integrate wellness into fitness." ●

McCarthy also hosts a blog about holistic wellbeing called Psychology of Wellbeing, and is the chair of the Digital Wellness Initiative for the Global Wellness Institute.

Throughout his career, McCarthy has been a pioneer in innovative spa concepts, most notably the benefits of technology-free areas within the spa. In 2016, Mandarin Oriental, with McCarthy's direction, launched their Digital Wellness initiative. This programme is designed to help guests find new ways to manage their relationship with technology and the stress that can come with a constantly connected digital lifestyle.

"For me, the spa industry is and always has been about taking care of other people. This is the true essence of hospitality," said McCarthy. "I couldn't be more honoured, humbled and excited to receive this recognition from ISPA, an organisation that has been by my side through many chapters of my career."

McCarthy has also served on the ISPA board of directors, including his role as vice chair in 2009, and has helped create several ISPA textbooks. The ISPA Visionary Award is presented each year to someone in the spa industry who has made significant contributions to both the definition and positive movement of health and wellness over the lifetime of their career.

Chiva-Som's renovation continues

Chiva-Som International Health Resort is set to embark on the fourth and final stage of its renovation programme, from 1 May to 31 October of this year. This fourth stage will see enhancements to the Health & Wellness areas, including all spa facilities and treatment suites, the Bathing Pavilion, Niranlada Medi-Spa, and the resort's seaside restaurant, the Taste of Siam. Previous stages comprised a complete overhaul of the accommodation and many of the other facilities.

The Health & Wellness area will be completely refreshed to offer more light and air, providing a more generous guest waiting area and replacing the reception desk with attractive, space efficient counters. Parquet flooring will guide the eye into the refreshed space, while the consultation room used for mind, body, and spirit assessments will be renovated with the guest experience in mind.

This will be supplemented by refined Spa & Physio treatment rooms, hydrotherapy suite and flotation chamber. All will be re-imagined

The fourth and final stage of the renovation will see enhancements to Chiva-Som's Health & Wellness areas, including spa facilities with Chiva-Som's new signature interiors: teak, Thai silk, and bamboo are complemented by a light colour palette of natural hues to create a contemporary, comfortable and calming environment. The Bathing Pavilion, set around the indoor pool that's used both individually and for group sessions, will be redesigned to incorporate a sun bed area at one end under a glass roof. There will also be a new hydro pool that will deliver new hydrotherapy functions; alongside this the latest steam room equipment plus a larger private changing room.
